Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Mark were in Adrian last night looking over the Pattie McKinley Players which are at the Croswell all this week. Mr. Mark has been very careful about booking only the very best possible to obtain in the line of attractions coming to Tecumseh and after hearing several reports regarding the McKinley Players decided to see them also to try and book them for Tecumseh. After seeing them in "The Gamblers" by Chas. Kline, author of "The Third Degree and "The Lion and Mouse" and is fully as strong a play as Kline's other popular plays, last night Mr. Mark says they are absolutely the best company he has ever seen in a stock organization, they must not be considered an average stock company but rank with many of the higher priced one nighters.

It is not definately known whether Tecumseh can land the company or not but should they be able to do so they will play here either next week or the week following.

It has been a long time since a stock company played Tecumseh as Mr. Mark several years ago decided to play nothing but the high class attractions but if the McKinley Players come here patrons of the Bradley can look forward to a week of excellent amusements. The company is presenting a strong line of attractions including "The Squaw Man"; "Bought and Paid For"; the musical show "Alma, Where Do you Live"; etc.

Whooping Cough

"About a year ago my three boys had whooping cough and I found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the only one that would relieve their coughing and whooping spells. I continued this treatment and was surprised to find that it cured the disease in a very short time," writes Mrs. Archie Dalrymple, Crooksville, Ohio. For sale by all dealers. adv

Chamberlain's Liniment

This preparation is intended especially for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and like ailments. It is a favorite with people who are well acquainted with its splendid qualities. Mrs. Charles Tanner, Wabash, Ind., says of it, "I have found Chamberlain's Liniment the best thing for lame back and sprains I have ever used. It works like a charm and relieves pain and soreness. It has been used by others of my family as well as myself for upwards of twenty years" 25 and 50 cent bottles. For sale by all dealers. adv

SCHWAB GETS RIFLE ORDER

Russia Is Short of Boots—Wants 6,000,000 Pairs.

Paris, May 17.—It is understood that Charles M. Schwab has received heavy French orders for Le Bel rifles which presumably he will sublet to small arms companies, as the Bethlehem company does not manufacture small arms.

The Russians are short of boots. They are getting some from Japan, and a contract for 6,000,000 pairs was offered to an American factory, but was refused as the machinery of the factory was not suited to the manufacture of boots of the required shape.

Wisconsin Lawyer Disbarred.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 17.—David B. Johnson, a local attorney, was disbarred on six charges, among which was the embezzlement of the funds of clients. The charges were filed last July by the grievance committee of the Milwaukee Bar association. The decision was rendered by Judge E. B. Belden of Racine.

PAPER MEN FIGHT INCREASE

Michigan Manufacturers Say New Freight Rate Would Ruin Them.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 17.—If Kalamazoo and other Michigan paper manufacturers, who returned from Washington, failed to convince the suspension board of the interstate commerce commission that the proposed new classification for paper made in Michigan and shipped to the east, was unjust, Michigan paper mills will practically be driven out of the eastern field.

During the present week Michigan paper manufacturers have been presenting evidence against the increase, and they stated they believed the board would not permit the increase to be made. It was pointed out that paper mills in the east would be given a great advantage.

FIRE FIEND IS SUSPECTED

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 17.—Fire at Sheridan, which broke out about midnight, destroyed the Dolan hotel and the livery barn nearby. In the barn were fourteen horses, which also were burned.

Mystery surrounds the fire in the fact that all the hose belonging to the fire department had been cut. Sheriff Rasmussen is investigating. The loss is estimated at $8,000, with little insurance.

CHEERFUL SURROUNDINGS.

It is a prophetic fact that some of the biggest corporations in the country have come to believe that it pays to make the surroundings for their workmen pleasant and cheerful as well as sanitary. Flowers don't make plows, but they make more plows. In other words, the healthier and more contented a man is the more work—and better work—he can do and will do. No matter how good or how poor a workman a man may be, he is still human, and he cannot help but respond to his surroundings. If they are cleanly he will be cleanly; if they are cheerful he will be cheerful; if they are bright and energetic he will be that much more efficient.

HOW MANY

To all those who are willing to try to make a count of the various kinds of birds on the farm, the Biological Survey, U. S Department of Agriculture, Washington D. C, will send instruction for the work and blanks on which to make a report. To bird lovers this work will be of special interest and to the boys and girls it will be a most healthful and useful recreation. Bulletin 187 of the U S. Dept. of Agriculture, is free and tells all about the bird census.

FORESEES ETERNAL YOUTH.

Scientist Believes Way Will Yet Be Found to Abolish Old Age.

Professor J. S Shearer of Cornell university, addressing the Roentgen Association of Greater New York to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the discovery of the X ray, said he believed science might yet find a method of bringing back the tree to the seed and man from old age to the vigor of young manhood.

Through the X ray it might be possible, he thought, to control and supply what is needed in the upbuilding of life cells and by so doing find the way of "ungrowth" and thus bring old age back to youth, so that in the dim future men of science and of marvelous attainments may be preserved in all the strength of the age of accomplishment.

COOK TO TRY MOUNTAIN.

This Time Explorer of Arctic Says He Will Conquer Mount Everest.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the arctic region explorer, has announced that he will attempt to climb Mount Everest, in the Himalayas, the highest mountain in the world, this summer. He will sail from San Francisco with a party of twelve on May 27 and expects to reach Nepal, in northern India, in July. The expedition, he says, will require seven months.

"The purpose is exploration," said Dr. Cook. "The ascent never has been attempted before, largely because of the hostility of the natives."

A cartoon has been going the rounds of the newspapers of a certain party with his suitcases marked "H. H. M., N. Y.," on his vacation trip home. One placard bears the words, "From Tecumseh, Mich., originally." A number of these clippings have been received by parties in town from Omaha, Washington, D. C., St. Paul, Cincinnati and Morenci, Mich., each one from a different paper. It is generally conceded that our old friend Harry H. McClure of New York, is getting a vast amount of free advertising.

The Tecumseh Commerce Club wants the Dolphin knitting works to move to that village from Toledo and is investigating the matter of offering inducements. It would undoubtedly furnish employment to old maids who cannot tie a matrimonial knot but might manage to run a knitting machine.—Hudson Post.

The Hudson Post seems to think that Tecumseh's old maids need the knitting machine for their support as they have not tied the matrimonial knot. This is quite a mistake as they are all self supporting and since the Old Maids' Convention was held, have been very fortunate in their ventures.

A TECUMSEH MAN GIVES EVIDENCE.

His Testimony Will Interest Every Tecumseh Reader.

The value of local evidence is indisputable. It is the kind of evidence we accept as true because we know we can prove it for ourselves. There has been plenty of such evidence in the Tecumseh paper lately, and this straightforward testimony has established a confidence in the minds of Tecumseh people that will not be easily shaken.

J. B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh says: "I was caused a great deal of suffering by pains in the small of my back. When the attacks were present it was all I could do to work. When stooping, I became very dizzy and spots of fire seemed to flash before my eyes. I rested poorly and in the morning when I got up, was unrefreshed. I doctored and used remedies of various kinds, but got no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They made me feel like a different person, ridding me of the trouble. I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Infection in the Air

Medical authorities agree that colds are infectious. In some cities children with colds are barred from schools. Spring's changing weather brings many colds. The quickest and safe way to stop colds, coughs and croup is to give Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Sold everywhere in Tecumseh. adv

Danger to Children

Serious illnesses often result from lingering coughs and colds. The hacking and coughing and disturbed sleep rack a child's body and the poisons weaken the system, so that disease cannot be thrown off. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has eased coughs, colds and croup for three generations; safe to use and quick to act. There is no better medicine for croup, coughs and colds. SUMMER FROCK.

Handsome Frock of Hand Embroidered Handkerchief Linen.

PRETTY SUMMER CREATIONS

Hand embroidery is used lavishly this season in the creation of handsome summer robes. The bolero jacket lends itself to the scalloped edge, as do also the yoke and the bottom of the skirt. To give the touch of color the girdle is made of rose colored satin. A hat of white hemp is trimmed with pink roses, and the stockings are pink, worn with black and white pumps.

Puts Losses In War at 8,268,000.

Colonel Edwin Emerson, a war correspondent now telling "the truth about the war," has been giving New Yorkers the "official figures" of the losses "as compiled by the Red Cross societies." When his totals were added together they were found to make the staggering total of 8,268,000 men!

BRITISH GAIN 1 MILE IN FRANCE

Teutons Are Hurled Back Further Toward Lille.

PARIS ALSO REPORTS GAINS

Berlin Claims Allies' Attacks Were Repulsed—Says Fighting Is Still Going on—Admits One Russ Victory in East—Russ Fleet Sinks Turk Boats.

London, May 17.—The following bulletin was issued by the official press bureau:

"General French states that our first army corps has made a successful attack between Richebourg L'Avoue and Festubert, breaking the enemy's line over the greater part of the two mile front. We advanced nearly a mile into the German line."

French Continue Gains, Paris Says.

Paris, May 17.—The midnight official statement issued by the war office follows:

"During the afternoon we repulsed at Steenstraete with complete success a fourth German attack. We have held all the positions taken yesterday and consolidated our gains, of which the violent efforts of the enemy showed the importance.

"Further to the south the British troops inflicted on the Germans a serious check. They captured, southwest of Diehebourg-l'Avoue, a kilometer of trenches. At the same time, northeast of Festubert, they took possession of 1,500 metres of trenches. This second attack afterward was continued in the direction of Quinze Rue and on the front of 600 metres they drove back the Germans 1,500 metres. The losses of the Germans were very large. Progress of the British troops continues.

"In the sector north of Arras we have carried out several actions designed to consolidate our new front, driving the enemy from several points to which they had been clinging. Our troops showed in these hand-to-hand struggles the greatest energy and tenacity.

"We have gained 200 metres on the slope which descends from the plateau of Lorette. In the vicinity of the sugar refinery of Souchez we have taken some more houses. North of Neuville we exploded a German captured balloon to the east of Vimy and our aviators bombarded the railway station at Somain.

"In Champagne, northwest of Ville sur Tourbe, an action which was entirely local brought us a brilliant success. During the night of Saturday and Sunday the enemy exploded a mine in the rear of our first line. Eight companies of Germans at once precipitated themselves on our positions and established a footing in one salient. We immediately counter attacked and retook part of the ground we lost, making seventy-seven prisoners, of whom three were officers. During the day we delivered a second counter attack. This was carried out with such spirit with the bayonet and with grenades we took all the positions. The enemy suffered enormous losses. This we have established with certainty. In the trenches and on the parapets we found more than 1,000 bodies of Germans. We captured 300 prisoners, including nine officers and thirty-six machine guns."

Berlin Admits a Russ Victory.

Berlin, May 17.—The war office statement says the German troops have repulsed attacks by the allies near Steenstraate and Het Sas, Belgium, and that attacks by the British south of Lille were repulsed "in most places." It is asserted also that a new aggressive action by the French on the Lorette Hills, north of Arras, broke down under the fire of German gunners. It is declared also that a French vantage point north of Sudihr Turba has been captured by the kaiser's troops. A battle on the western border of the forest of Le Pretre is still in progress.

The statement admits that Russian forces were victorious northeast of Uglany, on the Dubysa river and that the kaiser's forces retreated, abandoning two cannon. A general resumption of the offensive by the Russians is indicated by the statement, except in western Galicia, where, it is stated the Austro-German forces are continuing their advance. It is added that the Russians are now resisting on the lower San river, below Permysl.

Russ Fleet Destroys Ships.

London, May 17.—The official press bureau gave out the following Russian official statement issued in Petrograd:

"The Russian Black sea fleet destroyed four steamers laden with coal, two tugs and twenty sailing ships and much other damage was done during the bombardment of Kefkine, Eregli and Kilemale."

DOG GIVES LIFE FOR SAILOR.

How a Newfoundland dog gave his life in saving his friend, the cook of the schooner J. Frank Seavey, was told when the vessel reached Philadelphia.

The J. Frank Seavey sailed from Bridgewater and recently ran into a heavy gale off the Bay of Fundy. George Thompson, the cook, was washed overboard. The dog summoned help by barking and leaped into the boiling sea. Thompson caught the dog around the neck and supported himself until a boat was launched.

When the boat reached Thompson the dog was exhausted and sank.

MRS. TARKINGTON MARRIES

Washington, May 17.—Mrs. Louise Fletcher Tarkington, former wife of Booth Tarkington, the Indiana author and playwright, was married here to Willard Connelly, a New York magazine writer. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. U. G. B. Peirce at the home of Mrs. Tarkington's sister, Miss Hilda Fletcher.

The marriage license returns give the age of Mrs. Tarkington as thirty-six and the age of Mr. Connelly at twenty-six.

CREAM BLOUSES MODISH.

Cream is the modish tone for the spring blouse, not pink. Rarely lovely as the pink blouse is in delicate flesh or shell tones, its day has passed, and these blouses are offered for sale on the bargain tables, while cream and sand colored models have the places of honor among exclusive new spring wearables. Hemstitched blouses of sand colored khaki fine for sport wear have buttoned down pockets and plaits at front and back. Cream lace and net blouses meet the requirements of formal spring tailleurs, and there are good looking blouses of tan shantung, cream tinted georgette crape and ecru pussy willow silk, all with the long sleeve and collar high at the back, whatever its cut may be at the front.

HOW A DEEP SEATED COUGH

And Sore Lungs Were Overcome by Vinol—Mr. Hillman's Statement of Facts Follows:

Camden, N. J.—"I had a deep seated cough, a run-down system and my lungs were awfully weak and sore. I am an electrician by occupation and my cough kept me awake nights so I thought at times I would have to give up. I tried everything everybody suggested and had taken so much medicine I was disgusted.

"One evening I read about Vinol and decided to give it a trial. Soon I noticed an improvement. I kept on taking it and today I am a well man. The soreness is all gone from my lungs, I do not have any cough and have gained fifteen pounds in weight and I am telling my friends that Vinol did it." — FRANK HILLMAN, Camden, N. J.

It is the curative, tissue-building influence of cods' livers aided by the blood-making, strength creating properties of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, that made it so successful in Mr. Hillman's case.

We ask every person in this vicinity suffering from weak lungs, chronic coughs, or a run-down condition of the system to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails to help you.

Collaboration For a Picture Play

It Leads to Something More Real Than Photographs

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Oh, Mr. Fielding, I'm so glad you have come!"

"And why, may I ask, are you glad that I have come?" The gentleman's eyes lighted with pride and pleasure.

"Because I have use for you. You're just the person in all the world I have wished for this morning."

Mr. Fielding's countenance fell. But Miss Meriweather was so eager, so vivacious, so evidently absorbed in a dominant idea, that at heart he was not troubled. Nevertheless he said half reproachfully:

"I am disappointed. I hoped your pleasure at my coming was disinterested."

"Show me the man that I may kill him."

"You mean thank him. I anticipate no end of pleasure from the opportunity he has given me."

"And I no end of pain."

"There you go again. Now listen to me. It has been proposed to us—any of us here at Wildwood—to make a scenario for a picture play, be the performers if we like, our house and grounds to be used for the scenes. Now you know why I am so glad you have come. It is because you are a literary man and can make the scenario."

"You mean an apology for a scenario. Well, I'll do the best I can for you—that is, I'll help you to construct the scenario. With such a palatial house and grounds, we must make it a high grade society play. I must look up a theme."

"Suppose we take for our motif a runaway match?"

"The very thing!"

"It's not new, but picture plays are more dependent upon the scenery, the attractiveness of the actors and actresses and all that than the novelty of the theme. With this residence, grounds and, above all, your own sweet self for the heroine, any sort of play must be a success."

"Just think—to be a heroine!" And she clapped her hands gleefully.

"To begin," continued Mr. Fielding, "you, being the leading lady"—

"You mean the heroine."

"You being the heroine, we'll call you Sophia Waterman."

"Very well, you are Constance Maltravers, in love with—whom shall we have you in love with?"

"Do you mean really in love with or only for the play?"

"For the play, of course."

"You know so much more about stage matters than any of the rest of us that I think you had better take the part yourself."

This was said haltingly and with eyes bent on the floor.

"We will not, of course, use our own names. I must have another. How would Enoch Rogers do?"

"It wouldn't do at all. I like Howard Mortimer much better."

"Howard Mortimer it is. Howard Mortimer, being in love with Constance Maltravers and her father being a grim curmudgeon"—

"Is it necessary to make papa that?"

"Oh, no. He may simply wish for you to marry a prominent politician who, though younger than himself, is his intimate friend."

Miss Meriweather looked up at Mr. Fielding with an expression he understood, though another would not have.

"And who is to play that part?" she asked, after a long pause.

"The gentleman him— I mean Mr. Cogswell, perhaps, might"—

"Mr. Cogswell would do no such thing—that is, if the heroine is to marry Howard Mortimer."

"I never thought of that. We must find some one else."

"Perhaps I can persuade Mr. Cogswell to take the part."

"I don't know. Is that necessary?"

Mr. Fielding smiled.

"I was not aware," replied Mr. Fielding, with a slight hauteur, "that a woman who is so deeply in love that she is about to defy her parents by running away with a man would have any doubt as to what man she intends to run away with."

"Mightn't she change her mind at the last minute?"

"That is a feature of realism which would be difficult to work into our play, considering the theme. It would be incongruous."

"I suppose we will have to leave Mr. Cogswell out."

"Whom would you put in his place?"

"Mack Gregory would play the part well if he could be induced to assume it."

Mr. Fielding frowned. In Mr. Gregory he recognized another of Miss Meriweather's admirers. He changed his tactics.

"Mr. Gregory," he said, "has not the personnel for any prominent part. He is too dumpy."

"Mack is not dumpy at all," replied Miss Meriweather; "he is very symmetrical."

"His nose would not photograph well. It's too long. You see, in photographing an object the nearer it is to the camera the larger it is. Gregory's nose photographed facing the camera would look like an elephant's trunk."

"Do you really think so?"

"I know it."

"Who else is there we can get for the part?"

"It seems to me that if the heroine doesn't know her own mind we'd better put off making the scenario till she finds out which way the wind blows."

"Is she a weathercock?" reproachfully.

"She may be what she likes in real life. When she goes on the boards she must follow the dramatic laws."

"What are the dramatic laws?"

"The one that especially pertains to this theme is that the leading lady must be desperately in love with the leading gentleman."

"Doesn't the leading gentleman have to be desperately in love with the leading lady too?"

"Certainly, but I can't see how he can act his part to advantage if he thinks she doesn't know whether she loves him or not. Besides, her uncertainty would spoil the play. At the last minute, when the audience is expecting to see her run out of this door, flit along the piazza to the porte-cochere, to run away with the leading gentleman, she might be descending a ladder at the back window to make off with the villain. That would make a pretty mess of it."

"How ridiculous!"

"I should think so."

"Why," she asked after a pause, "couldn't the heroine be photographed first running along the piazza to get into a car with the hero and then descending a ladder from a back window to run away with his rival? Then during the performance she could make up her mind which suitor she wanted and the scene to correspond with her decision could be used. When I read a story or see a play I never like to know which way it's going to turn out. It seems to me our play would be much more interesting my way than the other way. The audience wouldn't know who was going to win."

Mr. Fielding's eyes were bent on Miss Meriweather's face with ill concealed wonder while she promulgated this suggestion. When she had finished she looked up at him and, noting his expression, asked him what caused it.

"Wonder that such a marvelous advance in the dramatic art should have remained hidden from dramatists for so many centuries. Who would have thought that a girl of today should have made such a discovery!"

"Are you speaking ironically?"

"Permit me to withdraw from collaborating with one whose ideas are so far above mine that I could never reach them and would therefore never be in accord with them."

He rose, shook down his trousers and gave his coat a hitch, as if to retire.

"Sit down," said Miss Meriweather. "I don't think you quite understand me. Perhaps it would be better for one of these gentlemen whom I have suggested to take the part of a rival"—

"A villain?"

"What you like, rival or villain. Perhaps we can agree better if Mr. Cogswell, for instance, should take the leading part and you take the part of the —the villain."

"If you mean the rival, I would say that a real rival might be inspired to act the part better than one who does not consider himself worthy to"—

"To what?"

A prolonged silence.

"It seems to me," said Miss Meriweather, "that we have spent a lot of time without getting anywhere. Suppose we begin. If you are to act the part of my lover it seems to me that you should be getting used to act lover-like toward me. I have noticed that lovers in picture plays give each other real kisses. Must we do that?"

Mr. Fielding brightened up. He assured Miss Meriweather that they must do everything that professional actors and actresses do in picture plays, and he proceeded to practice a lover's bearing toward his ladylove by drawing very near her. Then he took her hand and a few minutes later stole an arm around her dainty waist.

"I wonder if I can have the face to be photographed in this position," said Miss Meriweather doubtfully.

"I think that if we remain awhile in this position you will become so accustomed to it that you will not mind the camera."

The latter portion of the rehearsal came in after he had made real love to her, asked her to be his wife and she had accepted him. The kiss was never better performed in the most artistic photographic production.

As to the collaboration for a picture play, that is in embryo. But so much time is taken up in rehearsing lovers' parts that it is questionable if the scenario will ever be finished. Meanwhile it has got out that a pair of real society lovers are collaborating in the construction of a picture play in which they will take the leading parts themselves, and multitudes are waiting for the opening performance.

But those who know aver that the picture play will never be constructed. Some declare that Miss Meriweather had been angling for some time for Mr. Fielding, who was considered a great catch; that no proposition whatever for a picture play had been made to her, and that she devised the scheme for the purpose of bringing him to terms. At any rate, the announcement of their engagement will soon be made.

STUNNING BATHING COSTUME

Black Satin Given Smart Touch by Red and White Striped Silk.

The girl who bathes in the ocean's briny waves this summer will like to remember herself afterward as having made a pretty picture on the sands with the alluring background of sparkling waves and cloud flecked summer sky. The costume pictured here will give her such a memory. It is of the ever serviceable black satin, lent distinction by an underblouse of red and white striped silk. The coquettish cap is red and white, and the white shoes are laced with red ribbons.

PAIGE

ANNOUNCEMENT

We are proud to announce that we have closed with the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company, of Detroit, the selling rights of the Paige for Tecumseh and surrounding territory.

We are firmly convinced that the Paige car offers more values for the money than any other car in the market.

We believe in the Paige car, in the men responsible for its success and in the factory service and co-operation given each and every Paige owner.

We will have a Paige Six to show you in a few days and will greatly appreciate a visit from prospective buyers and Paige owners.

It will be our aim and ambition to give to Paige owners the attention and courtesies we believe will be in accordance with the wishes and policies of the men responsible for the affairs and success of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company.

We invite you to come in and inspect the new Paige.

PORTUGAL'S NEW RULER IS KILLED

BYSTANDER SLAYS ASSASSIN

Four Shots Fired at President in Railway Station—200 Killed and 500 Wounded in Battle for Capital—Admiral Who Remained Loyal Is Imprisoned.

MADRID — Warships are bombarding the Portuguese capital and more than 100 persons have been killed, including several Spaniards.

Because of this situation the Spanish ships Espana and Rio de la Plata and a Spanish torpedo boat have arrived at Lisbon.

LONDON, ENG. — Joao Chagras head of the Portuguese revolutionists and president of the newly formed cabinet was shot, and died of his wounds, according to reports reaching here from Lisbon.

Senor Chagras was en route from Oporto to Lisbon to take up his new duties. At the Entrocamento railway station Senator Freitas suddenly pulled a revolver and fired four shots into the body of Chagras.

According to advices received here Freitas was shot and killed by a bystander.

Significance Problematical.

The significance of the elimination of Chagras from Portuguese politics at this time is problematical.

The casualties in the fighting in and around Lisbon during the past few days are estimated at 200 killed and 500 wounded. The Spanish warship Espana has arrived at Lisbon to protect Spaniards and other foreigners.

Admiral Xavier Brito has been imprisoned because he ordered the commander of the submarine Espardarte to sink the vessels in possession of the revolutionists which were shelling Lisbon. General Pimenta also has been imprisoned. Many other prisoners have been placed aboard the warships in the River Tagus.

Rioting Resumed.

Rioting such as marked the fall of the capital again has broken out in Lisbon, according to dispatches. Lisbon is under the rule of a military governor, and the new government has issued a proclamation congratulating the people on the rebel victory and inviting citizens to resume their normal occupations. Rioters are warned of punishment.

One dispatch says Senor Arriaga, overthrown president of the republic, will be continued in office until the expiration of his term, October 5, because of his sympathy with the revolutionary movement.

ALL ITALY READY FOR CALL TO ARMS

Austro-German Envoys Preparing to Quit Rome.

SITUATIO IS TENSE AT CAPITAL

Parliament Expected to Take Action on Thursday—Alarmist Rumors Current—Italian Populace Is Clamoring For War—German Newspapers Admit Latins Will Intervene.

ROME — Prince von Buelow, the German ambassador, and Baron von Macchio, the Austrian ambassador are preparing to leave Rome, according to the newspapers. Special trains with steam up are in readiness to take Prince von Buelow to Chiasso, Switzerland, and Baron von Macchio to Ala, in the Austrian Tyrol.

The Italian parliament will be asked Thursday to vote on a bill containing a single clause conferring plenary powers on the government, according to the Giornale d'Italia. Final action regarding war is not expected until after that time unless Austria makes the first move, which is considered unlikely in view of the pacific speeches made in the Hungarian diet.

Alarmist rumors of all kinds are being circulated in Rome, and the situation is so tense there are many who believe them all. One report was to the effect that Prince von Buelow already had left the city secretly. It was unfounded.

Populace Clamoring For War.

ROME — The news that the Salandra ministry is to be retained has swept over Italy and united all factions in a great cry for war. Reservists of the age of fifty-five have been called out. A demonstration, such as Rome has not seen since the days of the revolution, began in the evening and lasted throughout the night. Contrary to former practices there was no effort by the police or military to stop the popular enthusiasm and the crowds surged through the city, acting very much as if war had been declared already and victory were being celebrated.

The same thing has occurred throughout the country. The one call is for Salandra, the war advocate, and for his ministers.

Germans Admit Latins Will Intervene.

LONDON — The North German Gazette, commenting on Premier Salandra's continuance in office says: "This bowing before the popular fashion is of the greatest significance. We must be prepared for a fateful and perhaps a premature decision. To be ready is everything. We are ready. We have not had to fear a united Italy and an Italy disrupted by revolution will only be dangerous to herself."

COLLER—HAAS

Married at their new home 560 W Alexandrine St. Detroit, Saturday May 15 1915 Miss Katheryn Haas of Clinton and Ernest M Coller of Detroit, Rev. L. E. Lovejoy of 13 Ave M. E. church officiating. Both parties are well known in Tecumseh, Mrs Coller being a former employe at the Herald office and Mr. Coller living here with his mother Mrs John Schreder. Their Tecumseh friends join in congratulations and best wishes.

THE NEWSPAPER'S COURAGE

Once in a while somebody gets the idea that the reason the local paper does not report every scandal that comes to public knowledge is because the publisher is afraid. That's not the reason The reputable newspaper especially in a small town where everyone is a neighbor to everyone else takes no delight in giving publicity to those things that have brought disgrace to some family or heart ache to some wife or mother. It is much more pleasant to record the good things that happen, to tell about the incidents that tend to make life more endurable, and that uplift rather than tear down, that bring joy instead of sorrow, pride instead of heartache. So if you don't always find in the Herald the delectable bit of gossip that would doubtless make "good reading" and if you are inclined to blame the editor because he "doesn't print all the news," consider that some home has had enough worry over unfortunate happenings, and that the gossips and scandal mongers of the community can and will gladly and ghoulishly give sufficient publicity to the details to satisfy the lowest tastes. Incidentally, it might be remarked here that the most complaint of censored news comes from people who have now or have had in their lives some things they are very glad were not given newspaper publicity. There come times, of coure, when it is the definate business of the local newspaper to speak right out in meeting, to tell what happened, to give open publicity to conditions that are a reproach to a comunity and for which the light of publicity seems the only cure. Tolerance is not a lack of courage.

MANY DIE IN TRIESTE RIOT

Powder Magazines Blown Up and Attempt Made to Destroy Palace.

VENICE — Hundreds of persons have been killed and wounded in a new insurrection in Trieste, according to fugitives arriving here.

Two powder magazines were blown up and the insurrectionists attempted to burn the palace and government buildings. The commandant is reported to have threatened to have the Austrian fleet bombard Trieste.

DROP COPPER STRIKE CASES

Indictments Against Moyer and Others Nolle Prossed.

CALUMET, MICH. — The eighteen conspiracy indictments found against President C. H. Moyer and other officials of the Western Federation of Miners by the Houghton county grand jury a year ago as a result of alleged acts of violence said to have been committed at the direction of the defendants during the copper strike were nolle prossed.

6,000 ARMENIANS MASSACRED

Appeal For Help as They Rise to Fight Turks and Kurds.

LONDON — Six thousand Armenians have been massacred at Van, in Armenia, Asiatic Turkey, according to a dispatch received in official quarters in London from the Russian consul at Urumiah, Persia.

The Armenians are defending themselve to the utmost against the Turks and Kurds arrayed against them, but help is urgently needed.

Russ Say Drive on Permysl Is Halted.

PETROGRAD — The Austro-Germans have again been halted in their advance on Permysl, according to dispatches received here. The enemy's losse in infantry engagements twenty mils north of the fortress were described in semi-official dispatches as "exceptionally heavy."

MISS PATTI McKINLEY AND HER ASSOCIATED PLAYERS

The Patti McKinley players, who come to the Bradley Opera House for a weeks engagement, commencing next Monday, May 24, will open their engagement with "The Gamblers," their best play, written by Chas. Kline, (author of "The Third Degree" and "The Lion and the Mouse") before sailing on the ill-fated Lusitania, on which he lost his life.

The following is what the Zanesville Signal had to say of Miss McKinley and her players, who have just completed an engagement of ten weeks at that city:

"During the past ten weeks Miss Patti McKinley has appeared at the Orpheum theatre in 20 different plays and she has been well received by her excellent work. However in the play last night, "Bought and Paid For," she proved herself to be the cleverest little woman that has ever been seen on the local stage at popular prices, and the equal of many of the dollar and a half stars that have appeared here."

"The Patti McKinley Players opened a week's engagement at the Crosswell last night, and pleased a fair sized audience with their excellent performance of "The Gamblers." Miss McKinley is one of the cleverest little ladies seen in stock and her work last night compares favorable with many so-called best actresses. Her supporting company is capable, in fact, one of the best ever coming here at popular prices."

GERMANS ARE DRIVEN FROM BANKS OF YSER

Berlin Admits Gains Made by British and French.

LONDON, ENG. — The Germans have been driven from the west bank of the Yser canal in Belgium and are making a stand in their main positions on the east bank north of Ypres.

This development is not only claimed in the French official communique, but was admitted by Berlin before the French announced the victory. Paris says the Germans were menaced with complete envelopment by the successful French and Belgian attacks of the last few days, while the German official statement says the retirement was effected to avoid losses under the heavy artillery fire of the French.

Berlin also admits that the British have won a victory at the southern end of the northwestern battle line, south of Neuve Chapelle, and are holding the advanced trenches taken from the Germans, while the French communique as well as Sir John French's official report declare the British are following up their advantage by taking all the German trenches on a front of two miles between La Bassee and Neuve Chapelle.

The Germans surrendered in large groups and one party of 700, seeking to surrender, was caught between the cross fire of the British machine guns and their own artillery and every man was killed. The British, says Paris, took 1,000 prisoners and several machine guns.

PLOT TO KILL SULTAN FOILED

Conspirators Said to Have Aimed Also at Marshal Von der Goltz.

PARIS. — Reports from Constantinople confirm the discovery of a plot organized by Armenians and Turks opposed to the new regime to assassinate the sultan, Enver Pasha, Feld Marshal von der Goltz and General Liman von Sanders, telegraphs the Journal's Athens correspondent.

Two Armenians were to have blown up the Kara-Keui bridge connecting Stamboul and Galata, on the sultan's birthday, while the ruler, accompanied by his commanders, was crossing to attend a ceremony at the Mosque of St. Sophia. The plot is said to have been revealed by a son of Zograph Effendi, an Armenian deputy.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

New Price $1,550 F. O. B. Detroit

THE 1915 GEM

The HUDSON Six-40 for 1915 offers 32 surprises.

Last year it seemed that no car could be better. And it seemed that quality cars could never sell lower.

But the HUDSON engineers–headed by Howard E. Coffin–have brought out 31 new features. And a trebled output–due to overwhelming demand–will reduce the price $200.

This light Six is lighter than ever.

It is handsomer–better-equipped. Just think–48 engineers for one whole year, have worked exclusively on refinements. Yet the price–which was never approached in a quality car–has been lowered by $200.

You will find in this new model the jewel car of the year–the final ideal in a Six. You will find many attractions shown in no other car. And a price which no one considered possible until Hudson made it possible

FARMER FINDS ANTIQUITIES

Relics of Aztecs Are Unearthed in Michigan Town.

DETROIT, MICH. — Buried evidently at a period far remote from the time of the earliest explorations of this country by Europeans, a collection of antiquities has been unearthed in the vicinity of Pentwater, Mich., which seems to prove the theory that the Aztecs of Mexico once inhabited what is now the northern part of the United States.

This find was unearthed by Carl Schrumpff, a farmer, while he was digging up a pine stump.

A Safe Way to Stop Indigestion

Your stomach must itself be strong enough to expand and contract with a sort of churning movement so as to mix its digestive juices with your food. If your stomach isn't strong enough to do this you will keep right on having indigestion and every artificial digester you use will make your stomach weaker.

There is one stomach remedy that every dyspeptic can depend on and that is the famous old MI-O-NA Stomach Tablets. Most stomach remedies let the stomach rest and digest the food themselves. Mi-o-na succeeds by strengthening and stimulating the stomach and making it do its own digesting. It stops stomach pains, gas, bloating, burning, belching, etc., by ten minutes and does still better in making the flabby, inflamed and inactive stomach walls grow strong and elastic and able to do their own churning. Mi-o-na Tablets never lose their effect and unlike mere artificial digesters need not be used forever. A few weeks use is generally sufficient to put any stomach in fine shape and G. A. Wright & Son and many other leading druggists hereabouts sell it with that understanding, agreeing to refund money to anyone who does not get complete relief.

Muffins

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

When muffins are on the breakfast table, nobody cares for meat or eggs and they would be served more often if this meal were not prepared so hurriedly that there is no time to make them. If K C, the double-raise baking powder is used, the batter may be stirred up the night before, put in the pan ready for baking and nothing to do in the morning but bake them.

One-Egg Muffins

2 cups flour; 2 slightly rounded teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1 teaspoonful salt; ¼ cup sugar; ¼ cup melted butter or lard; 1 egg; 1 cup water or milk.

Sift dry ingredients together three times. Add to this the unbeaten egg, melted shortening and water or milk. Then beat all together until perfectly smooth. Oil muffin or gem pans and have oven slow until the muffins come to the top of the pan, then increase the heat to bake and brown the muffins. This recipe makes 12 large muffins. Raisins or currants may be added if desired.

Graham Muffins

1 cup graham flour; 1 cup pastry flour; 2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1 to 2 level tablespoonfuls sugar; ½ teaspoonful salt; 1 egg; 1¼ cups milk or water; 2 to 3 tablespoonfuls melted butter; mix and bake as One-Egg Muffins.

To get 88 other recipes as good as these, send us the certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder, and we will send you "The Cook's Book" by Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill. Handsomely illustrated. Jaques Mfg. Co., Chicago.

TOWN'S TAX RATE IN DOUBT

SAGINAW, MICH. — Upon the action of the common council on the appeals of Wellington R. Burt and George L. Burrows, relative to their assessments as fixed at $800,000 and $500,000 respectively, depends the tax rate for 1915. According to the tax rolls, Mr. Burt is the richest man in Saginaw and Mr. Burrows is second. Mr. Burt was assessed at $1,000,000 and Mr. Burrows at $500,000, but the former convinced the board that he should have a reduction.

In 1914 Mr. Burt paid taxes on $200,000 and Mr. Burroughs on $75,000.

FARMER KILLED IN RUNAWAY

Victim Is Picked up by Roadside With Broken Neck.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — H. C. Logan, sixty-three years old, a prominent farmer, was instantly killed when thrown from his wagon. His team ran away. No one saw the accident, but an auto driver coming towards Kalamazoo saw a runaway team, and after driving for a short distance, came across the body of Logan in the road. Believing he might be alive, he brought Logan to Borgess' hospital, where doctors stated the man had a broken neck.

What caused the runaway is unknown.

TAKEN FROM THE ADRIAN DAILY TELEGRAM

The Adrian Daily Telegram of Wednesday May 19th has the following to say regarding Miss Patti McKinley and her excellent company playing at the Croswell this week:

"In the opinion of many theatre goers Adrian has not seen quite so pleasing a stock company as the Patti McKinley players at the Croswell this week. Their presentation last night of "Bought and Paid For" was equal to some of the higher priced shows presenting it. Miss McKinley's work as Virginia Blair last night was excellent. Mr. Mayo made ideal Robert Stafford, and the comedy parts in the hands of Mr. Wilson and Miss LeRoy were well taken. Miss Norton as the maid and Mr. Sherrard as the "Jap" also deserve special mention."

As manager of the Bradley, I take great pleasure in offering Miss McKinley and her excellent company to my patrons for the coming week. I saw both their presentation of Kline's play of high finance "The Gamblers" and "Bought and Paid For" at Adrian Monday and Tuesday nights and must say that they are the best artists I have ever seen in stock. Their plays are all new modern plays, excellent scenery used for the productions and guarantee them in every way to my patrons. Their production last Tuesday of "Bought and Paid For" was fully as well presented as it was when Wm. A. Brady's big city company played it here two years ago. This company must not be classed in any way with the average stock company which tours the country.

Respectfully,
ED. L. MARK.

MAY PARTY

Beautiful Party Given Wednesday Evening at Witherell Hall

Tecumseh society was given one of the most delightful dancing parties on Wednesday evening under the auspices of the ladies of the town. The hall was just a bower of beauty, the decorations being far ahead of any previous occasion. There were about 35 couples present.

Music was furnished by two ladies from Toledo with W. L. Coller assisting. Two May poles were gracefully wound and all the latest dances put on. During an intermission tables were brought in and a fine collation was served.

Dancing was prolonged until a late hour and as the tired but happy dancers wended their way home, they with one accord pronounced this a most delightful occasion.

Tecumseh to Hudson

Wednesday Fifty Tecumseh Men

ENJOYED THE HOSPITALITY OF HON EDW. FRENSDORF

About fifty of Tecumseh's representative citizens autoed to Hudson Wednesday to visit the new high school and to enjoy the hospitality of Edward Frensdorf by whose invitation they went, and surely Ed proved himself a splendid host.

Messrs. Frensdorf and B. J. Foster, cashier of the Boies Bank, were on hand to meet the party and conduct them to the dining hall where a bountiful dinner was served. There was no doubt of the enjoyment of this part of the program, as a drive of 23 miles across country gave each one a keen appetite.

Following the dinner the party went in a body to visit the school building and were received in a very pleasing manner by Supt. Poor who assisted in showing them through the building. They were divided in three groups and made a complete tour of the school house.

This visit and investigation was particularly interesting in view of the fact that the conditions in Hudson and the size of that city as so similar to those we find at home

Much could be said about this splendid structure so recently erected in Hudson, and we think our readers are much interested, or should be, in this school question. We regret that we have not time or space to go into full details, but we will briefly state some of its points of beauty and utility.

This school house occupies a prominent site with ample grounds. Its lines are plain but substantial with plenty of window space and sky lights. It has four entrances at front and back and at either side, is two full stories high with high basements and several rooms on the third floor.

The interior has 24 rooms with large roomy corridors, cloak rooms, well plumbed lavatories for girls and boys. The first floor is occupied by the grammar grades and accommodates pupils from the kindergarten to the 9th grade. The second floor is assigned to the high school department. On this floor is a large auditorium with a stage across one end, well provided with seats. This is used as a study room and utilized for all school entertainments, public or private Class rooms are amply provided on this floor also the superintendent's office and room used by the school board.

The third floor has several rooms where natural science, agriculture and a chemical laboratory are well fitted with all the appliances necessary for their work.

A large gymnasium in the basement is surrounded by a running track on steel girders built out from the walls. Connected with it are rooms provided with shower baths, etc. A room is also devoted to manual training.

The building is equipped with a fine steam heating plant and also a fan system of ventilation which keeps the air in constant motion. The outside doors are equipped with a locking device which though locked on the outside, can be opened by pressure from the inside, insuring the students a safe exit in case of panic.

One particular point about this building impressed itself upon our minds, It was built large enough to accommodate pupils from the kindergarten to the 12th grade, thus doing away with the necessity of branch schools. We were told they have only one other school building in Hudson.

Hudson people are justly proud of their new high school building and the Tecumseh delegation who visited it all expressed themselves as well pleased and received many ideas that would assist them in making a choice for a building at home.

After the inspection of the school the delegation was called to order by J. J Belcher who, in a few fitting remarks, thanked our host for his splendid hospitality, called upon the party for a vote of thanks to Mr. Frensdorf and also asked several for remarks.

The start for home was made about four o'clock, each one feeling amply repaid for their visit to Hudson.

HAPPILY MARRIED

Wednesday Evening at Home of the Bride's Parents

MISS LOLA AYLESWORTH and FINDLEY R. DeSPELDER

Both from Prominent Families of the Village

Miss Lula Aylesworth and Findley DeSpelder were very quietly united in marriage Wednesday evening at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Aylesworth on West Chicago street, only the immediate members of the families being present. Rev. Wm. A. Rex performed the ceremony and the newly weds left by auto for a short wedding trip.

These young people are well known in Tecumseh, both being graduates of our high school, Mr. DeSpelder also graduating from the U. of M. He is the son of the late Rev. J. A. DeSpelder, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Macon for many years, the church still bearing his name. He is a civil engineer, having a position in Henderson, Kentucky.

Lula was a former employe in the Herald office and for several years has been bookkeeper for The Webster Anderson Co., leaving that position a few weeks ago.

We understand that they will soon leave for their new Kentucky home and our best wishes go with them.

LECTURE ON PALESTINE

Rev. G. W. Jennings will Give a Lecture of Palestine on Tuesday Evening of Next Week

By the kindness of a friends Rev. G. W. Jenning spent over three months in Palestine and Egypt.

The following clipping is from the Mount Clemens Daily Leader where Mr. Jennings lived before coming to Tecumseh, last October.

'HOLY LAND' LECTURE WAS WELL ATTENDED
Large and Appreciative Audience Fills the Church
Rev. Jennings was well Received His Discourse Had Unusual Merit.

The lecture at the Methodist church by the Rev. G. W. Jennings was a great success. The church was crowded last night to the doors, and the amount realized from the lecture amounted to over $90.00.

Dr. Jennings was wonderfully interesting in his description of the trip from New York to the old world by way of Maderia. He dwelt at length on the trips to, and the sights of interest in Seville, Constantinople, Athens, Egypt and Caife. He took his audience overland to Damascus the most northerly cith of Asia Minor and then to Jerusalem then by way of Lake Galilee to Cana and Nazareth.

Mr. Jennings elaborated upon his stay in Galilee, Judea and Samaria using these three points of interest as the lengthiest part of his discourse.

His efforts were deeply appreciated by an audience that was held intensely interested during the entire discourse. He is a remarkable talker and his descriptive ability could never be questioned after last night.

COMFORT

"Contented Enjoyment"
"Freedom from Anxiety"
"Mental Ease or Satisfaction."
—Webster

COMFORT in its fullest sense is enjoyed by the owner of a Mitchell car. Comfort that means absolute contentment and security.

Pride in the appearance and appointments of the car. Confidence in strength and power. Satisfaction in its easy handling, its speed, its economy.

To appreciate fully the meaning of motor car comfort, let us give you a demonstration.

Great Waste In Potatoes.

Dr. Carl L. Alsberg, chief of the federal bureau of chemistry in the department of agriculture, says that millions of dollars' worth of potatoes and grain are destroyed by excessive moisture in this country every year, when they could be utilized for making alcohol and other purposes.

Splendid Medicine Stomach Trouble

I Suffered for Several Years Peruna Restored My Health

Mrs. Elizabeth Reuther, No. 508 Twelfth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes: "I am pleased to endorse Peruna as a splendid medicine for catarrh and stomach trouble, from which I suffered for several years. I took it for several months and at the end of that time found my health was restored and have felt splendidly ever since. I now take it when I contract a cold and it soon rids the system of any catarrhal tendencies.

Over Ten Years Ago.

"I would not be without Peruna. Although it was over ten years ago that I first gave you my testimonial, I am of the same opinion as when I wrote it, and give you the privilege to use it as you see fit. I still use Peruna when I think it necessary. I am recommending it to my neighbors whenever a chance occurs."

A TECUMSEH MAN GIVES EVIDENCE.

His Testimony Will Interest Every Tecumseh Reader.

The value of local evidence is indisputable. It is the kind of evidence we accept as true because we know we can prove it for ourselves. There has been plenty of such evidence in the Tecumseh paper lately, and this straightforward testimony has established a confidence in the minds of Tecumseh people that will not be easily shaken.

J. B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh says: "I was caused a great deal of suffering by pains in the small of my back. When the attacks were present it was all I could do to work. When stooping, I became very dizzy, and spots of fire seemed to flash before my eyes. I rested poorly and in the morning when I got up, was unrefreshed. I doctored and used remedies of various kinds, but got no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They made me feel like a different person, ridding me of the trouble. I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Infection in the Air

Medical authorities agree that colds are infectious. In some cities children with colds are barred from schools. Spring's changing weather brings many colds. The quickest and safe way to stop colds, coughs and croup is to give Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Sold everywhere in Tecumseh. adv

Serious illnesses often result from lingering coughs and colds. The hacking and coughing and disturbed sleep rack a child's body and the poisons weaken the system, so that disease cannot be thrown off. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has eased coughs, colds and croup for three generations; safe to use and quick to act. There is no better medicine for croup, coughs and colds. Cleanup In Spokane.

Thousands of prizes, ranging from money to tickets to the "movies," are authorized by the "cleanup-paintup" committee of the city beautiful committee of the Ad. club of Spokane, Wash., which is in charge of the Spokane spring cleaning campaign. Prizes will be given for the best essays of a limited length on "How Best to Make Spokane Spick and Span," and the contest will be open to every school child in the city. Every child entering the contest will be obliged to sign the following pledge: "I promise on my honor to all the people of Spokane to do all in my power to further the work of the 'cleanup week' committee to the end that as a city Spokane may be truly spick and span. I promise to help clean up my own premises and not to throw bottles, cans or refuse of any sort on the streets, alleys or my neighbor's premises."

Trees Shade New Road.

The United States post highway which is being constructed between Austin and San Antonio, Tex., eighty-four miles, is to be beautified by the planting of shade trees along both sides the entire route. Local organizations have been formed in each county through which the road passes for the purpose of carrying on the work of beautification.

It is also planned to build rest houses on the new highway and to add to the comfort of travelers in every possible way. The cost of constructing the road is being borne in part by the federal government and in part by the counties through which it passes.

Milady's Mirror

Short Skirt With Us.

The return of the short skirt and the popularity of the modern dances have called the feet into prominence again. This means that the woman who cultivates beauty must pay particular attention to her feet. If the ankle is not slender it must be made so, and if the feet are not of a patrician mold their form must be corrected as much as possible.

Exercise and massage will do much for unshapely ankles if the bones are not misshapen. Remove shoes and stockings and sit with one knee crossed over the other. Move the foot about in a circle, using the ankle joint only. When you become tired move the foot up and down until fatigued and then change to the other foot. Another effective exercise is to stand on both feet and turn the feet from side to side at the ankle.

After exercising fill a foot bath with hot water, as hot as you can stand it with comfort, and plunge the feet in this bath. The ankles should be covered, and if a tablespoonful of bicarbonate of soda is added to the water it assists in the flesh melting process. Allow the ankles to remain in this bath fifteen or twenty minutes; then rub them dry and apply a strong solution of alum or camphorated oil. Use firm, vigorous strokes to rub the oil well into the flesh and as a final end of the treatment bind the ankles with strips of linen saturated with the oil. Do not draw these tight enough to hinder the circulation.

To improve the contour of the foot it is necessary to pay attention to the corns, callouses and enlarged joints. Be quite sure that you wear well fitted shoes, for there must be no pressure against any one part of the foot.

Do Not Use Grease on Hair.

Never use grease on the hair. After the shampoo use camomile lotion, rubbing it in carefully with the points of the fingers, and on no account permit it to touch the face, because it will make the face yellow.

This camomile lotion, which cleanses the hair and tones the scalp, promoting circulation, is made thus:

Two large handfuls of camomile; two quarts of water. Boil for fifteen minutes, or until it is as dark as black coffee, then shake and add two quarts of cold water. Put in a stone jar and keep in a cold place. Shake well before using.

Hair to be really beautiful should not lie in heavy, sticky bands, but should stand out hair by hair, as separate as the down of a little chicken. To acquire this use ten drops of ammonia sprinkled in the camomile. It must be added after the mixture has boiled and cooled, otherwise the ammonia will evaporate.

The Use of Soap.

Use soap, but let it be pure soap. There are soaps made from spermaceti, which is the oil taken from the head of the whale. It is very expensive, but one may not economize as to the complexion. This is a recipe for the care of the complexion every day:

On rising massage the face eight or ten minutes. Massage it with the two middle fingers—that is, the second and third—and with a round, not lengthwise, motion. The round motion removes lines. The lengthwise motion makes them. Remove what is left of the cold cream with a linen towel or an old handkerchief, then apply a little more cold cream, then powder.

In the evening take ten to twenty minutes for cleansing your face. First wash it in tepid water—never cold water, except in emergencies of great fatigue—then massage for eight or ten minutes. Remove the cream, then apply more cream, very little more, and so to sleep.

About Nervousness.

No woman can help feeling nervous at times in this age of rush and racket, but it is quite possible to put on the brake, as it were, and not let the nerves run away with us and spoil our beauty. Here are a few hints on the subject:

If people fret you it is not necessary to be rude to them. Try instead to avoid them. Don't read books that irritate you. Books are plentiful; therefore put away the offending volume and choose another. If noise at night worries you don't let it continue to do so. Get up and see to the matter and put it right.

Don't let yourself get into the habit of being bored. It is not worth while. When you feel it coming on plunge at once into some task that will take all your time and energy.

Fine Skin Tonic.

There is an excellent old skin tonic, used for generations, which will probably be of interest to the women readers of this page. It may be prepared at home and contains nothing that is in the least bit harmful to the face, which is more than can be said of so many of the so called skin tonics on the market. Make a bag of cheesecloth, double thickness, and fill it with bran, a teaspoonful of orris root and a half cake of castile soap chopped up fine. This bag may be used in the bath and on the face and makes the skin smooth, white and firm.

FIRE FIEND IS SUSPECTED

Michigan Hotel and Horses Burn; Hose Is Cut.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Fire at Sheridan, which broke out about midnight, destroyed the Dolan hotel and the livery barn nearby. In the barn were fourteen horses, which also were burned.

Mystery surrounds the fire in the fact that all the hose belonging to the fire department had been cut. Sheriff Rasmussen is investigating. The loss is estimated at $8,000, with little insurance.

Child's Happiness at Stake.

Shelbyville, Ind., May 17.—Stanton J. Lee obtained a writ of habeas corpus in the circuit court here against Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Farthing and they must produce Lee's little daughter in court Tuesday. They are grandter in court Tuesday. They are grandparents of the child, and are claiming her in accordance with the alleged dying request of the child's mother.

MACON

All members of the Women's Cemetery Improvement Association of Macon are requested to pay their dues this month in order to make a correct report at the annual meeting the first Tuesday in June.

Dr. Kellogg was called from Belleville last Saturday to council with Dr. Beardsley in the case of Lavern Heininger.

Mrs. Lizzie Davenport is having her residence improved by fresh paint.

Neighbors and relatives gathered at the home of Mrs. S. J. Camburn last Friday to join in celebrating her birthday. All went very pleasantly until an accident occurred which effectually stopped all merriment in company with some other children. Mrs. Camburn's only grand child, Lavern Heininger was in the barn playing. The little lad had climbed the ladder to a beam twelve feet above the floor and in some way lost his balance falling and striking the floor with such force that the skull was fractured. Dr. Beardsley was called and did all he could to make the child comfortable. He is in a serious condition but as last reports was that to be some better. Everyone hopes to hear of his speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Burr Fulkerson have a baby boy born Monday morning May 17.

Miss Irene Conklin was an over Sunday guest of Miss Ruth Roberts.

The Y. M. C. A. held their regular meeting Friday night. The two topic discussed were The "Periscope" and "The duties of a Y. M. C. A. Man. At the next meeting one of the topics will be "Agricultural Subjects." Also plans were laid for physical work.

Mrs. Mary Clarkson was quite ill with an attack of the shingles.

John and Heman Heininger and families, and Carl Heininger of Cone were callers at Mrs. Sarah Camburn's last Sunday.

Miss Rena Bailey was in Ann Arbor last week going for an operation on her throat.

Mrs. Will Martin of Saline is helping to care for Mrs. Barney.

Decoration Day will be observed in this place, and a program is being prepared for that occasion. More extended notice will be given next week.

Mrs. Hyman Armour is on the sick list.

The Boy Scouts will have a social in the near future.

Mrs. Mason came last week from Indianapolis to stay with Mrs. Martha Barney.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Morgan left for Grand Rapids Tuesday morning called there by the serious illness of friends of the family.

[illegible] LOW UP DOG, BUT—

Anxious to rid himself of a dog that had become a nuisance, George Verbos of Indiana, Pa., thought it would be easy to rope him to a tree and then tie a stick of dynamite to his tail.

The poor brute would wag his tail, the dynamite would swat the tree and then— But as Verbos darted behind a tree a safe distance away he saw the rope part that held the dog.

Verbos sprinted madly for his house. As he slammed the door behind him the dog leaped on to the stoop.

There was an awful explosion. The porch and part of the house were wrecked. Verbos? He wasn't hurt, nor was the dog.

HOW A DEEP SEATED COUGH

Camden, N. J.—"I had a deep seated cough, a run-down system and my lungs were awfully weak and sore. I am an electrician by occupation and my cough kept me awake nights so I thought at times I would have to give up. I tried everything everybody suggested and had taken so much medicine I was disgusted.

"One evening I read about Vinol and decided to give it a trial. Soon I noticed an improvement. I kept on taking it and today I am a well man. The soreness is all gone from my lungs, I do not have any cough and have gained fifteen pounds in weight and I am telling my friends, that Vinol did it."—FRANK HILLMAN, Camden, N. J.

It is the curative, tissue-building influence of cods' livers aided by the blood-making, strength creating properties of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, that made it so successful in Mr. Hillman's case.

We ask every person in this vicinity suffering from weak lungs, chronic coughs, or a run-down condition of the system to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails to help you.

The Impossible Man

How He Became Possible

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mona Renton looked at her uncle with wide, horrified eyes.

"But, my dear Mona, I have told you that William is an exceptionally fine young man, and your marriage to him would save the business from ruin. His father has promised that."

"Why?" demanded Mona.

Mr. Renton gazed out of the window. "Jim Barstow loved your mother, Mona, and failed to win her. I believe he wants his son to marry your mother's daughter. In fact, he told me so when I went to seek a loan from him."

"It's a bargain—a cold, cruel business transaction, Uncle Silas!" cried the girl passionately. "But you have been so good to me, like a father and mother in one, that I cannot refuse. Tell Mr. Barstow I will marry his son, but out of all the world, uncle, I am sure that this William is the one man I would not voluntarily choose to marry."

"The impossible man!" agreed Mona, shuddering.

And when the next day came she had persuaded her uncle to permit her to spend a month upon his ranch in Montana.

"When I return I will meet Mr. William Barstow," she pleaded. And so she was allowed to go, planning to visit several school friends by the way.

It was several weeks after her conversation with her uncle that she arrived at the Double Circle ranch and was welcomed by motherly Mrs. Peters, wife of the boss.

Mona went directly to bed and was awakened early the next morning by the sound of voices under her window.

Mona crept from bed and went to the window. Behind the ruffled draperies she could remain unseen.

"It's this way, Billy," protested Boss Peters. "You've got to tend to your knittin' or out you go!"

Billy laughed genially and pushed his hat back on his thick brown hair. Mona liked him at once. Here was the typical, handsome cowboy of romance!

"Very well, Peters," laughed Billy. "Just give me another mess of knitting and I'll tend to it."

The men went away together, and presently Mona saw Billy riding away down the trail.

"I should like him," thought Mona as she dressed for breakfast. "I must ask Mrs. Peters about him."

But Mrs. Peters was exasperatingly vague about Mona's cowpuncher.

"Billy, did you say, Miss Renton?" she asked. "I'm sure I couldn't say, for most every other one's named Billy something or other. There's Billy Timms and little Billy and old Bill and Billy Barto. It might be Billy Barto. He speaks slowly and is always laughing. It might be him."

Mona blushed and changed the subject. Why should she be curious about this stranger?

"You ride cross-saddle, Miss Renton?" he asked.

"Yes," said Mona as she came down to pet the pony. "Isn't he a dear? He looks good enough to eat!"

Mrs. Peters, in the doorway, laughed and told Mona that she herself looked good enough to eat.

"In that white linen skirt and blouse and white felt hat you'll charm the birds off the trees," predicted the boss' wife.

Mona laughed and rode away, a straight, slim, soldierly figure, her wide gray eyes fixed on the trail ahead, her cheeks growing pink with the exercise in the clear air.

She forgot all her cares—the financial troubles of Renton & Co., which her engagement to young Barstow had magically changed to prosperity—her engagement to a man she had never seen, for William was away on a hunting trip.

"I know I shall hate him!" sighed Mona as she suddenly remembered the Barstows.

The cream colored pony stepped into a gopher hole, and Mona flew over his head to fall prone upon the sagebrush, one ankle twisted under her body.

She screamed once when she tried to move and then fainted away.

Mona opened her eyes to gaze into a pair of dark blue ones. A strong arm supported her as Billy Barto knelt beside her.

"I heard you scream, and so I came along," he explained. "Is it your arm?"

"My ankle—it feels so queer," half sobbed Mona, her lovely face pale with agony.

At last they reached the ranch house. Mona swooned away when Billy lifted her from the saddle and gave her into the keeping of Mrs. Peters.

Finally Mrs. Peters came downstairs. Her round eyes twinkled when she saw the anxious cowpuncher.

"How is she? Shall I go for the doctor?" said Billy.

Mrs. Peters laughed.

"She is fast asleep. You needn't bother going after the doctor. I'm better than a dozen doctors, specially with sprained ankles and such. You know, this is a gopher country."

Billy nodded.

"Well, I'll be hiking along," he said reluctantly; then, turning quickly, he asked sharply:

"Who is she, Mrs. Peters?"

"You mean Miss Mona?" she asked innocently.

"Miss Mona," he repeated, "thanks," and he added to himself, "I wonder what her first name is?"

During Mona's convalescence she spent many an hour in the hammock while Billy Barto read to her from his favorite authors, who in time became her favorite also.

Mona liked Billy Barto from the very beginning. When she began to love him she never knew, but perhaps it was that day when he dropped his book and, leaning over her, crushed her hands in his own.

"Oh, Billy Barto, don't say a word!" she cried piteously. "I cannot listen!"

"The words are on my lips, dear," he said steadily, "but I am not free to utter them."

"It is the same with me," she murmured sadly.

"You—you are engaged?" he whispered, and when she nodded drearily he added grimly, "So am I."

After a silence he asked:

"Shall I go away from here?"

"No; I am going home tomorrow."

"Do not tell me where. I must not know anything more about you or nothing could keep me from following you to the end of the world!" he muttered. Then, with one last crushing pressure of her slim hands, he was gone.

Mona closed her eyes while slow tears forced themselves through the thick fringes of her lashes.

Tomorrow she would be on her way home to Uncle Silas, and she must be prepared to fulfill her promise to marry Jim Barstow's son.

She did not see Billy again. Mrs. Peters did not mention the name of the handsome cowpuncher, and Mona did not see his face among the merry crowd which accompanied her to the station, riding on either side of the buckboard, acting like schoolboys on a holiday.

Home again among the luxurious surroundings of Silas Renton's town house, the days spent on the Double Circle ranch seemed to Mona like a dream.

That first night at dinner Uncle Silas broke an awkward silence. The servants had left the room, and Mona was toying with some grapes, her gray eyes fixed dreamily on space.

"If you are not too tired, Mona, I would like to have you meet Mr. Barstow and his son. They are coming at 9 o'clock."

"Very well, Uncle Silas," she said indifferently. "And did—the business come out all right, as you expected?"

"Yes, and I didn't require Jim Barstow's help after all. But as you have promised to marry William it is only fair that you should meet him. And if you don't want to marry him now"—

"It doesn't matter much, Uncle Silas," she murmured, her heart sore at the thought of her broken romance, jealous of that girl to whom Billy Barto was engaged.

Mr. Renton eyed her sharply as he held the door open for her to pass out. The old sparkle and glow were gone. If this engagement to young Barstow was distasteful to Mona why was she not more joyous at her release?

He went into the library and picked up the evening mail. On top was a letter from Boss Peters of the Double Circle, and tucked inside was a note from Mrs. Peters.

As he read Silas Renton smiled.

At 9 o'clock, when the Barstows were announced, Silas was in the drawing room with Mona.

First came James Barstow, handsome, dignified and smiling. Behind him towered a younger man in immaculate evening dress.

Before the older men could greet each other Mona had flown down the long room to meet Jim Barstow's tall son.

"Oh, Billy Barto!" she cried. "Billy, Billy!"

At bay, they turned and faced the astonished old men.

"Father, this is the girl I must marry," declared Billy Barto, and James Barstow turned to his lifelong friend for an explanation.

For several moments they held a whispered conversation; then Silas Renton came forward.

"Mona," he said, and Billy Barto turned a startled glance upon him, "somehow or other you have met young William Barstow, and you have changed your mind about marrying him, I see."

Then it was Billy's turn to explain that, disliking the idea of engaging himself to an unknown girl, he had gone west to forget his troubles in one last spirit of freedom. By chance he had hit upon Renton's ranch and engaged himself as a cowboy.

The rest we know—how he met and loved Mona Renton and how after they had parted as, as they thought, forever they met again.

"So the impossible man became possible after all!" declared Uncle Silas.

YOUTH ADMITS SLAYING TWO

Two Days' Third Degree Methods Cause Weak Boys' Confession.

CHICAGO — Russel Pethrick, twenty-two years old, 7017 Parnel avenue, a spectacled grocery delivery boy of below normal mentality, held as a suspect by the police since Saturday night, after two days of police grilling and third degree methods, confessed that he killed Mrs. Ella Coppersmith and her two year old son, John, 7100 Lowe avenue, in their home May 6, Captain James Madden of the Englewood police announced. The boy said he had a quarrel with Mrs. Coppersmith about the change for a $10 bill which she gave him in payment for a purchase of meat.

Pethrick, the police say, had been regarded with suspicion almost since the day of the murder. The police claim a strong finger print clew in the case.

AMERICAN NOTE SUBMITTED

Wilson's Protest to German Government Goes to High Council.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Ambassador Gerard in his cablegram regarding the delivery of the American note to Berlin made no comment on whether it was well received, reporting merely that, Von Jagow, the German foreign minister had said the question would have to be submitted to a council of higher officials before an answer would be returned.

As the note had not been published in Germany the ambassador was unable to report on the state of public opinion.

War Costing Britain $150 a Second.

LONDON — F. D. Askland, financial secretary of the treasury, speaking at a meeting, estimated that the cost of war to England was $150 a second. This means $12,960,000 a day, which exceeds David Lloyd-George's recent average of $10,500,000.

257 Hurt in British Riots.

LONDON. — In the recent anti-German riots 257 persons were hurt and 866 arrests were made, it was announced by Premier Asquith, in the house of commons.

ITALY'S ENTRY INTO WAR CUTS OFF NEWS

U. S. Must Find New Route of Communication.

Washington, May 24.—Official confirmation of reports of Italy's declaration of war against Austria has been received here.

The problem of communication with Germany and Austria and Turkey from Washington is expected to be made more difficult by Italy's entrance into the war. For months practically all the state department's communications with those countries by cable have been via Rome. It is not expected that Italy will facilitate even the official communications of the United States, in fact, it is considered certain that, sending messages via Italy will have to be abandoned. The only route regarded as a possible alternative is via the Scandinavian countries and thence south to Germany and her allies.

It is certain that there will be no more detentions of American cargoes consigned to points in Italy on the ground that their ultimate destination is territory hostile to the allies, for Italy can be counted on, of course, to prevent any such consignments ever reaching their destinations. In this respect it is believed that American shippers will be somewhat troubled.

AN OLD STORY WITH A NEW MEANING

Once upon a time there was a poor man who had a large family and a small farm with a mortgage on it. Every year he grew poorer and the mortgage grew fatter.

One day he was telling his troubles to a very wise old man. The old man said, "What a pity you can't find the fortune that is buried on your farm!"

The man was surprised, but he went home and began digging. He dug deep all over his farm that year, but found nothing, so he gave it up. But next year he raised such crops that he was able to pay part of the morgage and all the neighbors came to look and wonder how it happened.

But the wise old man said to them all. "He has found the fortune that was buried on his farm, and on yours too if you will only dig for it."

THE NEW VERSION OF THE STORY

There is the same gold mine in that barn yard of yours if you only realized it. The average cow furnishes $15.00 worth of manure during the six months of winter. On ten cows the value is $150 00.

If you get that manure on the fields before heating or leaching begins, it will be worth several times that in increase of crops. Every time you see the manure smoking or smell ammonia in the stables, you may know that it is losing the best part of its value.

With a NEW STEEL CLOVERLEAF spreader you can prevent that loss by taking the manure to the fields every few days. That means a big saving to you of time and labor, besides the added value of the manure.

WHY THE NEW CLOVERLEAF IS THE BEST SPREADER TO BUY

1st It will spread from 6 ft. to 10 ft wide, thick or thin as you wish
2nd It is built of steel, like a bridge. All the important oilers are hard oilers.
3rd Box is low, easy to load; only 45 in. wide; has the new steel beater.
4th Its draft is much lighter than any other spreader of same capacity.
5th It tears the manure into finer particles
6th The wide spread saves your lapping the rows in driving; you drive only half as far as with the old style of spreaders.

Write to or call up Will Reiser or Anglemeyer Bros. of Clinton and Steve Olds of Milan who will tell you of its superiority to other spreaders.

BORNED BY AUID

Mony a Michigan mother has probably used this 68-year-old liniment on some member of the family. Maybe it did not happen to be some notably hard case like that of A. M. Millard, of Cortland, N. Y., who was almost burned to death by sulphuric acid, and who said this simple liniment "not only cured him; but removed the scars." Perhaps your mother used this same Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh just to cure a lame back, or to heal a wound, or a burn, or to fix up any other external ill. adv

Judge Bethune, Ludington, Dies.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Saturday being the birthday of Mrs Lyman Howe, nineteen of her friends and relatives gathered at her home in the afternoon to help her celebrate. Mr. and Mrs A. B. Bangs of Adrian and Glenn Griswold of Detroit were the out-of-town guests.

As her brother Will Griswold and Mr. Howe have birthdays this week, they made Saturday's entertainment a company affair and each one was duly remembered with birthday greetings and presents. A bountiful supper was served to which all did ample justice. A social hour followed.

EPWORTH LEAGUE

The Epworth League held a meeting in the M. E. church parlors Thursday evening. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

President—Miss Mary Tribolet
1st Vice—Miss Lillian Kennedy
2nd Vice—Walter Harper
Secretary—Miss Margaret Rubadeau
Treasurer—Arthur Brown

Refreshments were served, with a social hour to complete the evening.

EDWARD COOK

The body of Edward Cook of Chicago was brought here for burial Sunday morning on the 7:03 train. Mr. Cook was a brother of the late Zachariah Cook and was a former resident of Tecumseh and vicinity.

PROHIS TACKLE NEW YORK

Flying Squadron Is Closing Its National Campaign.

New York, May 24.—The Flying Squadron, an independent prohibition organization, is coming to New York this week for a campaign against the liquor traffic on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The advance agent of the squadron announces that the liquor business in this city was about to receive a staggering blow if the squadron's record counts for anything, because five out of six states in which this band of temperance workers has founght the liquor traffic have gone dry.

J. Frank Hanly, former governor of Indiana, chairman of the squadron, has sent on word that the squadron hopes to accomplish much in New York, coming as it does from thrilling experiences in Virginia, Idaho, Arizona, Colorado, Oregon and Washington. Since last September the squadron has visited more than 200 cities in the country, and the attack on New York comes near the end of the campaign, which will close at Atlantic City on June 6.

JURIES NEVER BELIEVE MEN

Postmaster Is Convicted on Testimony of Girl.

Hackensack, N. J., May 24.—George A. Hurd, postmaster at Haworth, this county, who was charged by Martha L. Conrad with having attacked her, was declared guilty by a jury.

The young woman accused Hurd of having taken her to Atlantic City and to New York. She was a clerk in the post office. Hurd denied the charges and asserted that at Atlantic City it was his daughter who was in his company. His daughter went on the stand and swore that this was the case.

Drug Thieves Sentenced.

Anderson, Ind., May 24.—Joseph Cunningham and Charles Coyle, both of Alexandria, were brought before Judge Pence in the circuit court and for violation of parole were sentenced to terms of from one to fourteen years in prison. The young men were convicted several months ago of having robbed the office of an Alexandria physician to obtain drugs.

HOLLOWAY

L. O. T. M. COUNTY ASSOCIATION

The Lenawee County Maccabee Association met with Osgood Hive, Holloway, Friday with 60 members present. The meeting was called to order at 11 o'clock with Gt. Record Keeper Emma Bower of Port Huron presiding. Under new business the following officers were elected:

Address—Gt. R. K. Emma Bower

Deputy Elliott of Hudson should be congratulated on such a successful meeting. The ladies voted to meet with Coral Hive in Palmyra in August.

Mrs. H. J. Riley received word Wednesday that her sister Mrs Lillian Raymond of Toledo had committed suicide.

Mrs. Ada Burdick is gaining slowly.

The Selects spent a very pleasant evening Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Wilson, celebrating the natal days of the former and Miss Nettie Lewis. Dancing and card playing furnished the amusement and ice cream and cake were served. Mrs. Elsie Elliott of Hudson was a guest.

Mesdames Ira Wilson and C. E. Holdridge were in Adrian Saturday.

HAT CREEK VALLEY IS SAVED

Redding, Cal., May 24.—Hat Creek valley, which was threatened with destruction by the eruption of Lassen Peak, has been saved. The flood which followed the disturbances, it is learned, changed its course for only a short distance, the main mud flow being carried out into the old lava fields.

The entire valley was shaken by a strong earthquake just previous to Saturday's eruption. No damage from this source is reported. Clouds came from the volcano this morning.

U. S. SENATOR IS ARRESTED

Warrant Accuses Townsend of Reckless Auto Driving.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 24.—A warrant was issued here for the arrest of United States Senator Charles E. Townsend of Jackson, Mich., on a charge of reckless automobile driving. It is alleged that an automobile owned by Senator Townsend struck and severely injured Alfred Hommerding, a small boy.

The police had not learned, when the warrant was issued, whether the senator was in his car when the accident happened.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

TECUMSEH HIGH SCHOOL

Delegation of Business Men Visit it Monday Afternoon.

Monday afternoon by the invitation of Supt Read a party of Tecumseh business men visited the High school, these were from the party who went to Hudson last week to inspect their new building. Supt. Read very courteously took the party on a tour of inspection through the building. There is no need of going into particulars about this building as it has been brought before the public quite frequently of late [illegible] only confirmed what had been told. One of the party was heard to say—"This is far worse than any thing I had dreamed of".

We do not propose at this time to discuss the facts of this ancient temple of learning, they are all too well known to most of our readers. To some who have not visited the school in several years, it might be a revelation to make the visit and look it over for themselves, surely the contrast between Hudsons New School building and Tecumseh's old one is a perfect one. 59 years ago when this building was erected it might have been the acme of perfection but times have changed since those days, and today it is being held up in Lansing as the poorest high school building in the State of Michigan.

Local Athletic Meet.

The second annual field day for Tecumseh high school was held on the afternoon of May 19th The purpose of this annual meet is to induce all high school students to take part in physical exercise; to develope the school as a whole rather than a few students who are already interested in these exercises; and to train the individual to work for his group rather than for himself.

A new method of scoring has been adapted, scoring by classes instead of individuals. Five, three, and one points were awarded to the three places and these points were awarded to the average for each class.

A series of Basket Ball games between the girls classes and also girls and boy's Tennis matches were played off and points recorded in meet.

MISS PAULINE LeROY

McKINLEY PLAYERS

The McKinley players made their debut before a Tecumseh audience last night at the Bradley. The house was well filled and the audience appeared well pleased with the opening performance.

Chas. Kline's play "The Gamblers" was presented last night with Patti McKinley playing the leading role. She is a clever actress and her work compares favorably with that seen in higher priced attractions. The other members of the cast gave her excellent support and everything bids fair for a week of enjoyment The prices for the week are 10c, 20c and 30c.

The following will be the bill for the week:

—To-night they present the big laughing show "Don't tell my wife."

Wednesday night, "Bought and Paid For."

Thursday night, "Alma, where do you live?"

Friday night, "The Minister's Sweetheart."

DECORATION DAY

"There is no brighter day in the long calender of time than the Memorial Day of the American people. This generation has no more sacred duty than to increase the love of the people for this day, and to advance it to the position of a universally accepted anniversary on whose recurrence all strife and bitterness shall be forgotten and peace shall posses all hearts. Let us therefore gather where they sleep, and with praise and prayer honor and bedeck them, and tell the world of their struggles, and their sacrifices for the right."

Yes—Many People have told us the same story—distress after eating, gases, heartburn. A Rexall Dyspepsia Tablet before and after each meal will relieve you. Sold only by us—25c.

JULIA SOON HAD ENOUGH.

Got Anthony by Mail, but Postage Came Heavy.

Detroit, Mich.—Anthony Merz, fifty-eight, wanted a wife and money and wanted them in a hurry, so he tried the mail order method in a matrimonial publication. Here is the result:

Monday, received an answer from Julia Bekeke.

Tuesday, she came to Detroit.

Wednesday, they were married.

Thursday, they quarreled.

Saturday, Anthony was tried before Justice Stein.

By noon Attorney Alpert said he would have on file a bill for divorce in the circuit court.

"He didn't want me," said the mail order bride. "Just wanted my money I gave him $100 to open a restaurant, but he changed his mind about that and asked for more cash. Then I left him. I'm going to get a divorce."

THIS BOY OWNS BALL PARK.

Gardner's Father Bought It For Him to Play In.

St. Louis.—Prospects are bright for a humdinger of a time this summer for Rodgers Gardner, thirteen-year-old son of Russell E. Gardner, president of a big buggy company. His father has leased a whole ball park for him.

Heretofore the corner lot hierarchy reached its apex in the boy who owned a dollar 'n' a quarter baseball, a catcher's glove and an infielder's mitt. Even then he was always likely to be toppled from his throne by some interloper with a wagon tongue bat and an out drop curve. But when a fellow owns a whole park he's reasonably safe.

Russell E. Gardner the other night closed a lease on the vacant corner at Laclede and Euclid avenues and has arranged to have it fenced and laid out in baseball grounds by the time the son returns from a military school for his summer vacation.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hardy and Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Soper have issued invitations for an afternoon reception May 22 in honor of the fiftieth wedding anniversary of their father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel E. Soper. The affair will be given at "Littleholme," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Hardy on the side of Lookout mountain. Before coming to Chattanooga Mr. and Mrs. Soper resided in Michigan, Mr. Soper being prominent in politics and of affairs of that state. At one time he was secretary of state, elected by the democrats when the republicans were in power.

We clip the above from the Daily Times of Chattanooga, Tenn. The reporter, and a number of others about town received invitations to this anniversary wedding. Mr. Soper was a former Tecumseh boy, a brother of the late Mrs. Wm. McCowan and will be remembered by the older residents of Tecumseh. He made frequent visits here in times past.

DECORATION AND MEMORIAL PROCLAMATION

By The Governor

Now I hear his whistle; now I hear his song; now I hear the music of his horse's hoofs. He has said his last good-bye to the old home. That was fifty-five years ago. All this comes to me through the magician called Memory. On Memorial Day I shall place flowers on his grave. Just a few of the "boys in blue" linger to recall the Civil War scenes. Only a few more years, at the longest, are theirs to live. I am sure that the boys and girls of this, the best nation on earth, have suffient patriotic love to crave the privilege of decorating with a flower the person or every living member of the Grand Army of the Republic and every living Spanish War Veteran. Remember the dead, although they cannot acknowledge your flowers. In all the years to come the graves of our dead patriots can be decorated; but only for a few short years can we gladden the eye and shake the hand of the veteran. When we place flowers on every grave, when we speak graciously of the dead, we give most joy, most sympathy to those who remain to love, in memory, the dead.

On Memorial Day, we are sure that if the immortal Lincoln and the armies of North and of the armies of the South could with us assemble on one great chorus for universal peace and good will.

Therefore, I, Woodbride N. Ferris, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby issue this my Proclamation, and heartily urge the observance of Sunday, May 30, 1915, as Memorial Day.

As a part of the public exercises of Memorial Day, I suggest that the bells be tolled from 12:00 o'clock noon until 12:05; that flags be placed at half mast, and that comrades stand with uncovered heads during this period.

[SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, this 19th day of May in the year of our Lord 1915 and of the Commonwealth the 79th

HIGH SCHOOL COMMERCIAL COURSE

Something New for Next Year.

Business education is attracting the attention of all progressive school authorities. The old courses of study have been made for the boys and girls who expect to enter college while the young people who wished to enter business college have been compelled to go away from home to secure a preparation for their life work. This fact has prevented many from securing a complete high school education as they could not afford it. With these facts in view the Tecumseh School board has decided to introduce a Business course in our high school. Believing also that the college preparatory course should be retained in full a new teacher will be added to the force. This instructor will be a specialist in business subjects. The course will include book keeping, type-writing, short-hand, commercial arithmetic, penmanship, business English and rapid calculation and spelling. Students may elect from one to four credits in these subjects three of which will apply on college preparatory requirements.

Students finishing the full course will be prepared to do any ordinary office work.

For a Torpid Liver

"I have used Chamberlain's Tablets off and on for the past six years whenever my liver shows signs of being in a disordered condition. They have always acted quickly and given me the desired relief," writes Mrs. F. H. Trubus, Springville, N. Y. For sale by all dealers. adv

THE OFFICIALS OF THE D. T. & I. VISIT TECUMSEH

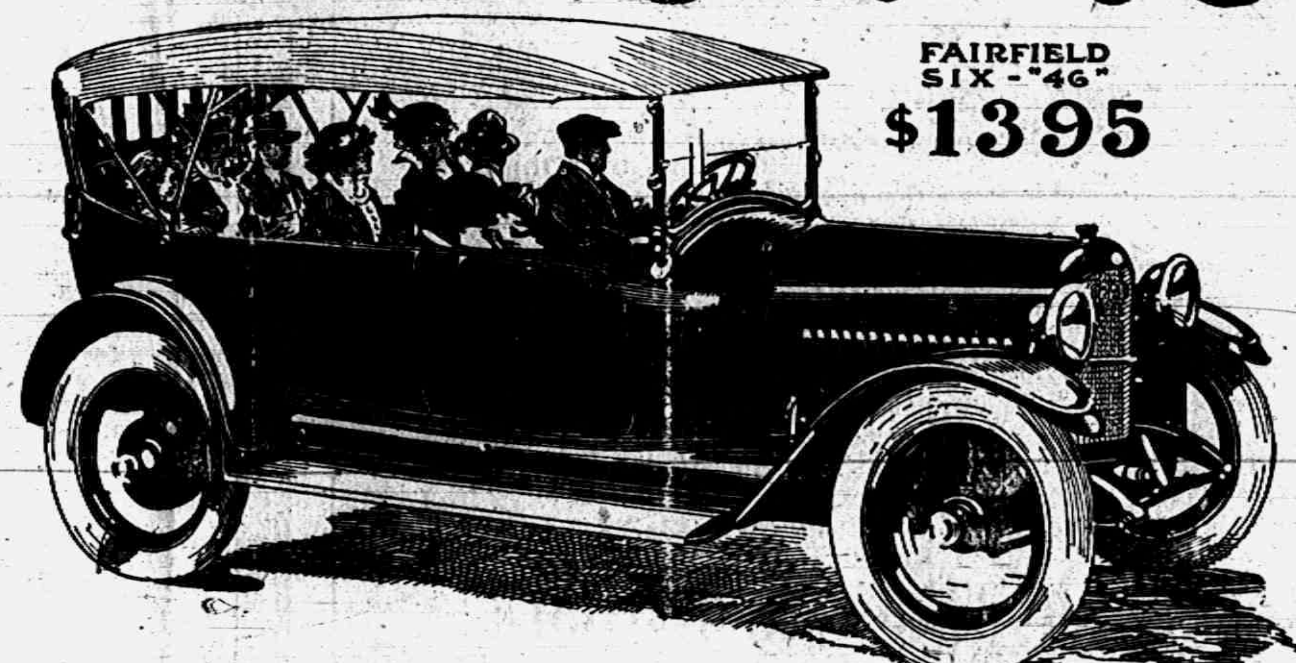
A special train bearing the officers of the D. T. & I. visited Tecumseh last Friday calling on the business places and planning for the future. The following officers of the D T. & I Railroad made Tecumseh a visit.

Pres.—J. M. Kurn
Trafic Manager—J. B. Groseclose
Gen'l Auditor—E. D. Henchcliffe
Commercial Agt.—J. R. Henderson
Treasurer—F. H. Osborne
Gen'l Atty.—S. R. William from Detroit.
Gen'l Supt.—J. R. Frasier Springfield.
Supt. Transportation—G. W. Thompson, Springfield
Ass't Freight Agt.—H. A. Fidler, Springfield.

They have in contemplation the building of two new stations: Stock pens and team tracks, which will greatly improve the appearance and convenience of their road in Tecumseh. They made a tour of the factories and visited with the business men and hope to establish friendly relations with all.

Here's The Epoch-Making

PAIGE SIX-46



IN this picture you are looking at the only seven-passenger six-cylinder car in the world which sells for less than $1400. It is our belief that this car fixes—at $1395—the highest price you should pay for a six-cylinder car of supreme value.

In this announcement we cannot begin to describe the car. You must come to see it in order to appreciate what a really great achievement has been accomplished by the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company. Bring along any engineer, any automobile expert, that you know. Let him go over the car carefully and give you his opinion. Beyond any question of doubt he will confirm our statement that this is an epoch-making car—a car that will establish a new understanding of "value" in the six field.

A Big Car

Note that this is a big car—124 inches of wheelbase—meaning luxurious, roomy comfort for every passenger. This is not a "make-shift" seven-passenger automobile. It seats seven full-grown persons without crowding and without cramping. Two auxiliary seats fold into the back of the front seat when not in use. The body design is a masterpiece in coach building—the last word in grace and distinction.

Bosch Ignition

Everyone concedes that Bosch is the standard ignition of the world. You will notice that the Paige "Six-46" is equipped with this world-famous system and you will then begin to understand the meaning of Paige "super-value."

Alive with Power

The 3½ by 5¼ Paige-Continental motor takes this car fairly flying over the hills. It is alive with power—responsive power that obeys instantly the slightest movement of the throttle. Sixty miles an hour is play for the Paige "Six" and it slackens its pace to two miles when you want it.

Lubrication

Efficient lubrication is absolutely essential to the life of any motor car. The Paige "Six" is lubricated by a plunger pump which forces a steady stream of oil to all main bearings, pistons and cylinder walls are lubricated by splash from constant level oil in pan.

Cork Insert Clutch

This is the most expensive clutch construction used in the motor car industry, but it is well worth the many extra thousands of dollars that the Paige Company is obliged to pay. Investigate for yourself the number of high-priced cars using this clutch where cost is not an item.

Gray & Davis Equipment

Practically all reputable automobile engineers are unanimous in agreeing that the Gray & Davis separate unit electric starting and lighting system is the most perfect system on the market today. It has been used on the Paige for two years with wonderful results, and of course is retained on the new Paige "Six-46." It is the newest, lightest type, and turns over the motor faster than any other cranking system. The 90-hour Willard Storage Battery is used.

Paige Cantilever Spring Suspension

The action of these Cantilever rear springs is little less than miraculous. The sensation of riding in a Paige "Six" is only to be compared with the easy, undulating motion of a staunch power boat. Cantilever springs make the roughest roads smooth boulevards. And you cannot know how a car should ride until you have had a demonstration in the new Paige "Six."

Rayfield Carburetor

It is a well established fact that the Rayfield is the undisputed leader of all carburetors for six-cylinder motors. That is the reason why you find it on the Paige "Six-46." We are satisfied with nothing less than the BEST carburetion—and exhaustive tests by our Engineering Department have demonstrated consistent superiority in the Rayfield.

WE have mentioned only a few points of supremacy found in this magnificent car. There are many, but when you stop to weigh them all and think of them all together, there is but one answer—a great "Six," a truly triumphant "Six."

Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Rex entertained 34 members of the Study Class in the Church parlors Saturday evening. A fine three course supper was served and a very enjoyable time was spent in social visiting. This class is composed of boys and girls out of the Junior Department who are taking a course of study to fit them for church membership. The class will meet every Friday evening at 7 o'clock until the next Communion July 19th.

SENIOR RECEPTION

WAS HELD AT THE HOME OF AGNES McINTYRE, FRIDAY EVENING

Unique Menu Served.

The annual reception in honor of the Juniors and faculty of the Tecumseh High School was given by the Seniors Friday evening at the home of Miss Agnes McIntyre.

The invitations, program, decorations and menu all carried out the plan of "Ye Old Rose Inn." The guests were received in the hall and then enjoyed a lively conversation in the lilac decked reception room. After a while they were escorted into the dining hall where there were roses roses everywhere—paper ones to be sure but they looked very realistic as they twined about the lattice work.

The menu furnished a great deal of amusement and mental gymnastics, the food being called by the puzzling names as "Prodigal Senior" "Symptoms of Love," "Symphony of Spring" etc.

The programme was given between courses. Miss Camilla Hayden and Mr. Garlinghouse began it with a piano duet executed with their usual dash and brilliancy. Miss Wyndrem of Adrian followed with two interesting readings. The young men's quartette consisting of Messrs. Dickinson, McLachlin, Lowry and Waring were greeted with hearty and well deserved applause. Miss Edna Taylor was at her best singing "In the time of Roses" Mr. Burton Garlinghouse was asked to compose a fiting little poem for the occasion and he surpassed all expectations by his parody on "Paul Revere's Ride." We hope to publish the poem later that the readers of the Herald may judge it for themselves. Miss Keenan of Adrian College rendered a violin solo which was finely executed and highly appreciated by all. Mrs Mulvaney sang in her pleasing manner, Miss Genevieve Halladay accompanying. The program closed with a vocal solo by Mr. John Pennington of Macon.

TURKS LOSE THREE BOATS

"Two Turkish divisions, commanded by General Liman Von Sanders in person, made a furious attack against the British troops near Kala Tepe. They were completely repulsed and suffered very heavy losses. At the same time our allies gained another success on the sea, where one of their submarines sank two torpedo boats and two transports, one of the latter being loaded with troops. In the southern part of the peninsula our troops at certain points are only a few metres distant from the Turkish trenches and despite the very stubborn defense of the enemy they have succeeded in making considerable progress."

TURK GOVERNMENT ACCUSED

"The British government, with the governments of France and Russia, declare that in the past month the Turkish population of Armenia has been massacreing Armenians with the connivance and aid of the Ottoman authorities. The inhabitants of a hundred villages near Van have all been assassinated and the Armenian quarter of the town itself has been besieged by Kurds. At the same time the Ottoman government in Constantinople is raging against the Armenian population."

STOLEN TRAIN RIDE COSTS LIFE OF BOY

Lad, Returning from Ball Game, Is Cut to Pieces.

SAGINAW, MICH. — A small scrap of paper bearing the name of Charles Nukoswski, 2319 Fraser street, led to the identification of the body of fifteen year old R. E. Rumsey of Bay City.

Early in the morning a Pere Marquette freight crew discovered a body along the tracks about four miles north of here. The head was missing, both arms were gone and the rest of the body was nude.

The head was found in the ditch about a quarter of a mile farther north and other articles of clothing and arms were found, also the paper bearing the address of the Nukoswski boy.

The Bay City police department sent young Nukoswski to Saginaw. He identified Rumsey's body. He said that several boys had been to the ball game in Bay City and caught a ride home on a Pere Marquette freight train. In South Bay City they got off the train and he was under the impression that Rumsey had left also.

ITALY DECLARES WAR ON AUSTRIA

Hostilities Are Formally Proclaimed by Rome.

AMBASSADORS ARE RECALLED

Italian Public Shows Immense Enthusiasm Over Pronouncement—Even Socialists Approve—Italy Has 760,000 First Line Troops—Mobilization Will Bring Forces up to 3,000,000.

The Duca D'Avarna, the Italian ambassador at Vienna, was instructed to present the declaration to Baron Burian, the Austrian premier and leave at once for home. It is expected that Austria will be formally notified that a state of war exists this morning.

When the public became aware of the fact that hesitation was at an end and the Italian government definitely committed to make war for the redemption of the territory inhabited by Italians under the Austrian yoke the enthusiasm of the people knew no bounds. All parties, even the Socialists, are now united in praise for the stand of the cabinet.

While the general mobilization order issued Saturday will bring about 3,000,000 to the colors within a month it is known that Italy will start the war with about 760,000 first line troops. At the outbreak of the European war the Italian army consisted of 300,000 men, the classes with the colors being those of 1891, 1892 and 1893. After the war started two more classes, including about 220,000 men, joined the colors. Various other changes recently made under orders from General Zeupelli, the minister of war, brought the strength up to 760,000 at present.

General Caneva May Lead.

It is likely that the army will be under the direct command of General Caneva, who led the Italian forces in the conquest of Tripoli, or General Count Cadorna, the chief of the general staff. In case the military operations call for a division of the forces into two units each of these officers will have command of an army. Both of them are said to be soldiers of great ability and full confidence is felt that they will lead the troops of Italy to victory. General Caneva is the only living "generale dell'Esercito," a title which is granted only in time of actual war. He won the honor by his Tripoli campaign.

Roumania's entry into the war is now believed to be a question of a day or two, following Italy's declaration. The fears felt in Bucharest that Bulgaria might seize the opportunity to make an attack on Roumania have been allayed by the official declaration that Bulgaria will keep her hands off. It is not considered improbable, too, that Bulgaria will invade Turkey in the hope of winning back Adrianople, taken from her as a result of the second Balkan war.

M'MILLAN IN BRITISH ARMY

Nephew of Late Michigan Senator Now Subject of King.

Detroit, May 24.—William Northrup McMillan, St. Louis millionaire, a cousin of Philip McMillan, Detroit capitalist, and a nephew of the late Senator James McMillan, has become a British subject and is fighting in the allied armies in Europe.

Mr. McMillan has been made a lieutenant in the Twenty-fifth Royal Fusiliers of the British army and is now serving either in British East Africa or at the Dardanelles. When last heard from him here he was at Gibraltar. He is reported as saying that all of his English friends had joined the army and gone to war, and he enlisted to be with them. It was necessary, however, for him to become a subject to the United Kingdom before he could obtain a commission in the army.

PERSONAL PROPERTY IS PLACED ON ROLLS

Saginaw, Mich., May 24.—City assessors of Michigan are looking towards Saginaw since the result of the assessments in this city has placed Wellington R. Burt on the rolls for $500,000 and Geo. L. Burrows for $500,000 in personal property. State assessors are writing to City Assessor Spindler stating their troubles. Many admit they know that personal property assessments are woefully low, but that they are surrounded by peculiar conditions. All of the assessors are congratulating Mr. Spindler on his stand.

It is believed that the action of the Saginaw assessor and the board of review and finally of Mayor Paddock and his colleagues in the council in backing up the assessor, has opened the eyes of assessors in the state to such an extent that personal property will find much more prominence on the rolls next year than it did this year.

Millionaires in Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Detroit and Muskegon are going to feel the raise next year, it is said. Mr. Spindler says he simply did his duty as best he knew, but that he could have put Mr. Burt on for $5,000,000 personal property instead of $1,000,000 if he had wanted to.

MOTHER SUPERIOR ROSARY HILL HOME

Rosary Hill Home, Hawthorne, N.Y. —"I have been at work among the sick and poor for nearly eighteen years, and whenever I have used Vinol for rundown, weak or emaciated patients, they have been visibly benefited by it. One patient, a young woman, was so weak and ill she could hardly creep to my door for aid, and was leaning on a friend's arm. I supplied Vinol to her liberally and in a month when she returned to thank me I hardly recognized her. She was strong, her color charming and her cheeks rounded out. These words are uttered from my heart, in order that more people may know about Vinol, as there is nothing makes me happier in the world than to relieve the sick."—Mother M. ALPHONSA LATHROP, O.S.D., Hawthorne, N.Y.

Such disinterested and reliable testimony should convince everyone of the merits of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic to build up health and strength for all weakened and nervous conditions, whether caused from overwork, worry or chronic coughs and colds. If Vinol fails to benefit we return your money.

A Story of Ranch Life

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Not only boys read stories of deeds of heroism. Girls sometimes absorb them and fall in love with the heroes. As a young girl I doted on such stories. Soldier boys were my favorites, but I conceived a great admiration for the western cowboy. Having come from a refined family and lived in the east, where I never saw a cowboy, it is quite possible that had I met one of them my illusion would have disappeared like thin mist before the sun's rays.

The typical cowboy or cowpuncher, as he is called, I was told later, murders the king's English, the corners of his mouth are gummed with tobacco juice, his every third word is an oath, and he gets drunk whenever he finds an opportunity. I don't mean to say that there are not quiet, respectable young men among them, but the majority don't pretend to be carpet knights.

When I was nineteen years old my brother, after graduating at college, concluded to make a ranchman of himself and, going to the west, purchased and stocked a ranch. He wrote glowing letters about the life he led, riding over his broad acres, watching his herds increase, and seemed rather pleased with the lawlessness of a country wherein every man was his own attorney and his revolver his constable. He sent home a photograph of himself on horseback, a sombrero on his head, a lariat at his saddlebow and a revolver at his hip. It fired my imagination, and I thought how fine it would be for me to have a lover rigged out in the same fashion.

A time came when he wrote me to make him a visit. I was wild to go, but my parents objected. However, I was so persistent in my entreaties that they at last consented. Having no escort, I was obliged to travel most of the way alone. My brother wrote me that he would send some one to escort me over the last sixty miles since the journey was through a rough country and he was unwilling that I should pass over it alone. This distance was made up of fifty miles of railway and ten of wagon travel. The man I was to meet would wear a yellow ribbon in his buttonhole. He would pass through the train and I was to stop him when he reached me and ask if he was John Carrington.

When Mr. Carrington came slowly walking down the aisle of the car I saw that he fulfilled my ideas of the man I would like to love and be loved by. Though roughly dressed in flannel shirt and trousers and a light coat, he showed unmistakable signs of being to the manner born. How many pistols and knives he carried on his person I did not know, but one huge revolver was stuck in his belt in front.

In a buttonhole of his coat he carried a yellow ribbon which I recognized at once as having held together a bundle of cigars. This assured me that he was the man I was to meet, and I addressed him, asking him if he were not Mr. Carrington. His face broke into a beautiful smile, and he lifted his sombrero and took a seat beside me.

Mr. Carrington told me that he had a ranch near my brother's and that they, being the only two gentlemen in the neighborhood, had become fast friends. My brother had mentioned my coming, and Carrington had asked permission to be my escort over the latter part of the journey. Of course I realized that he would relish the care of a young girl, since he had probably not seen one of his own class for a long while.

I found Mr. Carrington a very agreeable conversationalist. I asked him why he wore a revolver in front instead of at the hip, where the heroes I had read about carried their weapons. His reply was not very satisfactory. I learned afterward that the trains had been often robbed, and he desired to have his "gun" where he could grasp it in the shortest possible time. The reason why he did not tell me this was because he did not wish to frighten me. Nevertheless his being thus armed naturally suggested danger to me, and I felt how fine it would be to be protected by him.

We had passed over the principal part of the journey. The train was by no means full, and my escort in order to give me more room turned over the back of the seat in front and sat there facing me. I was looking out through the window when I heard the forward door thrown open with a bang and the words pronounced in a quick, sharp, angry tone:

"Hands up, all!"

A man entered the car, while another immediately closed the door and stood with his back against it, a carbine at his shoulder, pointed down the aisle. The first man had no arms in his hand whatever. Only a few seconds elapsed before I heard the same banging of the rear door and, turning, saw a man standing in the same relative position as the one in front, also with a rifle sweeping the car.

I looked at Mr. Carrington, expecting to see him draw his revolver and open fire. He did no such thing, but sat without making a motion for defense. The man whose hands were free advanced, calling on the passengers to give up their valuables, which they did very quickly. If any one lagged the robber had only to put his hand to his hip to hurry him. There were but few persons in advance of Mr. Carrington and myself, and the collector was upon us almost immediately. Catching sight of the revolver in Carrington's belt, the robber jerked it out and thrust it in his own belt. Carrington gave up all the money he had in his pocket, which was merely enough for the journey's expenses.

"You're pretty enough to kiss," said the robber to me, "and I'm going to have one."

With that he stooped and kissed me. I shrank as far as I could, but dared not offer any further resistance. I saw that Carrington winced at this treatment, but he did not raise a finger to protect me. The robber passed on without asking me for my valuables, and both I and my escort sat perfectly still, as did the other passengers, till I saw the man with the carbine in front step out on to the platform and jump off the car. Then I heard the rear door open and shut and surmised that we were free of the robbers.

I was so filled with anger and contempt for my escort that without a word I arose from my seat and took another. Had he made any protest whatever against the insult the robber had put upon me by kissing me I might have been less pronounced in showing my feelings. Besides, the episode completely changed my admiration for the western fighting man, especially one who had been charged by my brother to protect me.

What Carrington did after this I knew not at the time, for I made the rest of the journey alone. When we reached the station at which I was to leave the train the news of the robbery had preceded us. When I stepped on the platform my brother was there listening to Carrington, who was talking to him in a very earnest and rapid manner. As [illegible] I stepped down from the car Carrington left him, and I heard the latter say, "Not a word till I see you again." Then he made off, and Bob came up and took me in his arms.

"Poor girl!" he said. "This has been a sad introduction for you into this lawless country. I should not have brought you out here."

"You should have sent a man and not a coward for my escort," I replied, still burning under the insult I had received and the absence of resentment on the part of Mr. Carrington.

Bob led me to a four mule team he had in waiting, then went off for my baggage, and when he returned I conversed with him, principally about the holdup, ignoring Mr. Carrington's action, or, rather, want of action, Bob not mentioning it himself. On reaching the ranch house I was shown to my room, and the reaction from my excitement brought on a flood of tears.

However, a rest brought back my composure, and I tried to look forward to enjoying ranch life, though my first experience in the region had been by no means pleasant. Mr. Carrington did not appear, and I felt quite sure that I would see nothing of him after the cowardly manner in which he had permitted me to be insulted. I did not ask Bob what had become of him, and Bob did not mention him to me. I inferred that Bob had been disappointed in him, but that he did not wish to make the matter worse by discussing it.

On the third morning after my arrival Bob came to my door earlier than I had been accustomed to rise and called to me:

"Get up, Bess. Ned Carrington is here and wishes to see you."

"Indeed!" I replied. "If Mr. Carrington wishes to see me he can call at a proper hour."

"He has something to show you. Don't keep him waiting."

My curiosity being aroused, I got out of bed, dressed myself and went down stairs. Bob met me in the great hall and led me out on to the veranda. There stood Mr. Carrington and a dozen other men, some of whom were mounted and some holding their horses by the bridle. There were three others loaded with chains. One of these I recognized as the robber who had kissed me. Carrington turned to me and said:

"I have brought this villain here to apologize for insulting you. If I had lifted a finger to protect you at the time I would have been shot dead by a man at one end or the other of the car, besides causing these men to shoot up the car, possibly killing you, among others. On reaching the station I called together a posse. We made after the robbers, got wind of their whereabouts, tracked them there and succeeded in getting them." Then, turning to the robber who had kissed me, he said:

"Apologize."

The man stood mute. Carrington struck him on the head with his revolver, causing a stream of blood to flow down his face.

"Apologize!" roared Carrington again, cocking his revolver.

"Take them away, boys," said Bob. "We have no use for them around here."

The robbers were led away. I supposed, to jail, but I question if they ever saw a jail, for this was the third robbery they had committed, and when Bob said "we have no use for them" I fancy he meant to shoot them.

Mr. Carrington had evidently not relished my treatment of him, for he immediately withdrew and could only be induced to appear again at the ranch after a letter of apology from me, in which I approved his action in the car and begged his forgiveness.

That was a good while ago. We are none of us ranchers now. We all live in the east, and I am Mrs. Carrington.

It is efficient, very flexible and unusually compact.

This new motor gives the car the power of a locomotive.

Come in and let us introduce you to this "new thoroughbred."

It is the lowest price at which Chalmers quality has ever been sold.

M'MILLAN IN BRITISH ARMY

Nephew of Late Michigan Senator Now Subject of King.

DETROIT — William Northrup McMillan, St. Louis millionaire, a cousin of Philip McMillan, Detroit capitalist, and a nephew of the late Senator James McMillan, has become a British subject and is fighting in the allied armies in Europe.

Mr. McMillan has been made a lieutenant in the Twenty-fifth Royal Fusiliers of the British army and is now serving either in British East Africa or at the Dardanelles. When last heard from him here he was at Gibralter. He is reported as saying that all of his English friends had joined the army and gone to war, and he enlisted to be with them. It was necessary, however, for him to become a subject to the United Kingdom before he could obtain a commission in the army.

RESTRICTS TO ACTUAL DATE

Michigan Saloons Can Open on Observance Days, Is Law.

LANSING, MICH. — Under a ruling rendered by the attorney general's department when Franz C. Kuhn was head of the state's legal department in 1911, saloons are not required to close upon the Monday following a legal holiday.

This year Memorial day and Independence day will be observed on Monday. May 30 falls on Sunday as does July 4. Prior to 1911 there was a state statute requiring saloons to close on certain holidays when the observance took place on Monday, but that section of the law was repealed by the legislature four years ago.

LYTTON GAMBLE IS TO BE WEST POINTER

We clip the following from the Coldwater Daily Reporter of May 22nd

Tecumseh people will be interested in the article as Dr and Mrs Gamble are both old Tecumseh residents. Mrs. Gamble will be remembered as Miss Alida James and whatever pertains to them and theirs is of special interest.

As a result of the competitive examination held in Kalamazoo May 18, Congressman J. M. C. Smith has made Lytton D. Gamble principal appointee to a cadetship at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. As first alternate, Arthur Gillespie of Battle Creek is named.

Both boys take the entrance examinations at Fort Sheridan next week and if the principal fails to pass, the alternate becomes the appointee from this congressional district. Lytton Gamble is the youngest son of Dr and Mrs. E. F. Gamble of this city and is at present a student in the local high school. The young man will carry with him the well wishes of a host of friends in his new undertaking.

RECOMMEND

Ida M. Tarbell, well known authority on American labor conditions, and special writer for the American Magazine, visited the Chalmers Motor Company the other day. She took an inspection tour of the factory under the direction of a Chalmers official.

The primary reason for Miss Tarbell's visit was the accumulation of data preparatory to a series of articles on safety precautions in automobile plants. She pronounced the conditions existing throughout the Chalmers factory to be ideal. Commenting upon the findings of her tour she said, "I was especially impressed by the exquisite landscape gardening which sets off the Chalmers plant. It is one of the most beautiful factory sites in the whole country.

"Quite frequently in my travels I find that a classic facade often conceals a gloomy and unhealthful interior. But I find that the Chalmers plant is light and airy throughout. Sunshine and ozone, you know, are two very necessary and at the same time two very rare complements of the modern factory.

"I find that every safeguard is taking against accident. The machines which menace human safety are well muzzled."

At the termination of her visit at the factory, Miss Tarbell was taken for a spin about Detroit in a Chalmers Master Six.

RURAL AMERICA BEAUTIFUL

The time is not far distant when the country roads of America will be as picturesque as those in Europe. In several states we can see the beginnings of a concerted movement for the beautification of the landscapes. In Iowa, for instance, the landscape experts of the horticultural department of the State College are giving assistance to many towns and communities in the laying out, parking and landscaping of roads, streets, school grounds, parks and cemeteries and their surroundings. Requests are already coming in from farmers and rural dwellers for advice and assistance in farmstead planting, re-forestization, roadside parking and other projects. Turning the cow-pastures into parks leaves them as good and sometimes better as far as the cows are concerned, and they are easier to look at as parks. The movement will spread. It costs little and means much.

PACKERS IN THREAT TO STARVE ENGLAND

Will Shut Off Meat Supply If Terms Are Not Agreed To.

NEW YORK — A Washington dispatch says: "With a threat of cutting England off from her meat supplies in North and South America unless she yields to their terms and allows the unrestricted importation of meat into neutral European countries contiguous to Germany, representatives of Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Morris & Co. and Sulzberger & Co., the four great Chicago packing-houses gathered here to lay their case before the United States government. The packers declare they control the meat supply of both South and North America and that they can starve England unless she yields.

"Great Britain now has, they say, $2,500,000 worth of their products tied up in British ports, which was seized by British warships while en route to neutral ports on that ground that it was intended for consumption in Germany.

"The claims of the packers against Great Britain have been before the state department for several months. It is understood Great Britain is willing to pay for such cargoes as the British warships detain and to allow to them entire freedom if they will agree to limit their shipments to the neutral countries to the amount normally consumed by those countries. However, the packers have refused to make any such agreement."

TRAIN HITS RIG; ONE DYING

Mrs. E. G. Faunce, Alma, Fatally Hurt in Crossing Accident.

ALMA, MICH. — Mrs. E. G. Faunce, living north of this city, was probably fatally injured and her husband and baby cut when their rig was struck by an Ann Arbor passenger train, several miles north of Alma.

After the accident they were loaded on the train and hurried to a local hospital.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

Pictures at the Bradley

Commencing next Monday night (May 31st) the management of the Bradley Opera House will give his patrons all of the best in motion pictures instead of just part as arrangements have been made to show the World Film Corporation pictures in his house on Mondays in addition to the Paramount program which is now being shown on Thursdays.

The World Film pictures are made from the very best plays of Wm. A. Brady; The Shuberts; The Liebler Company; Chas. E. Blaney, etc. each one produced on an elaborate scale with the original stars in the cast. The greatest plays, producers, authors and stars that command $2.00 seats on Broadway are yours for a ten cent admission, when we tell you that you will see such stars as Lillian Russell in "Wildfire"; Clara Kimball Young in "The Deep Purple"; Lew Fields in "Old Dutch"; Wilton Lackaye in "The Pit" at a 10 cent admission. It seems almost impossible but such is the fact and these are only a few as space will premit of us only giving you an idea of what you can expect on this wonderful program. Many of the plays are produced at a cost of thousands of dollars for special costumes and scenery.

The first picture of this big program will be shown next Monday Wilton Lackaye in "The Pit" supported by Gail and Milton Sills in the leading roles. The play is a very thrilling production including many scenes on Wall street. One very elaborate scene is taken in one of the New York theatres.

This program will in no way affect the Paramount program which we control for Thursday nights, but instead of one big feature night each week, these arrangements will give you two. See the best in the world, don't let a nickle staud between you and these wonderful productions.

PERSONAL PROPERTY IS PLACED ON ROLLS

SAGINAW, MICH. — City assessors of Michigan are looking towards Saginaw since the result of the assessments in this city has placed Wellington R. Burt on the rolls for $800,000 and Geo. L. Burrows for $500,000 in personal property. State assessors are writing to City Assessor Spindler stating their troubles. Many admit they know that personal property assessments are woefully low, but that they are surrounded by peculiar conditions. All of the assessors are congratulating Mr. Spindler on his stand.

It is believed that the action of the Saginaw assessor and the board of review and finally of Mayor Paddock and his colleagues in the council in backing up the assessor, has opened the eyes of assessors in the state to such an extent that personal property will find much more prominence on the rolls next year than it did this year.

Millionaires in Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Detroit and Muskegon are going to feel the raise next year, it is said. Mr. Spindler says he simply did his duty as best he knew, but that he could have put Mr. Burt on for $5,000,000 personal property instead of $1,000,000 if he had wanted to.

BERLIN CLAIMS 2 VICTORIES

Official Statement Says Allies Lost in Drives Against German Lines.

BERLIN — Defeat for the allies, with extremely heavy losses in two distinct drives against the German lines in the last twenty-four hours, is reported in official dispatches.

Between Neuve Chapelle and Givenchy the British launched several attacks during the night. German machine guns raked the highways and the fields. The enemy retired, leaving the ground between the trenches strewn with dead and wounded. The French are making reckless attempts to capture the northern slopes of the Lorette hills. In the fighting here, near Ablain and south of Neuville the French losses have been exceptionally heavy.

MRS. HORACE HAND

Abagail Green was born in Pittsfield, Mass., July 25, 1837.

Feb. 1st 1865 she was united in marriage to Horace A. Hand coming to Michigan the following spring and settling in the township of Macon. In July of the same year she united with the Methodist church in Ridgeway of which she has since been a faithful and consistant member. To this union were born five children, two of which await the Mother's coming to the realm of of light. Her husband, three children nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren survive her.

The funeral services were held at the home in which she had lived for the past thirty-two years. S. P. Smith of Ridgeway having charge of the burial, Rev. Somers officiating.

If we who knew her best might speak in terms that are fitting we would say that there are few women so faithful and devoted in all the relations of life and to this was added the graces of the Christian life. Though long and severely tried she manifested patience and resignation to the will of her Heavenly Father often complaining that she was not patient enough and expressing doubts and fears, which it is needless to say were not shared by the others. Death had no terror for her she talked of it with calmness and resignation to the last. Tenderly, reverently and affectionately we laid her away to rest in the little cemetery so near her home and dropped a tear of sorrow o'er the grave of one who was a devoted wife and mother and a friend to everyone.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to the kind friends and neighbors who so willingly assisted us in the care and burial of our dear mother and to the Ladies Aid for the beautiful floral offering; also to Rev. Somers for the comforting words spoken.

DUTCH SEND PROTEST NOTE TO GERMANY

THE HAGUE — The government of the Netherlands has sent a note to Germany protesting against the sinking May 7 of the Cunard line steamer Lusitania by a German submarine.

The contents of this note are substantially the same as those of the American communication on the same subject.

The lives of several Dutch subjects were lost when the Lusitania was torpedoed.

WE NOW HAVE "TELESCRIBE"

WEST ORANGE, N. J. — That he has finished his thirty-eight years of labor on a new invention which he has styled the "telescribe" was the announcement of Thomas A. Edison at his laboratory here.

The device will record telephone conversations even though speakers are 3,000 miles apart, and a simple, small box on a business man's desk will be his guarantee against misunderstanding language used by him to others, as well as an insurance that he got messages to himself accurately.

German Reply to U. S. Delayed.

BERLIN — Germany's reply to the American note will not be ready for several days. Officials of the foreign office are so occupied with the Italian developments that they have had no time to elaborate the draft of the note.

Hog Cholera Cost State $1,000,000.

EAST LANSING, MICH. — Dr. Ward Giltner, head of the bacteriology department of the Michigan Agricultural college, estimates the loss to Michigan farmers this year from hog cholera at about $1,000,000.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MRS. JOSEPH B. VAN NESS

The community was greatly shocked Wednesday morning when the word came that Mrs Lizzie VanNess had passed away. She had been in poor health for a number of years, but was feeling quite well that morning and was at the telephone ordering her groceries when she complained that she could not think. In trying to sit down she fell to the floor. Help was called at once and the doctor arrived in a few moments, but all too late. She lingered for about three hours when the end came to her sufferings, death resulting from apoplexy.

Mrs. VanNess has spent most of her life in Tecumseh and vicinity and has a host of friends who will mourn her sudden taking away.

Lizzie Thompson was born December 1st, 1870, in the Township of Raisin. On March 13, 1895, she became the wife of Joseph B. VanNess and has spent all of her married life in Tecumseh. She leaves beside her husband, her mother, Mrs. L. B. Thompson, who has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. VanNess for a number of years, her sister Mrs. Alen Titus and family of the immediate family circle

Funeral services will be conducted at her late home at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon by her pastor Rev. W. B. Hartzog with burial in Brookside cemetery.

HOW TO DESTROY CATARRH GERMS AND END CATARRH FOREVER

Catarrh, according to a noted authority, is a germ disease and the only way to cure it so it will stay cured and never come back is to kill and drive out of your system the catarrhal germs which have found lodgement there. When the germs go the catarrh will stop.

There is nothing better for destroying catarrh germs than breathing into your nose and lungs the pleasant, soothing, healing, germ destroying air of Hyomei pronounced High-o-me) made from purest oil of Eucalyptus and combined with other powerful healing, antiseptic and germ destroying ingredients. Hyomei penetrates and heals the inflamed swollen membranes of your nose and throat, stops discharges, clears the passages and completely overcomes the disease by destroying its cause. For catarrh germs cannot live in your body after Hyomei reaches them. C. A. Wright & Son and many other good druggist in Tecumseh and vicinity have long sold Hyomei on a positive guaran- of successful results or money back and find this generous policy pays. adv

PALESTINE, THE HOLY LAND

Rev Geo W. Jennings at the M. E. Church Tuesday Evening

Rev. Geo. W. Jennings gave his lecture on "Palestine and The Holy Land" at the M. E. church Tuesday evening. The house was well filled despite the stormy night and those who attended were amply repaid for their efforts in braving the storm.

Rev. Jennings is a talented speaker and took his audience with him on this most delightful trip to the Holy Land. Stops were made along the way, at Athens, Seville, Egypt and other points, entering the Holy Land at Joppa. From Damascus he went to Jerusalem on the Lake of Gallilee, to Cana, Samaria, Judea and Gallilee.

He was listened to with rapt attention while he described these places made dear to every heart by association with the life of Christ.

This lecture was given under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist church and netted them a neat sum of money.

Whooping Cough

"About a year ago my three boys had whooping cough and I found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the only one that would relieve their coughing and whooping spells. Baking Powder Biscuits

Light as a Feather

Baking Powder Biscuits made by this recipe are so far ahead of ordinary baking powder biscuits that, if once tried, you will never use any other recipe. Try it the next time you run short of bread. Save this recipe. 29

K C Baking Powder Biscuits

Three cups flour; ¼ to ½ cup shortening; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; about 1 cup milk or water; 1 teaspoonful salt.

Sift three times, the flour, salt and baking powder. Work into the flour the shortening, using lard or butter for shortening. Then mix to a very soft dough with the milk. The softer the biscuit enters the oven, the lighter it comes out. Never knead baking powder biscuits; press the dough into shape and roll lightly. Cut in small shapes and bake on a sheet or very shallow pan in a hot oven. In placing biscuits in the pans place well apart, not allowing edges to touch. Small biscuits are better than large ones. Large biscuits do not have the proper amount of time to raise and bake.

Have you seen the new K C Cook's Book? Brimful of appetizing recipes that simply must be successful every time if the few simple directions are carefully followed. You would gladly pay 50 cents for this valuable book, yet we send it absolutely free upon receipt of the colored certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder. JAQUES MFG. Co., Chicago. Small cans do not have Cook's Book certificates.

HUDSON Six-40 for 1915

New Price $1,550 F. O. B. Detroit

THE 1915 GEM

The HUDSON Six-40 for 1915 offers 32 surprises.

Last year it seemed that no car could be better. And it seemed that quality cars could never sell lower.

But the HUDSON engineers—headed by Howard E. Coffin—have brought out 31 new features. And a trebled output—due to overwhelming demand—will reduce the price $200.

It is handsomer—better-equipped. Just think—48 engineers for one whole year have worked exclusively on refinements. Yet the price—which was never approached in a quality car—has been lowered by $200.

You will find in this new model the jewel car of the year—the final ideal in a Six. You will find many attractions shown in no other car. And a price which no one considered possible until Hudson made it possible.

Sample car can be seen at the Co-Operative Co's show room. Phone 256 for demonstration.

PAIGE

"The Standard of Value and

See The Paige "Six"—That's All

Not Only The Best Price—But The Best Quality
Not Only The Best Six—But The Best Motor Car

That Is The Paige "Six-46"

IT doesn't matter if you don't own a car or intend to own a car or know anything about motor cars. We want you to see the Paige "Six-46"—simply because it opens a new epoch in the progress of mechanical science. We want you to see the Paige "Six-46," not only because we believe it marks the highest development of motor car designing, engineering and construction in this country, but also because we believe it to be a mechanical achievement as near perfection as human brains and human experience can make it. And the price is $1395.

See other "Sixes"—all other "Sixes." Disregard the price. Look for quality. Compare the essentials of motor car values. Look at the motors of all "Sixes." The motor means power, flexibility, speed, service. Look at the body designs for beauty, distinction. Look at the spring suspension. That means easy riding. Look at the lighting and starting equipments. They mean luxurious motoring—or otherwise. Look at the wheelbase and roominess and upholstery. They mean comfort. Look at the lubrication and ignition and carburetion and the clutch. They mean reliable service and safety.

Then look at the Paige "Six-46!"

Paige-Continental motor 3½ x 5¼: Exquisite body design of latest European style: Cantilever spring suspension: Gray & Davis electric lighting and starting system: 124 inches of wheelbase and a big roomy seven-passenger body: Combination pressure and splash lubricating system: Bosch magneto: Rayfield carburetor: Multiple disc cork-insert clutch. And a dozen more Super-Value features.

How much more then should you pay for the Paige "Six-46?"

But you pay less—Vastly less.

Other "Sixes" cost $100, $200 and $400 more than the Paige.

The Paige "Six-46" is $1395.

So see them all. Convince yourself—

A party of about 40 motored to Ridgeway Tuesday night to enjoy a dinner served by the ladies of the M. E Church of Ridgeway. Guests were present from Ypsilanti, Tecumseh and Adrian. The dinner was a very bountiful one, and the evening was spent in speaking and a social good time. As the mud was quite thick we have failed to hear if all of the party reached their homes in safety.

If the party who took the fixtures from the Coller House bathroom will return them, they will avoid prosecution and no question will be asked. adv

Mrs. Nellie Scattergood of Alma, district deputy will conduct the session. The Adrian sisters will do the initiatory work. A large attendance is expected including several grand officers, Mrs. Anna Jenne, grand chief of Eaton Rapids, Mrs. Addie Kemp, grand senior, of Tipton, Mrs. Josephine H. Hall a past grand chief, of Hudson and Mrs. Metta Stoffiett on the Law Committee, of Ann Arbor. The meeting will be called at 9:30 a. m.

This convention celebrates the tenth year that Mrs. Scattergood has been district deputy of this district.

THE McKINLEY PLAYERS

The McKinley Players who are at the Bradley Opera House all this week certainly are keeping up to their standard as "the best stock company on the road." Last night they presented Joe Weber's big musical sensation, "Alma, Where Do You Live?" to a big audience and to say that that every one was highly pleased is putting it very mild. There are very few stock companies that can play a singing show but the McKinley Players presented the entire piece with all of the musical numbers in a manner that would give credit to a dollar attraction. Miss McKinley was especially fine as "Alma" undoubtly due to the fact that she was featured in Joe Webers own western company of Alma for several seasons. Each lady was presented with a program printed on pretty flowered ribbon.

This excellent company have three more preformances in our city, to-night they will present "A Minister's Sweetheart"-Saturday afternoon for their matinee bill they present Gus Hill's big comedy "It a Long Way to Tipperary". Gus Hill has had two big one night attractions out all season playing this same big comedy at matinee prices. The last performance, Saturday night, will be William Faversham's big success "The Squaw Man" which will prove one of the best bills of the entire seven presented here.

BUSINESS MEN'S MEETING

HELD IN TECUMSEH CLUB ROOMS

Wednesday Evening.

There was a good turnout of representative business men of Tecumseh at the meeting held in the Club rooms Wednesday evening.

The meeting was called to discuss the problem of boosting Tecumseh and formulating plans for a Co-operative scheme of advertising by which Tecumseh merchants could reach a maximum number of people and making Tecumseh the trade center for this section of the country.

This does not mean that Tecumseh has not enjoyed a splendid trade, but rather that Tecumseh merchants feel that there is much trade that should come to this town that does not come, and that by Co-operative measures entered into by our business men the people in our rural districts tributary to town, can be induced to come here to trade.

The object of the meeting was stated by F. S. Anderson, who called upon J. J Belcher to act as chairman.

Chairman Belcher briefly reviewed some of the things that he hoped could be brought out at this meeting and called on those present for remarks, and ideas along these lines.

The spirit shown at this meeting is the spirit that usually accomplishes something and brought our many ideas that were of value. Some of the talent shown at this time, might be likened to a candle under a bushel whose light was hidden from view, but when removed it threw its light about and was seen and admired. So it was with some who expressed themselves, ideas which had been hidden but when expressed brought up many good suggestions.

Prominent among the suggestions made at this meeting, was the proposition of co-operative advertising the means by which the merchants join together to advertise, and distribute among the homes of the farmers and people living in the territory adjacent to Tecumseh.

A committee was chosen composed of F. S. Anderson chairman, Lester Coller, Leon Temple, Leon Rosacrans, and Clyde Barber These were chosen to formulate ways and means by which this could be accomplished They were instructed to report at a similar meeting to be called next Monday evening at the same time and place.

Among other things discussed were entertainments for our visitors, base ball, band concerts, matinees, celebration of holidays, with the idea of making Tecumseh more popular to our friends out side. Good roads was also touched upon, making our highways more passable, Also a rest room with ample toilet facilities.

At the meeting Monday next a movement will be make to have every business place in town represented. And we urge the business men of Tecumseh to make it a special effort to attend this meeting and co-operate for the best interest of Tecumseh.

RUSSIANS CHECK GERMANS' DRIVE

Czar's Troops Compel Enemy to Give Ground in East.

BRITISH DRIVEN OUT BY GAS

Sir John French Admits Loss of Trenches at Ypres by Use of Poisonous Fluid—Fumes Fail to Budge French Who Repulse Foes With Loss.

LONDON, ENG. — On the eastern frontier the signs of check to what at one time seemed an overwhelming Austro-German offensive movement are becoming more and more apparent. Even the flying wedge which was driven into the Russian center along the River San has been compelled to give some ground by the energetic counter attacks of the Russians.

British Routed by Gas.

LONDON, ENG. — Asphyxiating gases and poisonous shells have once more enabled the Germans to penetrate the British lines east of Ypres. A report from General Sir John French says the Germans attacked at 3 o'clock in the morning under cover of a heavy fire of shells, containing stupefying gases, and forced the British to evacuate some of their trenches at two or three places in the line.

The fighting is still in progress, says French, and some of the last trenches already have been regained. Gas warfare also was waged north of Ypres against the French and Belgians, but Paris reports that the attacks failed. The French replied by bombarding the German ship yards at Raverzyde, southwest of Ostend, and a vigorous artillery duel followed.

In Northern France the fighting seems to be proceeding in favor of the allies, although General French fails to mention the progress of the battle on the line from Arras to Lille. Paris, however, declares the British have made further progress north of LaBassee and that a determined German attack north of Neuville was checked by artillery fire.

The Germans defending Notre Dame de Lorette are declared by the French statement issued at night to have been annihilated, although Berlin reports that French attacks on the northern slopes of the Lorette hills were repulsed. This battle, which has been waging for several weeks with furious bayonet attacks and counter attacks, is developing into one of the fiercest on the western front. Paris reported a few days ago that the plateau of Lorette was in French hands, but the German statement disputes this claim.

Rome Gives Approval to Plan to Prevent Separate Peace With Dual Alliance—Kaiser Will Direct War on New Foe—Italian Destroyer Ruins Shipping in Harbor of Buso.

ROME, ITALY— Official announcement was made by the war office that Italian forces had penetrated Austria, occupying Caporetto, the heights between the Judnio and Isonzo, and the towns of Cormons, Cervignano and Terzo.

LONDON — Five or six civilians were killed, and a train traveling at full speed was struck by a shell, during the Austrian bombardment of the Italian town of Ancona, according to dispatches from the Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail, published here.

"The fire of the warships damaged part of the railroad station and five engines," said the Mail's correspondent. "The damage to the port was insignificant. That in the town was somewhat more extensive."

LONDON — Italy has given her adhesion to the agreement already signed by the allied powers not to conclude a separate peace. The signature of a formal document to this effect is imminent.

LONDON — The Rome correspondent of the Daily Chronicle telegraphs that the kaiser is reported to be about to take personal command of the troops operating against Italy. According to Swiss reports, the emperor is advising the Austrian commanders to delay battle against the Italians until he can take charge of the armies.

ROME — Italy has delivered her first aggressive strokes both on land and sea. Italian cavalry crossed the Austrian border in the Isonzo district, attacked a strong enemy outpost and forced the Austrians to retire after a sharp engagement.

Makes Raid on Austrian Port.

Official announcement was made that an Italian destroyer shelled the Austrian harbor of Porto Buso, at the head of the Adriatic, sinking an Austrian motor-boat flotilla and destroying the quay, landing stage and military barracks. The enemy lost two men killed. The destroyer took forty-seven prisoners, among them one officer and fifteen non-commissioned officers, who were landed at Venice. There were no casualties aboard the destroyer.

MOTHER SUPERIOR ROSARY HILL HOME

Rosary Hill Home, Hawthorne, N.Y. —"I have been at work among the sick and poor for nearly eighteen years, and whenever I have used Vinol for rundown, weak or emaciated patients, they have been visibly benefited by it. One patient, a young woman, was so weak and ill she could hardly creep to my door for aid, and was leaning on a friend's arm. I supplied Vinol to her liberally and in a month when she returned to thank me I hardly recognized her. She was strong, her color charming and her cheeks rounded out. These words are uttered from my heart, in order that more people may know about Vinol, as there is nothing makes me happier in the world than to relieve the sick."—Mother M. ALPHONSA LATHROP, O.S.D., Hawthorne, N.Y.

Such disinterested and reliable testimony should convince everyone of the merits of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic to build up health and strength for all weakened and nervous conditions, whether caused from overwork, worry or chronic coughs and colds. If Vinol fails to benefit we return your money.

CINDERELLA ROSE

How She Met Her Prince Charming.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Rose Lathrop addressed the last envelope, slipped its inclosure inside, sealed and stamped it and yawned wearily.

It was 5 o'clock of a March afternoon, and the Kendals' library looked like a casket of glowing jewels.

To be Mrs. Kendal's private secretary had one disadvantage—Mrs. Jeremiah Kendal paid such high wages to her chef and her chauffeur, her butler and her French maid that she economized on the salary of her secretary. So Rose Lathrop, who should have received at the least $20 a week, accepted $10 and made the best of it.

"Some day," dreamed Rose in the library, "I shall write a book, and then —then I shall go back to mother and father."

There was a tap at the door, and a trim little maid entered.

"Miss Lathrop, Miss Hazel says will you please come and see her before you go home?"

"Tell her, Celeste, that I will be there in ten minutes."

She hurried a little, for she did not want to keep Hazel Kendal waiting.

"Oh, good afternoon, Cinderella Rose!" she called playfully. "Do come and drink a cup of tea with me and talk! I want to growl at some one. Do you mind?"

"Not a bit," laughed Rose, drawing a chair to the fire and sitting down. "You are such a gentle bear, Miss Kendal!"

"Appearances are deceitful. I feel so fierce and unreasonable. You know tonight is the night of Mrs. Carter Philly's bal masque. Oh, Cinderella Rose, I want to go!" Hazel smiled, but her eyes were full of rebellious tears.

"I am so sorry," said Rose, putting down her teacup. "I wish there was something a poor Cinderella could do to help you."

"There is," said Hazel, blinking the tears away and biting into a pink frosted cake.

"Oh, tell me! I shall be so happy if I can," said Rose, remembering all the pleasures Hazel had put in her way.

"I'll tell you—listen," said Hazel, drawing the little secretary close beside her. "Tonight is Mrs. Carter Philly's bal masque. I am all ready to go, and now I cannot. But somebody will be there who is going away. I want to get a message to him before he sails tomorrow. Will you take it, Cinderella?"

"How can I?" asked Rose blankly.

"Wear my dress. We are the same size. Deliver my message to him. I thought perhaps he would come and say goodby, but it is too late now. And, oh, Rose, it is all my fault, and I don't blame him a bit! But if I could get a message to him tonight he would come before midnight."

"Tell me what to do, Miss Kendal, and I shall be happy to do the best I can," said Rose gently.

"You are a darling, Cinderella," she cried, and then went on rapidly: "My costume hangs in the wardrobe yonder. I was going as Cinderella, with my hair in curls and such picturesque rags and tatters, Rose!"

She gave Rose many other instructions and finally sent her home in a taxicab, with a great bundle of clothing.

"I shall be terribly frightened," whispered Rose ere she went, but added, "I shall send your Prince Charming to you, Miss Kendal."

Rose kissed her hand and vanished.

Hazel Kendal's idea of Cinderella's rags was indeed, amusing.

Rags and tatters, but picturesque ones, of rose and gray china silk, with smoke colored silk stockings and slippers.

Rose leaned back on the soft cushions and was whirled uptown to Mrs Carter Philly's mansion.

She laughed as she thought of the letter she would write to her parents. If they could only see her now in all her ragged splendor!

Later, up in Mrs. Carter Philly's dressing room, Rose felt a thrill of fear at going down among so many strangers, but the crowd of girls and women in picturesque costumes accepted her as one of their own set and playfully tried to guess her identity, and presently she was in the brilliantly lighted ballroom.

While gayly attired figures came and went Rose's eyes were on the alert for one who might be Archie Brooke.

It was very confusing, for there were two young men dressed as Prince Charming. One was short and dark, the other tall and fair, but their features were concealed.

Just then the tall prince came up to her.

"Ah, Cinderella, you must have saved a dance for the prince!" he said.

"There are two princes," retorted Rose.

"How did you guess that I couldn't dance the modern dances?" she asked after awhile.

"My mother doesn't approve of 'em," he said and then hastened to cover his blunder by remarks about their companions.

Rose was remembering something Hazel had told her about Mrs. Carter Philly's son, who was home on leave. He was a lieutenant in the army, stationed in the southwest.

"It must be Lieutenant Philly," she thought with an inexplicable throb of relief that this was not Hazel's Archie Brooke.

It was a wonderful dance, and when it was over he begged for another later on, and Rose was left to dance with the other men who crowded around.

All at once, in an interval, the other prince stood bowing before her.

"Will you dance with me, Cinderella?" he asked, and when they were gliding around he whispered tensely:

"Is it you, Hazel?" and then Rose knew that he was Archie Brooke. "You said you were going as Cinderella," he added in an unhappy tone.

"Come into the conservatory, Mr. Brooke," said Rose, and when they were there she slipped Hazel's note into his hand.

"Hazel sent you this; she is sorry," she said, and he tore open the missive.

"I must go now—before it grows any later!" he exclaimed. "Will you excuse me, Miss Cinderella?" And he vanished.

She was wishing that other Prince Charming was there—the sound of his deep voice thrilled her yet.

She looked up and he was there, his dark blue eyes shining through the eyeholes of his mask.

"In another hour, Cinderella, we will unmask," he said. "May I have the supper dance with you?"

"I am sorry, prince, but I must go before the clock strikes 12."

"But I want to see your face," he protested.

"I am a Cinderella, indeed," she said in a sorrowful tone.

"And I am not to see you again?" he questioned.

"I am really Cinderella and I must go now," she said, leaving him.

"I shall know your voice anywhere!" he called after her, and her heart answered:

He sorted them over, compared them with those who he knew were present and found Hazel Kendal's.

"Was Hazel Kendal here, mother?" he asked.

"No, dear; Hazel is laid up with a sprained ankle. Do put away these cards and go to bed!"

But Tom Philly put Hazel's card in his pocket and the next day went to call upon her.

Hazel had been carried down to the library, so that it was into the mellowed light of the beautiful room that he was ushered by the butler.

"Don't go, dear," she said. "I want you to meet Lieutenant Philly, Archie's friend and mine."

At the very first sound of Rose's voice Philly went red.

"Perhaps you have met before," said Hazel mischievously. "Miss Lathrop was at your mother's ball."

"Yes, we met there," said Philly eagerly, and Rose murmured something unintelligible.

Then Hazel, to cover their confusion, explained to this friend of Archie's how she had sent Rose in the guise of Cinderella to seek Archie.

"We are to be married when Archie comes back," she concluded. "Rose has promised to be one of my bridesmaids."

"I have promised Archie that I would be his best man," he said quietly.

Martin brought the tea things in, and the three over a quiet cup cemented a triple friendship that was unchanged until Archie's return made them a quartet.

• • • • • • • •

It was after Hazel's wedding and the young couple were leaving for their new home in the west when the bride kissed her prettiest bridesmaid and held her tightly.

"Oh, Cinderella Rose," she whispered, "I am so happy about you and him!" She touched the engagement ring on Rose's finger. "Now I've lost my Cinderella! You will be a princess indeed now!"

Tom Philly's tall head bent over them.

"Didn't Cinderella marry the prince?" he asked. "Yet to him and to the fairy godmother she was always sweet Cinderella!"

"Please don't forget the fairy godmother's husband," added Archie Brooke.

BELIEVE "VISCOUNT" WORKING IN GARAGE

Anyhow Gordon-Lennox Has Benefactor In Tight Box.

Hastings, Mich., May 31.—The fugitive English "nobleman," "Viscount" Philip Cosmo Gordon-Lennox of Hastings and Charlotte, who jumped his bail bond of $200 after being convicted of wife desertion, will have to appear in the circuit court Tuesday to receive sentence or Isaac Arnold, his bondsman, will have to turn over $200 to the court.

Gordon-Lennox, who claimed to be a relative of the duke of Sutherland and to have hobnobbed with sundry British aristocrats, came to Hastings several years ago and told a romantic tale of being driven out of Nicaragua after trying to steal naval secrets from the government of that country.

In spite of the fact that he declared that his reason for going to Nicaragua was an attachment for a girl whom he had met in Paris and followed to the Central American country, the Englishman married a Hastings girl soon after his arrival here. He led a checkered career in Hastings and in Charlotte, where he gained the confidence of Isaac Arnold, who befriended him and loaned him a great deal of money on being promised that he would be repaid when the young Englishman received a fortune from England. The fortune never came. He went broke and the "viscountess" had him arrested for desertion. Mr. Arnold came to his rescue with a bond, which gave him his freedom.

Shortly afterward he and his wife disappeared. The bogus nobleman is supposed to be working in a garage in southern Ohio.

BOY, FED DRUG SINCE BIRTH, SAVED BY LAW

Vevay, Ind., May 31.—Freddie Shaw of this city, eight years old, has been cured of the morphine habit as a result of the federal anti-narcotic law. The child's mother, Mrs. Frank Shaw, fifty-five years old, who has been addicted to the use of morphine for sixteen years, has also been cured.

The case of Freddie Shaw is probably the most horrible of the kind in the history of Indiana. From the day of his birth he was fed morphine daily and when the anti-narcotic law went into effect March 1 was taking five grains of the drug twice each day. His mother, a poor woman who works for a living, was taking twelve grains each day and buying the drug by the ounce, paying $8.50 for each ounce.

About ten years ago Mrs. Shaw gave birth to a son. Before the child was born she worried about the effect her drug habit would have on the baby. She nursed the child as tenderly as possible, but the infant died in convulsions at the age of five months. Two years later, when Freddie was born, she became fearful that if she did not give the baby morphine it too would die. She gave the boy morphine from the time he was one day old until the Harrison law went into effect. The boy was thought idiotic by his teachers and left school as one incapable of learning.

During the last four weeks Freddie Shaw has gained ten pounds in weight. His cheeks have lost their death-like color and have taken on a healthy glow. is eyes are bHright and he has an intelligent look like other children.

COW KILLED AT BALL GAME.

Was Standing on Home Plate During Whirlwind Play.

Sheboygan, Wis.—During a baseball game in a field on the Walters farm, on the Upper Falls road, a cow owned by Mr. Walters was killed while standing at the home plate. The batter let the club slip when he struck at the ball, the club landing on the head of the cow and instantly killing it.

The animal was valued at $75, and the young men of the baseball team made arrangements to pay Mr. Walters for the cow.

WILSON AWAITS NATION'S ADVICE

Action on German Reply Rests on Public Opinion.

WILL REJECT KAISER'S PLEA

No Certainty of Opinion Is Found In Washington as to What Administration Will Do—Believed That Country Will Let Issue Slip by With Indifference.

Washington, May 31.—The administration has attuned its ear to catch the first expressions of public opinion which will indicate what attitude the country is going to take toward the German reply to President Wilson's note. There will be no official intimation of the administration's course of action until the keynote of public opinion has been sounded.

Of course the president and his advisers are greatly disappointed at the way Germany has met the American demands.

The president and his advisers will utilize to the utmost the interval between now and the meeting of the cabinet next Tuesday morning to guage the temper of the American people on the issue presented by the German communication.

Think Reply Will Be Rejected.

What the president already has said to Germany in his two notes on the German submarine warfare and Germany's failure to respond to the issues presented to her by this government has led to the inevitable conclusion here that it will be exceedingly difficult for the president to stop short of utterly rejecting the German reply and declaring it wholly unacceptable to the United States.

In February the president informed Germany that it would be held to a "strict accountability" for the destruction of American life and property on the high seas and that the United States would take such steps as were necessary to protect the lives of its citizens in case their rights were outraged. Their rights were outraged in several cases, whereupon the president demanded a disavowal by Germany of these acts, reparation for injuries and guarantees for the future with the implied demand that German submarine operations as at present conducted cease altogether.

To all this Germany has responded with little more than quibbles and a catechism of the United States.

There is no dissension, even among conservative officials from this view that the German note is most unsatisfactory. Yet it is a significant fact that in no quarter in Washington was there to be found any certainty of opinion as to what the administration will do about it. In diplomatic circles where it is held the German note fails completely to meet any one of the president's demands there was evidenced a deep seated belief that this government will let the issue slip into the innocuous stage of diplomatic correspondence.

Think Country Indifferent.

This belief, shared also in many other quarters, is based first on the opinion that the country itself will consent to such a course. This belief is also partly due to the knowledge that the cabinet is not united on the issue, the secretary of state leading a minority willing to go almost to any lengths on principle to avoid danger of a rupture with Germany, another section favoring the easiest course on the ground that the United States does not want war, and a third section favoring a strong course in support of the president's note regardless of the consequences.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BERLIN STALLING OVER LUSITANIA

Reply to Wilson Note Requests Agreement on Facts.

CHARGES SHIP WAS CRUISER

Communication Acknowledges Error in Gulflight and Cushing Cases—Says Falaba Tried to Escape—Holds British Owners to Blame for Loss of Lusitania Lives.

Berlin, May 31.—(Via The Hague.)—The text of the German reply to the American note regarding the Lusitania and other incidents as made public here follows:

"The imperial government has subjected the statements of the United States to careful examination and has a lively wish to contribute in a frank and friendly manner to clear up any misunderstanding which may have entered into the relations between the two governments through the events mentioned by the American note.

Indemnity for Cushing and Gulflight.

"With regard to the Cushing and Gulflight incidents the American embassy already has been informed that it is far from the German government to have any intention of ordering attacks by submarines or fliers on neutral ships in the war zone not guilty of any hostile act. On the contrary most explicit instructions repeatedly have been given the German armed forces to avoid attacking such vessels.

"If neutral ships have come to grief through German submarine warfare during the past few months by mistake, it is a question of isolated and exceptional cases which are traceable to the misuse of flags by the British, in connection with carelessness or suspicious actions on the part of ships. In all cases where a neutral vessel, through no fault of its own, has come to grief through German submarines or fliers according to the facts as ascertained by the German government, this government has expressed its regret at the unfortunate occurrence and has promised indemnification where the facts justified it. Germany will treat the cases of the American steamers Cushing and Gulflight according to the same principles. An investigation is in progress and the results will be communicated to the embassy shortly.

Says Falaba Tried to Escape.

"In the case of the sinking of the English ship Falaba, the commander of the German submarine had the intention of allowing the passengers and crew ample opportunity to save themselves. It was not until the captain disregarded the order to lay to and took to flight, sending up rockets for help, that the commander ordered the crew and passengers by signal through megaphone to leave within ten minutes. As a matter of fact he allowed them twenty-three minutes and did not fire a torpedo until suspicious vessels were hurrying to aid the Falaba.

Regrets Lusitania Loss of Life.

"With regard to the loss of life when the British passenger steamer Lusitania was sunk the German government already has expressed deep regret to neutrals concerned that nationals of those countries lost their lives. The imperial government is unable for the rest to reject the impression that certain important facts most directly connected with the sinking of the Lusitania may have escaped the attention of the American government. It therefore considers it necessary in the interests of the clear and full understanding aimed at by both governments primarily to convince itself that the reports of the facts which are before the two governments are complete and in agreement.

Says It Was Auxiliary Cruiser.

"The government of the United States proceeds from the assumption that the Lusitania is to be considered as an ordinary unarmed merchant vessel. The imperial government begs in this connection to point out that the Lusitania was one of the largest and fastest English commercial steamers constructed with government's funds as an auxiliary cruiser and is expressly included in the navy list published by the British admiralty.

"It is moreover known to the Imperial government from reliable information furnished by its officials and neutral passengers that for some time practically all the more valuable English merchant vessels have been provided with guns, ammunition and other weapons and furnished with crews especially practiced in manning guns. According to reports here, the Lusitania, when she left New York, had guns aboard which were mounted under deck and masked.

"The imperial government furthermore has the honor to direct the particular attention of the American government to the fact that the British admiralty by secret instructions in February of this year advised the British merchant marine not only to seek protection behind neutral flags and markings but even when so disguised to attack German submarines by ramming.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Gets $20,000,000.

New York, May 31.—The will of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who perished when the Lusitania went down, was filed for probate in the office of the surrogate of New York county. The will disposed of an estate estimated at more than $50,000,000. Margaret Emerson Vanderbilt, the widow, is left $2,000,000, in accordance with an antenuptial agreement made in London an additional sum of $1,000,000, and the income of a trust fund of $5,000,000. Mrs. French Vanderbilt, the divorced wife of the multi-millionaire, may sue to break the will.

Terre Haute Needs Some More.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 24.—At a meeting the county council unanimously voted to disallow the claim of Joseph Roach, S. M. McGregor and O. B. Harris for fees as special prosecutors for services during the trial of former Mayor Donn M. Roberts a year ago, although these attorneys held certificates showing they had been duly appointed by Judge Charles M. Fortune of the Vigo County Circuit court.

DECORATION DAY

Decoration day dawned bright and beautiful, and at an early hour loving friends with their tributes of remembrance visited Brookside cemetery and strewed the graves of their dear ones with flowers.

At two o'clock the Opera House was packed to its capacity with an earnest appreciative audience.

The meeting was called to order by Supt. W. L. Reed. Rev. G. W. Jennings gave the invocation after which Mrs. R. S. Moore rendered a charming solo.

Rev. Frederick Hewitt in a very effective manner gave Lincoln's Gettysburg speech and was followed by music by the Tipton band.

Leland S. Bean Prosecuting Attorney of Adrian was speaker of the day. He needs no introduction in Tecumseh as he has made many friends in his frequent visits here.

He gave a very fine address paying deep tribute to the soldiers of 61-65 both living and dead, and claimed that the Civil war one of the greatest of wars, and also that if Uncle Sam should be called upon today, he would put up a good fight. A full chorus of Sixteen voices rendered Kipling's "Lest we Forget" in a most impressive manner. At the close of the program at the Opera House, the line was formed for the march to the cemetery.

The Tipton band took the lead and was followed by the Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias, the Sons of Veterans the school children bearing the flowers, then the Old soldiers and the T. B. A. in autos and horse and buggies making a parade worthy of the day.

After the graves had been decorated brief exercises were conducted by the G. A. R. and the march was taken up for the return.

Sentence of Publisher Upheld.

Jackson, Tenn., May 31.—The sentence against Gilbert D. Raine, former publisher of the Memphis News-Scimitar, for contempt of court in publishing a circuit court order prohibiting publication of certain affidavits in a will case, was upheld by the Tennessee Supreme court. The affidavits themselves were not published. Raine has been sentenced to serve ten days in jail and pay a fine of $50.

Lafayette, Ind., May 31.—After being out twenty-four hours the jury in the $25,000 damage suit brought by Basil Young in the superior court against the Monon railroad, failed to agree and was discharged. Young was employed as a flagman and was injured at Ladoga in August, 1914.

City Bureau of Foreign Trade.

The Houston (Tex.) chamber of commerce has added to its various departments that of a bureau of foreign trade in view of the probabilities that the trade relations between Houston and the Latin-American countries will undergo important developments that will open up vast new fields for the manufacturers and larger jobbing houses of Houston. The bureau is not restricted to Latin-American trade, however, but includes possibilities of trade with Japan and other countries. In addition to providing the bureau with a library, including commercial directories of the principal cities of those countries, arrangements have also been made under which the services of translators will be at the disposal of members of the chamber of commerce for writing letters in German and Spanish.

MEMORIAL DAY OF 1869.

In a Teumseh Herald bearing date May 20, 1869. We find the following relative to the observance of Decoration Day which may be of interest to our readers.

THE SOLDIER'S GRAVE

The 30th of May has again been selected as "Memorial Day" on which to strew soldiers graves with flowers.

One year ago there was an attempt made to inaugurate this custom at Tecumseh but the time for preparation was so short, and there being no post of the G. A. R., at this place, to lead in the matter, it was found inexpedient to do so.

Now that we have ample time in which to make all due preparations to properly celebrate this day, let all, both citizens and soldiers, who will interest themselves and aid in performing this sacred duty in respect of the memory of our fallen heroes, meet at Bidwell's Hall at 8 o'clock to morrow, (Friday) evening the 21st inst. to make necessary arrangements.

ACCUSE DOCTOR OF PERJURY

Rushville, Ind., Physician Indicted as Result of Own Testimony.

Shelbyville, Ind., May 31.—Dr. John Paxton, prominent physician of Rushville, was placed under bond of $5,000 here, charged with perjury, the warrant being based on a grand jury indictment. The charge is based on testimony he gave here in a suit against himself and his former partner, Dr. Hugh Elliott of Rushville, in which damages of $15,000 were demanded for alleged malpractice in treating Harold Chaney, son of Carlton Chaney of Carthage. There was also another suit in which the boy's father asked $5,000, but the verdict in both suits was in favor of the doctors.

Members of the Chaney family and a number of friends testified that Dr. Paxton treated the Chaney boy for rheumatism and made statements to them that rheumatism was the sole cause of the boy's suffering. A correct diagnosis, it was said, showed the boy had broken his left hip in a fall. As a witness Dr. Paxton denied he had treated the boy for rheumatism or had made statements he was doing so. The indictment charges his denial constituted perjury.

SUNDAY MOVIES HELD LEGAL.

Municipalities in New York state are without power to prohibit moving picture shows on Sunday by means of fines and imprisonment, according to a decision of the court of appeals.

The decision was made in the case of a Yonkers man, who was arrested and imprisoned for violating a local ordinance prohibiting Sunday moving picture shows. He obtained his release on a writ of habeas corpus, and the city of Yonkers appealed.

The opinion declared that the legislature alone may command how Sunday may be kept.

New York city theater managers have decided, however, that they will not try to compete with the picture houses on Sunday. The decision does not free them from the Sunday law, they think.

SENIOR CLASS

Were Entertained Tuesday Evening, in Costume, by Supt. and Mrs. Reed.

Supt. and Mrs. W. L. Reed entertained the senior class at their pleasant home Thursday evening. As the guests appeared they were dressed to represent different cities, and much fun was enjoyed in guessing the various names.

A spelling contest followed where the words were spelled backward. This occasioned much merriment but proved that there were many good spellers in the class and not so backward as might seem

The Misses Hazel Pocklington and Grettel Conklin assisted Mrs. Reed in serving a dainty lunch later in the evening. Green and white, the class colors were used to decorate the rooms, flowers being used in profusion. As the hour came for departure, the class one and all proclaimed Supt. and Mrs. Reed royal entertainers.

YOU OUGHT TO AUTO CAREFULLY

Sunday about 4:30 p. m. as the young son of Don Cleveland a lad about eleven years old was going down the hill at the Episcopal church on his bicycle, he met with what might have been a very serious accident. A car was coming south and and three or four cars were going north, and becoming confused the boy running into some gravel was thrown from his wheel. A girl driving the first car put on her emergency brake, running over the wheel, but the boy escaped unhurt.

Saturday evening as one of the Garlinghouse cars were coming in from Clinton with four men passengers it struck a bed of fresh gravel and turned turtle with the men under side. They were safely extricated without any serious damage, but the car was demoralized.

CATARRH GERMS EASILY KILLED

By Breathing Into Throat, Nose and Lungs a Pure Antiseptic Air.

If you have catarrh and want to get rid of it you must kill germs which cause the disease.

The best known way of destroying catarrh germs is to breathe into the air passages of your nose and throat and lungs the pleasant, penetrating air of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me). Hyomei is made from purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other powerful healing, antiseptic and germicidal ingredients. You breath, it through a little pocket inhaler which C. A. Wright & Son and other leading druggist in Tecumseh, Mich., and vicinity are furnishing with every complete treatment sold. Every time you inhale the sweet, fragrant air of Hyomei through this little device you are drawing into your swollen, inflamed, germ laden membranes a medicated air which will not only reduce all the swelling and inflammation and open your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages, but will absolutely and positively destroy every trace of Catarrh germ life it reaches. Druggists are so sure of the blessed, lasting relief that Hyomei brings to catarrh sufferers that they sell it invariably on the positive guarantee that money paid will be refunded if successful results are not secured from its use. advt

WON'T ENJOIN SHELL MAKING

Pearson Complaint Against Allis-Chalmers Held Political Not Legal.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 31.—Judge Turner of the state circuit court dismissed the action of General Samuel Pearson in which he sought to restrain the Allis-Chalmers company, Otto H. Falk, and others from manufacturing shrapnel shells, which, it is alleged, were being supplied to the allies.

The court concludes that in view of the well settled principles of international law it must be apparent that the relief sought by the plaintiff is political rather than legal, and that to grant such relief would be for the court to entertain jurisdiction upon a matter exclusively within the political and executive branch of the federal government.

NINE DEPUTIES CONVICTED

Jury In Roosevelt Strike Cases Acquits One of Accused.

New Brunswick, N. B., May 31—The jury, composed of Mercer county men, before which ten Roosevelt deputies were tried in the Middlesex county court for the murder of Alesdrondo Tessiere in an attack on striking fertilizer plant workers at the Williams and Clark station in January, 1911, returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter against nine of the defendants.

The tenth defendant, John C. Smith, was acquitted in accordance with the decisions of Supreme Court Justice Bergen in his charge to the jury.

FIRE

Monday morning the fire department was called out for a fire at the home of Floyd Owens in the eastern part of town. The fire was under very good headway when they reached the house. The household goods in the front of the house were most all saved but the dining room and kitchen were totally destroyed. It was thought that water boiling over on the gasoline stove caused the fire.

PAIGE

"The Standard of Value and Quality"

Power!!

Few of us have the need or desire for a racing car. But every man wants to sit behind a motor which responds eagerly—buoyantly—to the slightest touch of the throttle.

Steep hills and heavy, clinging sand roads have no terrors for the Paige owner. He knows that he has but to "step on" the accelerator and the hills flatten out like smooth boulevards. From a walking pace to the speed of the winds—this range is at the service of every Paige driver without a change from high gear.

Sit behind the steering wheel of the record breaking Paige Six "46". Sense the flexibility and power under the impressive, deep chested hood just in front of you. Swing blithely up those grades that are the despair of many vastly higher priced automobiles.

Then, ask yourself if you could possibly require more of any motor car. And remember that the "Six" belongs to no "school" for it is rapidly establishing a school of its own—the school of 1916.

Model Fairfield Six "46"	$1395	f. o. b. Detroit, Fully Equipped.

The celebrated Paige Continental 3½x5¼ motor, freely considered as the undisputed leader in Sixes. It is the result of close co-operation between both Paige and Continental engineers.

The Multiple Disc Clutch, with cork inserts,—no better or more dependable clutch can be found on any car at any price.

The Paige Cantilever Springs which makes every road ride as smooth as the paved street or boulevard.

These are but a few of the out-standing features of this epoch-making Six. See this wonderful motor car—ride in it—drive it.

That is the only way in which you can really secure and appreciate the over-values the Paige Six offers.

Buggies

We have just received a few sample jobs and are more than pleased with them as they are no two alike. They came in without being all scratched up.

The seats have three panels, these panels are painted different than the balance of the seat.

The curtains fasten with the latest black auto fasteners.

The geneaal lines are very good, strictly up-to-date, not too "loud." We know you will be much pleased with them, realizing every job is warranted fully against all defects.

Kindly call and examine while assortment is complete.

ADJOURNED MEETING of the Business Men Held in the Tecumseh Club Rooms Monday Evening.

The adjourned meeting of the business men, was held in the Tecumseh club rooms last evening with J. J. Belcher in the chair.

The reports of the committees were read as follows:—

The report of the advertising committee with F. S. Anderson chairman was as follows: That we have one day of the week, Wednesday set aside as a special day with special attractions for people from the country and towns tributary to Tecumseh, such as, band concerts, motorcycle races, matinees and ball games. Also that the merchants try out the co-operative scheme of advertising for three months.

Bids were read on sheets to be printed and to be mailed to the people in these towns, by T. W. Mingay and Adrian Telegram, The Tecumseh Herald not bidding for the work because of lack of equipment to handle this extra amount of work.

A general discussion of this proposition followed and the matter was closed by a motion that this scheme of advertising be tried out for three months with the Adrian Telegram.

Committees were appointed to draw up a proof sheet of the ads they are to run, and to call upon the merchants to sign the agreement, binding themselves to this advertising scheme also calling upon them for a subscription to cover the amusement features provided for this day.

LIBERTY BELL SUFFERS NEW CRACK AT CROWN.

Believed to Have Come Since Preparations For Trip to Fair.

The crack in the Liberty bell, which within the last two or three years spread up and around the bell through the lettering, now extends to the top and round the crown, an expert microscopic examination has proved.

This new extension of the crack has occurred, it is believed, since the clapper was removed the other day at the instance of Philadelphia authorities and a heavy steel frame or "spider" placed inside to protect the bell from shocks and jolts on its journey to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

Removal of the ancient clapper that has hung silent within the old bell for three-quarters of a century was necessary, so that the supporting device which is visible only after careful inspection, might be placed within the bell without boring or cutting the metal in any way. When the Liberty bell starts on its journey to the west the great clapper, battered and corroded will be displayed on the trip.

The committee in charge has announced that the bell will leave Philadelphia July 5 via the Pennsylvania railroad to Chicago, then to Kansas City, to Denver, to Ogden, Utah, via Cheyenne and Salt Lake City, to Huntington, Ore.; to Spokane, to Portland, to San Francisco.

Returning stops will be made at Oakland, Sacramento, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Walla Walla, Salt Lake, Ogden, Cheyenne, Denver, Lincoln, Omaha, Topeka, Kansas City, Des Moines, East Moline, Joliet, Chicago, Logansport, Pittsburgh and Harrisburg. It will be seen in seventeen states.

A UNIQUE RECORD

Very Few Like It In Our Broad Republic

Home testimony for Doan's Kidney Pills, published in every locality, is of itself convincing evidence of merit. Confirmed testimony forms still stronger evidence. Years ago, a citizen of Tecumseh gratefully acknowledged the benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills. The statement is now confirmed—the proof more convincing. Cases of this kind are plentiful in the work of Doan's Kidney Pills—the record is unique.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh says: "My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success, I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory. I am in hopes that other kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience. I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills the same that Mr Chaplin had. Foster-Milburn Co Props. Buffalo, N. Y. adv

Disturbed Sleep.

When a child wakens frequently this is generally due to nervous irritability. Not infrequently this depends upon poor or improper nourishment.

Careful consideration should be given to the question of diet, for it may be insufficient in amount or of such character that it is not easily digested. Fully half the instances of disturbed sleep are due to this one cause.

If the sleeping apartment is overheated or is poorly ventilated, so that the child is robbed during sleep of good fresh air or the bed coverings are insufficient or uncomfortable this will result in disturbed sleep. Naturally with these causes present any undue excitement will aggravate the trouble.

Moral Responsibility.

At seven a child should know clearly the difference between right and wrong. We do not mean by this that he can then decide finer questions of duty and morals, but he will be able to discern what is right from what is not; and, having that power, he is accountable for his acts, if normally developed. If there is a failure at this age to discern these clearly the child should receive the benefit of a thorough physical examination to discover the fault.

Help For Mothers.

For sore throats beat the white of a fresh egg with half a teaspoonful of sugar. Then squeeze the juice of half a lemon into this. Give a teaspoonful every hour.

For a sprain beat the white of an egg with a teaspoonful of salt. Dip cloth into this, then bind on sprain. As soon as cloth dries saturate it again.

MILLION MORE TO GET MAIL DELIVERY

Rural Route Changes Will Greatly Extend the Service.

Washington.—Mail facilities will be extended to 1,000,000 rural patrons before July 1, 1915, without increasing the present cost of service, according to a statement by Postmaster General Burleson. This, it is explained, will be done by readjusting present rural routes so as to eliminate duplications and unnecessary service and by means of the motor vehicle service authorized by congress.

Changes were authorized which, without curtailment of service, have reduced operating expenses $177,644. This sum has been utilized to establish 263 new routes serving 31,041 additional families, or approximately 155,205 additional persons. Extensions of existing service were put into effect involving 104 additional miles of travel by rural carriers. These extensions serve 1,202 additional families and approximately 6,010 additional persons.

In explanation of his plans Mr. Burleson says:

"The purpose is to enable the postoffice department to meet just demands for mail service which thus far the department has been unable to provide. This can be done only by careful and painstaking readjustment of existing service. Thorough survey and study of existing conditions therefore have been made.

"In some localities it has been found there are unnecessary and unjustifiable duplications and retracings of travel by rural carriers. In other cases it appears that unusual privileges involving unnecessary service have been allowed. It is quite feasible to rectify these inequalities, and this is being done.

"Later we expect by utilizing modern motor vehicles on improved highways to extend many existing routes at no additional cost of service. As one of the results from this latter step the delivery zone from important postal centers will be doubled. Thus families in the area immediately tributary to these centers will be enabled to take full advantage of the parcel post as a means of transportation of farm products.

"Rural service will be extended to every farmer reasonably entitled to it as rapidly as the new adjustments can be made."

LENDS AUNT $5; NOW HEIR.

Logansport, Ind.—As a result of lending $5 to an aunt in Greeley, Col., A. B. Judson of this city has become heir to a part of a large estate left by the woman, who recently died. Attorneys notified him that he had been named in the will, and he is now en route to Greeley to claim his part of the estate.

Judson had not heard from his aunt for several years until a year ago, when he received a letter from her requesting him to lend her $5. He complied with her request and received a letter of thanks. He never heard from her again.

EAT BARK, LIVE IN CAVE.

Fate of Farmer and Two Daughters, Victims of Big Jinx.

Benville, Ark.—A man named Ewing has been found living in a cave five miles east of here with his two daughters, ten and eight years old. When discovered their clothes were worn to strings, and, according to the children, they had subsisted on the bark of trees for ten days.

The older of these said:

Five years ago Ewing was a well to do farmer. First his stock began to die. By the end of a year be owned only one cow and no other property. Two years ago his wife, who was the ruling spirit on the farm, died, and six months later she was followed by their only son and the only grown daughter. This left the old man alone with the two small children.

But the real climax came about seven months ago, when his house and all it contained were destroyed by fire. He then sold the cow and disappeared. No effort to find him was made, for when the neighbors had offered to help him in his trouble he became angry and exclaimed: "No, I cannot accept any gifts. No Ewing has yet ever stooped so low as to beg, and may God grant that I am not the first to do so."

MOTHER SUPERIOR ROSARY HILL HOME

Rosary Hill Home, Hawthorne, N.Y.—"I have been at work among the sick and poor for nearly eighteen years, and whenever I have used Vinol for run-down, weak or emaciated patients, they have been visibly benefited by it. One patient, a young woman, was so weak and ill she could hardly creep to my door for aid, and was leaning on a friend's arm. I supplied Vinol to her liberally and in a month when she returned to thank me I hardly recognized her. She was strong, her color charming and her cheeks rounded out. These words are uttered from my heart, in order that more people may know about Vinol, as there is nothing makes me happier in the world than to relieve the sick."—Mother M. ALPHONSA LATHROP, O.S.D., Hawthorne, N.Y.

Such disinterested and reliable testimony should convince everyone of the merits of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic to build up health and strength for all weakened and nervous conditions, whether caused from overwork, worry or chronic coughs and colds. If Vinol fails to benefit we return your money.

Saved From the Guillotine

A Story of the French Revolution.

By F. A. MITCHEL

During the last decade of the nineteenth century there lived in France the Marquis de Hauteville, a widower with two children, a boy and a girl, the former twelve, the latter ten years old. Jean, the boy was of an adventurous spirit and listened with great interest to those of his countrymen who had fought in the American Revolutionary war under the Marquis de la Fayette. When he became eighteen years old despite his father's wishes he embarked for the new world.

Jean de Hauteville had a cousin, Gaston Renaud, who had been the intimate companion of himself and his sister. After Jean's departure the child companionship between Gaston and Estelle de Hauteville ripened into love. For a time letters came from Jean from America, but after the receipt of one in which he announced his intention to visit the great falls of Niagara, which were on the American frontier, nothing was heard from him.

America was then so far distant from France that the marquis, his father, could get no news of his son. After writing to different persons concerning Jean with no satisfactory result he was in despair. Then Gaston Renaud volunteered to go to America and institute a search for his lost cousin. Estelle, though much relieved in one way by the offer, was much troubled in another. Having experienced the disappearance of her brother in that remote country she dreaded to send her lover there lest he, too, should not return. At the parting between the two she clung to him, with difficulty bringing herself to let him go.

On reaching Philadelphia, the port for which he had sailed, Gaston wrote that he was going to leave for Fort Duquesne, which was beginning to be transformed into the future city of Pittsburgh. From there he expected to proceed northward to Niagara. Another letter came, stating that he had traced his cousin to Cincinnati, a village on the Ohio river, and he was going there to look for him.

When Gaston left France the rumblings of that great convulsion, the French revolution, were just beginning. A great deal took place in France within a few months after his departure, but since at that time thirty to forty days were required for a vessel to make the trip from the French to the American coast, and news traveled very slowly to the United States territories in what was then the far west, Gaston knew nothing of the terrible events that were developing in his native country. On reaching Cincinnati he learned that Gaston had been there, but had left for a French settlement still farther west called St. Louis. Thither Gaston departed in company with a party of emigrants, who traveled much as the gold seekers half a century later crossed the "plains" to the Rocky mountains.

All this took a great deal of time. At St. Louis after diligent inquiry Gaston learned that his cousin had gone into the buffalo country to the northwest and had never returned. One of the party with whom he had started reported that he had been captured by Indians and had doubtless been put to death after torture.

Gaston was preparing for an expedition to go into the Indian country to satisfy himself as to whether Jean was alive or dead when he received news of the opening of the reign of terror in France. He also received a letter from Estelle announcing the arrest of her father by Robespierre and his adherents, and she had no hope that his life would be spared, since the radicals were getting rid of the nobles as fast as the guillotine would do the work. Gaston abandoned the search for one who was probably dead and started eastward on his way back to France.

It was a sad day for him when he arrived at Bordeaux and learned that the marquis had been executed under the charge of being an enemy of France and Estelle was in prison, likely to suffer the same fate. Not only did the revolutionists wish to stamp out the Hauteville family, but to confiscate the Hauteville estate. If Jean were dead and Estelle should be executed Gaston would be heir to the title and properties of the Hautevilles. He therefore realized that should he be known as one of the family he would undoubtedly die on the guillotine. He therefore concealed his identity until he could form some plan for future action.

There was a strong resemblance between the cousins, Jean and Gaston. Gaston was two years younger than Jean, and, since the latter had not been seen in France for two years, it was not impossible for Gaston to personate him. Gaston proceeded northward to the province now called the department of Haute, where the Chateau Hauteville was located. He found no one there except the old steward, Francois Maran, and his wife, Marguerite. These he took into his confidence and informed them of his plan.

This was to save Mlle. de Hauteville by claiming that she was not of that family and to personate his cousin Jean, who was heir to the title and estates. Gaston persuaded Marguerite Maran to sign a statement that when a daughter was born to the late Marquise de Hauteville it was dead. The marquis had longed for a daughter, and his wife, disliking to disappoint him, had employed Marguerite to introduce in the dead child's stead the babe of one of the tenants, just born. This babe had since passed as Estelle de Hauteville.

Marguerite consented to sign this false statement to save the life of her young mistress, whom she devotedly loved. Armed with it Gaston went to Paris and one day sent in to Robespierre a card on which was engraved the name of the Marquis de Hauteville. Robespierre, astonished that a man should thus give himself up to death and yet delighted to have the marquis in his power, ordered that he be admitted.

"Monsieur"— began the supposed marquis.

"Citizen," corrected Robespierre.

"Citizen Robespierre," Gaston began again, "you hold in prison one whom you suppose to be heir to the title and estates of the late Marquis de Hauteville. This person is not a member of that family, but a changeling."

He handed the tyrant Marguerite's statement. Robespierre read it and looked up at his visitor for further development in this singular proceeding.

"I, Jean de Hauteville, now marquis of Hauteville, two years ago visited North America. While hunting buffalo in the far west of that continent I was captured by Indians. I escaped and have returned to find my father dead at your hands and the girl who was brought up as my sister in prison awaiting execution. I take it for granted that you wish to exterminate a family of the French nobility. You will not execute a noble in the woman you consider a noble. I, Marquis de Hauteville, am the last of my race. I ask that you release her and put me in her place."

There were many acts of heroism in those tragic times, but Robespierre had not thus far met with any such self sacrifice as this. It was some time before he made reply, his eyes meanwhile fixed intently on his visitor. What his thoughts were no one knows. Possibly, impressed by this example of heroism, he may have been thinking on a plan to save the hero. Possibly the De Hauteville estate interfered with such desire. Presently he said:

"Citoyen, France accepts the offer of yourself in lieu of one who has passed as Mlle. de Hauteville. She will be released immediately. Guards!"

Several soldiers entered and took Gaston away to prison. A few minutes later a messenger carried an order to the keeper of the Conciergerie prison to release Estelle. Then Robespierre gave Marguerite Maran's statement to his secretary to be filed among important papers. One more thing needed to be attended to in connection with the matter. An order was issued to a subordinate to investigate the man who had offered his life as a substitute for the released prisoner and as certain if he were really the Marquis de Hauteville.

When Estelle returned to the chateau she learned from the Marans that her lover had returned from America and had offered his life for hers. She was about to return to Paris to reveal the imposture when she was stopped by Francois Maran.

"You cannot save his life by giving yourself up and revealing the truth," said the old servant. "Rather join the emigres in Belgium or England and send a statement, in which Marguerite will join, that hers is false, that you are Marquise de Hauteville and that the man who has personated the marquis is not the marquis at all. They will then investigate. Such problems are hard to solve at any time, but now they will be harder still. Meanwhile, time will elapse, and perhaps a new man will be in power, or the thirst for blood will have been quenched."

Estelle saw the force of this argument. She adopted it except on the matter of leaving France. She chose rather to go into hiding. This she did, and Francois took her statement, including one from Marguerite, to Paris, where he left them with Robespierre's secretary.

Francois' surmise was correct. There were plenty of noblemen and noble women whose identity was unquestioned to satisfy the appetite of the revolutionists for blood without sacrificing one who might be a commoner. Besides, those were times when the situation was rapidly changing. Gaston remained for a long while in prison while a notary was investigating his identity, drawing pay all the while and in no hurry to lose his job by making a report. Meanwhile the guillotine was working much more slowly and a more conservative element was gaining the upper hand. When the reign of terror was over Gaston Renaud was released, and Estelle came out of hiding.

It was a joyful meeting of the lovers at the Chateau de Hauteville, rendered far more joyful for Estelle by the knowledge that Gaston had offered his life in place of hers. But another event followed the recall of the marquis. Jean de Hauteville, who had been given up for lost, had been captured by Indians and had been adopted into the tribe. It was many months before he found a chance to escape and make his way back to Europe. The reign of terror was then in full force, and he remained in England till it was over; then one day he surprised his sister and Gaston, who were now man and wife, by suddenly appearing at the chateau.

The only thing to mar the reunion was that the marquis had perished in the storm of blood.

"GIVEN UP," LIVED 54 YEARS.

Confederate Veteran Left on Field Mortally Wounded.

Fulton, Mo.—Left on the battlefield dying with the surgeon's notation, "mortally wounded," written after his name, only to live fifty-four years and die a natural death, was the experience of the late John W. Davis, a Confederate veteran of Fulton. A letter just received here from Joseph A. Mudd, another Confederate veteran of Hyattsville, Md., tells the story as follows:

"I have just seen mention of the death in Fulton of John W. Davis. He was a member of the grand company of brave boys commanded by Captain D. H. McIntyre, afterward attorney general of Missouri—Company A, Burbridge's regiment. Ours was Company B, and we stood side by side in battle. Comrade Davis was just my age.

"At Wilson's Creek, nearly fifty-four years ago, I saw him shot, so badly hurt that the surgeon wrote 'mortally wounded' after his name."

FAMOUS FLAG FOR STATE.

Colonel Proctor's "Rattlesnake" Now in Library.

Greensburg, Pa.—The famous Rattlesnake flag has been transferred from the vault of the Merchants and Farmers' bank in Greensburg to the state library, Harrisburg, to take its place among other interesting relics of American wars.

The Rattlesnake flag belonged to Colonel John Proctor's Independent battalion of Westmoreland county. It was made in 1775 and was carried in the Revolution. Samuel Craig, Sr., who, with his three sons, John, Alexander and Samuel junior, fought in Proctor's battalion, was the color bearer.

On Colonel Proctor's death the flag passed to the next senior officer, and so on to the last survivor, General Alexander Craig. It was bequeathed by his great granddaughter, Jane Maria Craig of New Alexandria, to the state library at Harrisburg.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Walter M. Fitzgerald, eighty-three years old and a member of St. Bernard's commandery, Knights Templar for half a century, died of old age. He was tyler for all of the Masonic bodies in East Saginaw.

MRS. A. C. ARNER

Mrs. A. C. Arner who has been seriously ill for so long passed away at her home in Plymouth Monday afternoon. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Tenny. The body was brought to the home of her parents Tuesday and the funeral was held this afternoon with burial in Brookside cemetery. Besides her husband, her parents a brother and sister are left to mourn her her loss.

ROAD BEE DAY

June 10 and 11, 1915

On June 4th and 5th, 1914, the first annual Road Bee Day was observed in Michigan. Unfortunately it rained very hard quite generally over the state on one of these days, but other days were appointed by the different road associations to finish the work so well begun. On the whole, much good resulted to the roads of the state and in many localities the community interest in the common roads was greatly revived.

The amount of money raised by direct taxation and annually expended on the rural highways of the state is rapidly increasing. In 1901 the highway takes were less than two and a half million dollars, while in 1914 the highway taxes had increased to $6,849,745.41. This does not take into account bond issues and private donations which would increase this sum to at least seven and one-half millions of dollars, but it does represent an annual increase of more than three hundred thousand dollars in the road taxes of Michigan. The greatest significance, however, attaches to the fact that more than two-thirds of this money was raised by direct vote of the farmers at the annual town meetings and was expended on the local highways under township supervision. These figures speak volumes for the growing interest in better roads.

While the state has aided in the building of some three thousand five hundred miles of well constructed highways, and is planning to extend this work very rapidly in the future, the common dirt roads always will constitute the greater portion of our road mileage, and they need constant attention to keep them even in such "reasonably safe and passable condition" as the highway laws of Michigan require.

Knowing that the various good roads associations, as well as the majority of people in Michigan, are anxious to extend the work of road improvement so as to improve all of our road mileage, and believing that specially appointed road days are a great stimulus to the work, I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, do ask that the people of the State of Michigan set apart Thursday and Friday, June 10th and 11th as "Road Bee Days" and, so far as possible, turn out and work under such competent supervision as may be available on the highways of the state in such manner as shall be most conductive to their betterment.

[SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, this 1st day of June, in the year of our Lord 1915 and of the Commonwealth the 79th.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,

BELIEVE "VISCOUNT" WORKING IN GARAGE

Anyhow Gordon-Lennox Has Benefactor in Tight Box.

HASTINGS, MICH. — The fugitive English "nobleman," "viscount" Philip Cosmo Gordon-Lennox of Hastings and Charlotte, who jumped his bail bond of $200 after being convicted of wife desertion, will have to appear in the circuit court Tuesday to receive sentence or Isaac Arnold, his bondsman, will have to turn over $200 to the court.

Gordon-Lennox, who claimed to be a relative of the duke of Sutherland and to have hobnobbed with sundry British aristocrats, came to Hastings several years ago and told a romantic tale of being driven out of Nicaragua after trying to steal naval secrets from the government of that country.

In spite of the fact that he declared that his reason for going to Nicaragua was an attachment for a girl whom he had met in Paris and followed to the Central American country, the Englishman married a Hastings girl soon after his arrival here. He led a checkered career in Hastings and in Charlotte, where he gained the confidence of Isaac Arnold, who befriended him and loaned him a great deal of money on being promised that he would be repaid when the young Englishman received a fortune from England. The fortune never came. He went broke and the "viscountess" had him arrested for desertion. Mr. Arnold came to his rescue with a bond, which gave him his freedom.

Shortly afterward he and his wife disappeared. The bogus nobleman is supposed to be working in a garage in southern Ohio.

SIX AUTOISTS NEAR DEATH

Machine Turns Over When Driver Changes Course.

MUSKEGAN, MICH. — Six people, pinned beneath their auto when it turned over, escaped fatal injuries. Jacob Apoll of Hammond, Ind., driver of the machine, and five others, John Apoll and Miss Emma Apoll of Grand Haven, Mrs. Eva Bond and son Wilson of Grand Rapids and Mrs. Laura Mitchell of Muskegon Heights, were in the machine.

Apoll made a quick turn in an attempt to avoid running down a milk wagon. The sudden shift caused his machine to turn over. Jacob and John Apoll, who were in the front seat of the car, were badly cut about the face and neck by flying glass. It took almost half an hour to extricate all passengers.

PYTHIAN SISTERS

200 MEMBERS PRESENT

Tuesday morning bright and early from north, south, east and west, the sisters came flocking into Tecumseh for their tenth annual convention of district No 7.

The street presented a pleasing appearance with the colors of the order draped over the places of business and welcome cards painted in colors were put in the windows.

The hall was prettily decorated with flowers and five large umbrellas in the colors of the stations.

There were 150 at the morning session. This number was swelled to 200 when the afternoon meeting was opened. The following grand officers were present: District Deputy Nellie Scattergood of Alma; Grand Chief Anna Jenne of Eaton Rapids; Grand Senior Addie Kemp of Tipton; Mrs. Chaloner, grand trustee of Adrian; Mrs. Metta Stofflett, on Law committee, of Ann Arbor; and Mrs. Josephine H. Hall, a past grand chief, of Hudson and mother of the Tecumseh temple, which bears her name, was a very welcome guest.

The program of the day was:

MORNING SESSION

Call to Order - - - District Deputy Receiving Grand Temple Officers
Opening Ode of Subordinate Temples
Lord's Prayer, in Unison
Address of Welcome - - - - Mrs. McLachlin—Tecumseh
Response - - - Mrs. Addie Kemp —Grand Senior—Tipton
Roll Call of Temples
Reading Minutes of 1914 Convention
Temple Reports - - - Delegates

Paper - - - - Lila Spay—Waldron

Memorial Service - Mrs. J. H. Baker of Adrian assisted by the delegates of temples that have lost sisters was very beautiful and impressive.

Solo - - Mrs. Edith Hanna—Adrian
Piano Duet - Mrs. McLaughlin and Mrs. Roberts—Tecumseh

AFTERNOON SESSION

Monologue - - Louise Awkerman—Morenci was exceedingly good

Ritualistic Work - - Adrian Temple

The Adrian sisters deserve much praise on the manner they did the initiatory work, Mrs. Harold Kolkoesch and Mrs. Tom Shurts being the candidates.

Music, Selected - Mrs. Robert Moore Tecumseh
Question Box, Read and Answered - Grand Chief Committee Reports
Business Session
Solo, "Perfect Day" - - - Mrs. Will Hanna—Adrian

One of the pleasing features of the afternoon was that of presenting a tin offering to Mrs. Scattergood who has been District Deputy for ten years, gifts from a dripping pan to a mouse trap were presented. A drinking cup also with which to drink for the good of the order was presented; on opening this a ten dollar gold piece was discovered and the lady was instructed to use this as she saw fit. It was with difficulty that Mrs. Scattergood mastered her voice to respond to this unexpected demonstration. Several of the grand officers were called upon for remarks.

The committee of Resolutions drafted a set, in which they expressed their appreciation of their reception by the Josephine H. Hall Temple and in the name of the lodges represented at this meeting, wished to thank all, who so graciously extended their kindness and good cheer.

The 1916 convention will be held in Hudson.

Several sisters were present from out of this district among them were: Mesdames Stowell, M. E. C.; Will McIntyre, E. S.; Reynolds, P. C.; Pettit, M. of R. C.; Chas. McIntyre from Dundee, Mesdames Allison Gray, Dewey Gardner, M. Sugden, Irving Slatie and Miss Laura Gillett, M. E. C. of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Harvey Welling and a friend from Detroit.

WAR RAISES HORSES

Many Michigan people have found that the European War has raised the value of livestock—particularly horses. Therefore, it is now more necessary than ever to keep domestic animals in A-1 shape. To do this, a bully liniment to use is the same kind that George Wells of Syracuse, N. Y., used. He says: "And the only medicine used on the foot after the horse had been given up to die by the veterinary surgeon, was Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. This horse, which the doctor said should be killed after it had run a nail in its foot, lived to do many more hours of labor." adv

WOMAN ENDS LIFE WITH GAS

Previous Attempt at Self Destruction Was Thwarted.

COLDWATER, MICH. — Mrs. William E. Shaw, sixty-five years of age, a resident of Coldwater, killed herself by using a gas tube connected with a small stove and covering herself over with a heavy fur robe. The woman was found dead by her niece, who had come to call.

Some weeks ago she attempted self destruction. She is survived by her husband. Family difficulties are given as the cause of the act.

ASKS NEW TIME CONFERENCE

Saginaw Mayor Seeks Views on "More Daylight."

SAGINAW, MICH. — Mayor H. F. Paddock is writing mayors of several cities asking for a conference on the time question in Michigan, before proceeding further with a local ordinance changing the time from central to eastern standard time.

The mayor wants to hear from Detroit and Bay City particularly, which have made the change. No date has been fixed.

THURSDAY

JUNE 3 WAS 91st BIRTHDAY OF TECUMSEH.

Ninety-one years ago to-day (June 3rd, 1824) the first house in Tecumseh was in process of construction, and although belonging to our "First Families" was not on Chicago St. but in Brownville on the bank of the river. It was twenty feet square, and had a mud floor and a roof of elm bark. Its furnishings also were primitive, there being no chairs nor stove, and the beds were built of poles, laid from log to log crosswise. The party had come a long way to occupy this cabin. Our first settlers arriving at four o'clock in the afternoon found themselves on the east bank of our river near where the globe mill now stands, with no way to cross this stream except by fording, but two deserted Indian wigwams were there, and these they occupied that night. Next morning following the windings of the river to a point farther north, they came upon a spring of clear water, and this and the milling possibilities they saw there, decided them to build at this point. This house sheltered that winter twenty-six people. As eleven of of these were children, they began wrestling with the schoolhouse question ("even as you and I") and in the fall of '24 a log schoolhouse was built which was twelve feet square. This was scarcely a square foot apiece for the children if they were all in attendance at once, but it was the first and only seat of learning in the County and a great source of pride to its projectors.

A grist mill was soon added, a general store built, a village plat surveyed, and this was the beginning of the settlement of Lenawee Co. This week at Lansing the State Historical and Pioneer society are in session; and one of their avowed objects is to suggest and assist the forming of historical societies in every county with the exception of Wayne, we do not need these suggestions. We have a Pioneer society. What has become of it? N. A. H.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Tuesday June 1 was the birthday of S. W. Boyce and his brothers and sisters planned a surprise for him. A six o'clock dinner was served and the evening was spent with music and social visiting. Mrs. Boyce presented him with a gold watch, and the brothers and sisters gave a Masonic charm. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. John Boyce, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Benedict, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. VanDoren, Mrs B. J. Rector, Mrs. W. Cleveland and Mrs Hannah Margeson.

DROPS DEAD PLAYING GOLF WITH TOWNSEND

Prominent Battle Creek Physician Expires on Links.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Dr. William N. Carling, prominent physician, clubman and widely known as an enthusiastic sportsman, dropped dead here of heart failure while playing golf on the country club course in company with United States Senator C. E. Townsend, and E. C. Nettels, local business man.

Dr. Carling was on his first round of the course and was trying to put the fifth hole. He had made 10 or 12 unsuccessful attempts, when he turned to Senator Townsend and said: "Senator, I'm the worst player in the club."

Then he collapsed in the senator's arms.

Dr. Carling's mother died about three weeks ago and since that time his health has been failing. He had been taking treatments at the sanitarium here.

ROB POORHOUSE CEMETERY

Act of Ghouls at Cassapolis Believed One of Revenge.

DOWAGIAC, MICH. — Ghouls [illegible] the cemetery at the Cass county house, two miles west of Cassopolis, dug open the grave of Mrs. Hugh Wells, broke the coffin open with an axe, removed the body and carried it into adjoining woods, where it was found by Sheriff Reed, to whom the case had been reported.

Mrs. Wells was a Negress. Her husband was murdered in Dowagiac a year ago, and Marvie Evans, Negro, is now in Jackson prison for the crime. There was some claim at the time that Mrs. Wells and not Evans killed Wells. Mrs. Wells was taken to the county house, where she died in April. Only one theory seems plausible, and that is revenge by some of the friends or relatives of Evans.

DISAPPEARANCE IS SOLVED

Parts of Missing Man's Body Found; Lost Life Dynamiting Stumps.

YALE, MICH. — The mysterious disappearance, two weeks ago, of Joseph Upper, farmer near Melvin Sanilac county, was solved when parts of his body, scattered about a field on his father's farm, were found by relatives. Upper had gone out to blow up some stumps with dynamite and was himself blown to bits accidentally.

It was first believed that Upper might have committed suicide as he had been in poor health but later reports set aside that theory. He was twenty-seven years old and unmarried.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powerc that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

NEIGHBORHOOD CLEANUP.

Even if your town doesn't have a regular cleanup week your neighborhood can have one of its own. Ask your friends and have them ask theirs. Set a date for cleaning up and get the children interested. Get all your refuse together in some vacant lot and then, some evening, have a big bonfire. You'll be burning disease and unhappiness along with the rubbish.

If your town is one of the 151 in this country which have regular cleanup weeks every year you owe it to yourself and to your neighbors to take part with a vim.

"PRACTICAL BAIT CASTING."

By W. L. Coller

As implied by the captian, this brief treatise on "Practical Bait Casting" covers only that department of the art looking towards the capture of game fishes rather than dealing with the more precise technique employed in exibition and Tournament Casting.

Excepting as to the general rules governing Tournament Casting, these contestants are but little agreed as to detail of methods employed or selection of equipment and, therefor, any attempt to instruct those who believe themselves to have become masters of the art, would be received with as much criticism as commendation.

But to the novice — to those who wish to master the baitcasting trick sufficiently to make successful their pursuit of game fishes — we confidently recommend the following instructions as to practice and paraphenalia, and we assure the beginner that with a little pratice he will come to enjoy the thousands of delightful thrills of the casting for the gamey fish.

Of the four essential part, viz., Rod, Reel, Line and Lure, each item is undoubtedly of equal importance and it is also essential that these four parts of the outfit should be selected with a view of a proper relation of each to the other.

To illustrate: It would be fatal to attempt to cast a heavy lure upon a light, resilient rod, as the fine qualities of the rod are quickly destroyed by overloading.

The reverse of this proposition, i. e., attempting to cast a light lure upon a short, stiff rod, will give any but an expert caster no end of trouble with backlashes and other embarrassments in attempting to throw out the bait. Also, a heavy rod demands a heavier line, and a light, resilient rod requires a lighter one.

While this article is written to impart general information and not to exploit or especially "boost" any particular design or brand of fishing tackle, I could not consistently do otherwise than recommend and say that I have the largest and most complete line of Tackle in Michigan.

In choosing a rod our standard designs and weights, preferably in the 4½ or 5 ft. lengths, are recommended for the angler who casts lures of the average weight. If heavier baits are to be used the shorter rods should be used. This pertains to bamboo as well as steel rods.

Your reel should always be a quadruple multiplying one. Within the past few years American mechanical genius has brought the perfectly designed, beautifully finished and thoroughly efficient and durable reel down to the price as low as $2 and 2.50, although a slightly greater investment will procure an added nicety of detail.

In selecting a line don't buy the cheap ones. It don't pay and you can't cast as well with them. Nothing but silk is fit for casting; whereas, for still fishing and trolling, cotton or linen lines are stronger and better. I can sell you silk lines in 50 yd. spools for 50c., 75c. and up.

What baits to use. The question of the proper lure can be determinated only by a knowledge of the particular conditions where fishing is done, and while these conditions may sometimes suggest the use of live, or weedless lures, such as pork rinds, etc., we believe, as a general rule, the modern type of artificial lure, in the refined state to which they are made, will average the most successful. Much controversy lies between the relative merits of surface lures and under water, or sinking lures, whereas the decision should depend entirely upon the condition where the lure is to be employed. Every bait-caster's outfit should include both styles, as the fish in some waters will rise with greater certainty to the surface bait than to the lure running under water. In rivers and usually in lakes of considerable depth, the contrary is true.

The surface bait is preferable for the beginner, as it will float while while the backlash is being untangled.

The art of Bait Casting is easy and any one new at the game will be given all the information I can give for the asking.

New blue gill law going in effect about the middle of August, is 25 blue gills in one day each 5 inches long.

My next artical will be, "Learning to Cast."

Call and see my line of Tackle.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Elizabeth Weller was born in the town of Fenner Madison Co. N. Y., Jan. 13th, 1837 and lived in that vacinity until moving to Coldwater Michigan in 1856. She was married to Horace Weller Oct. 27th, 1875 coming at that time to Tecumseh where she has since resided.

Mrs. Weller was a faithful and constant attendant of the Presbyterian church until failing health compelled her to give up.

She was the youngest of nine children all of whom have preceded her in death.

Her fliction was of nearly a two years duration most of the time being confined to her bed and requiring constant attendance.

She had no children of her own but was a devoted mother to the two daughters of her husband only one of whom survives her, Mrs. George A. Clark at present in Portland Oregon.

She with two nieces and two nephews and a host of friends are left to mourn her loss

"She hath done what she could, her life's work is o'er, her spirit hath fled to that heavenly shore."

Indigestions and Constipation.

"About five years ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets after suffering from indigestion and constipation for years without finding anything to releave me. Chamberlain's Tablets helped me at once and by using them for several weeks I was cured of the complaint," writes Mrs. E. McMullen, Phelps, N. Y. For sale by all dealers. advt

Made Without Yeast

There is no warm bread quite as appropriate for Sunday morning breakfast as German Coffee Cake, yet it is seldom made by housewives who do not bake their own bread. If K C double raise Baking Powder is used it will be just as good as if raised with yeast and it will have the further advantage of being fresh and warm. Save this recipe and try it next Sunday.

K C German Coffee Cake
Two and one-fourth cups sifted flour; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1 level teaspoonful salt; 2 tablespoonfuls melted butter; 2 tablespoonfuls sugar; 1 egg; milk.

Sift dry ingredients together, beat the egg, add milk and butter to the egg to make one and one-quarter cups; stir all together with inverted spoon to a stiff batter. Turn into biscuit pan and spread even. Brush top lightly with melted butter. Sprinkle sugar and ground cinnamon over the top. Bake in moderate oven.

Dutch Apple Cake or Prune Kuchen can be made with this same batter by covering the top with pared and sliced apples, or cooked prunes with the pits removed, skin sides down. Dredge with sugar and cinnamon the same as for Coffee Cake.

"The Cook's Book" contains 90 just such delicious recipes. You can secure a copy free by sending the colored certificate packed in 25-cent cans of K C Baking Powder to the Jaques Mfg. Co., Chicago, being sure to write your name and address plainly.

For an Impaired Appetite.

To improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion try a few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets. Mr. J. H. Seitz, of Detroit, Mich., says: "They restored my appetite when impaired, relieved me of a bloated feeling and caused a pleasant and satisfactory movement of the bowels." NEWS OF THE STATE

May Be Conscience Money.

PORT HURON, MICH. — A package which had been lying in the postoffice of this city for three weeks addressed to Mrs. Louise Levine was delivered to Louis and Henry Goldman, her brothers, and found to contain $95 in bills. The money was forwarded to Mrs. Levine in Detroit.

In the package was a note on which was written, "For you and your children." It is presumed that the late Louis Levine had loaned the money to some one, who took this way of paying the debt.

Sturgis Woman Attacked.

STURGIS, MICH. — Two robbers entered the home of Mrs. Alfred Martin here in the afternoon, choked and beat her into unconsciousness and then ransacked the house. They escaped with a sum of money and other valuables.

Mrs. Martin is suffering from shock following the attack.

Brewery Agent Jailed.

MARSHALL, MICH. — Saul Riskin of Battle Creek pleaded guilty in the circuit court to five charges of violation of the local option law in taking orders for and delivering beer to local residents while agent for a Grand Rapids brewery. He was sentenced to fifteen days in jail and fined $200.

Used Stolen Rig for Plunder.

JACKSON, MICH. — A rig belonging to E. Cogswell, crippled man, was stolen by three men who later broke into the A. L. Mudgett shoe store on Francis street and stole twenty-five pair of shoes. Later the rig and the shoes were recovered, but the thieves escapd.

Former Lennon Cashier Bound Over.

DOWAGIAC, MICH. — George B. Haffner, former bank cashier at Lennon, was bound over to the September term of the Cass County Circuit court on a charge of forging a note for $1,250, executed in 1911 and bearing the signatures of Frank B. and M. E. Frazier.

Saginaw G. A. R. Man Honored.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Another civil war veteran of Saginaw has been honored with an appointment on the staff of the commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. Fred Gill has received his commission as colonel on the staff of Commander in Chief D. J. Palmer.

Will Not Close St. Clair Mission.

PORT HURON, MICH. — A rumor that has been current at St. Clair for several days to the effect that Bishop Williams had ordered St. Paul's mission, at that place, closed and the property sold, was denied by Dr. James W. Inches, one of the vestrymen.

CARD OF THANKS.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled;
God in His wisdom has recalled,
The boon His love had given,
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in Heaven.

We extend our sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and bereavement of our dearly beloved one; also for the many beautiful floral offerings.

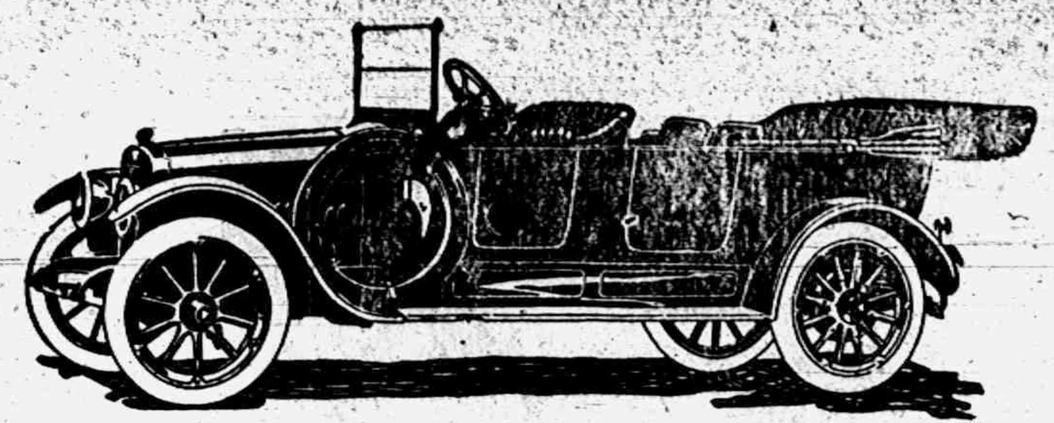
Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The County Y. M. C. A. camp will be held in August instead of June as heretofore. The date set is August 4th to 14th and the place Wamplers lake. The County Secretary is pleased to announce that he has secured the services of Sam Porter of Northwestern University who has won a place on the western champion swimming team. Mr. Porter will have charge of swimming and all water sports. Wilfred Waldron has tendered the use of his sail boat.

The rural boys conference camp will be held this year August 18 to 28 at Torch lake. Carlyle Kay will have half of expenses to Torch lake paid because he won first place in the poultry project last year. Robt. Moore Jr. secured a set of books in this same contest.

HUDSON Six-40 for 1915
New Price $1,550 F.O.B. Detroit



THE 1915 GEM

The HUDSON Six-40 for 1915 offers 32 surprises.

Last year it seemed that no car could be better. And it seemed that quality cars could never sell lower.

But the HUDSON engineers—headed by Howard E. Coffin—have brought out 31 new features. And a trebled output—due to overwhelming demand—will reduce the price $200.

It is handsomer—better equipped. Just think—48 engineers for one whole year have worked exclusively on refinements. Yet the price—which was never approached in a quality car—has been lowered by $200.

You will find in this new model the jewel car of the year—the final ideal in a Six. You will find many attractions shown in no other car. And a price which no one considered possible until Hudson made it possible.

Sample car can be seen at the Co-Operative Co's show room. Phone 256 for demonstration

PAIGE
"The Standard of Value and Quality"

If Your Car Is A Paige, You Can Depend Upon It

When you start off on a week-end "jaunt" you want to know that you are coming back in that car—not shamefacedly in a railroad train or a hired "team."

You don't want to make apologies for your car—you don't want to pass up the really worth while long trips because they are "out of the garage zone."

You want to feel that you can go anywhere—confidently and lightheartedly.

If you are to discover one-half of the real joy of motoring, you must drive a car that practically "takes care of itself"—a car that permits you to relax and drink in the woody breath of the forest or the thrilling ozone of the sea.

That's why you need a good car—a reliable car. That's why you need a Paige.

Reliability In The Six-"46"

The first essential of reliability in a motor car, of course, centers in the power plant. With the Six "46" you will find the celebrated Paige-Continental 3½ x 5¼ motor. It is freely conceded that Continental means undisputed leadership in Sixes, and this motor is the result of close co-operation between both Paige and Continental engineers. For smoothness, flexibility and power, here is the highest development found in the light Six field.

No matter what the weather conditions may be, you need never worry about the starting of your motor when you have the Gray & Davis starting and lighting system and the Rayfield carburetor. Here is a combination of the most expensive starting and lighting system that a manufacturer can place on his car and carburetion that is always positive—always efficient.

Then, there is a velvety acting multiple disc clutch with cork inserts, newest type zigzag radiator, resilient cantilever springs, the world famous Bosch magneto, floating type rear axle and powerful brakes with positive action on the steepest hills. No better—no more dependable features can be found on any car at any price.

The Six "46" is a real seven-passenger car of 124-inch wheelbase—not merely a five-passenger car with two extra seats. The lines of the body are the last word in European stream line, the upholstery is genuine leather throughout, and no feature which will contribute to luxurious comfort is missing in the equipment and appointments.

But see this wonderful motor car for yourself. Ride in it—drive it. Then you will see for yourself the combination of high grade features found in no other light Six, whatever the price.

Buggies

We have just received a few sample jobs and are more than pleased with them as they are no two alike, They came in without being all scratched up.

The seats have three panels, these panels are painted different than the balance of the seat.

The curtains fasten with the latest black auto fasteners.

The general lines are very good, strictly up-to-date, not too "loud." We know you will be much pleased with them, realizing every job is warranted fully against all defects.

A SAFE WAY TO STOP INDIGESTION

Your stomach must itself be strong enough to expand and contract with a sort of churning movement so as to mix its digestive juices with your food. If your stomach isn't strong enough to do this you will keep right on having indigestion and and every artificial digester you use will make your stomach weaker.

There is one Stomach remedy that every dyspeptic can depend on and that is the famous old MI-O-NA Stomach Tablets. Most stomach remedies let the stomach rest and digest the food themselves. Mi-o-na succeeds by strengthening and stimulating the stomach and making it do its own digesting. It stops stomach pains, gas, bloating, burning, belching, etc., in ten minutes and does still better by making the flabby, inflamed and inactive stomach walls grow strong and elastic and able to do their own churning. Mi-o-na Tablets never lose their effect and unlike mere artificial digesters need not be used forever. A few weeks use is generally sufficient to put any stomach in fine shape and C. A. Wright & Son and many other leading druggists hereabouts sell it with that understanding, agreeing to refund money to anyone who does not get complete relief. adv

RUNAWAY

Tuesday afternoon Harry Tucker of Britton drove in town and stopped at the watering trough to give his horse a drink. He removed the bridle while the horse was drinking and stood by. An auto came by just at that time, and the horse became frightened running west into a buggy taking off one wheel and escaping an auto that was parked in front of the Coller House turning the corner where he was stopped by a passerby. He was entangled in the harness and the buggy was a total wreck.

BEAUTIFUL DOGWOODS.

When This Shrub Blossoms Summer Is Again Here.

The magnificent magnolias spread their languid petals so early, while the trees are yet bare, that one fears it is all too good to be true. But with the delicious dogwoods it is another story. One knows summer is practically here. And the dogwoods are not only charming when their snowy sheets are spread, their foliage is vivid in the fall, a glorious crimson, and the berries are even more richly tinted. Unfortunately the hungry birds often descend upon a tree and devour every blossom. Like many other shrubs, its buds for the following year will be set this autumn. Even prettier than this dogwood is the pink flowering variety, but while the color is wonderful the form is not a characteristic.

The round topped, upward branching red maple is superb against a very blue sky. Then the dark gray bark looks black and the crimson blossoms which grow on short pedicels, seem more than ever brilliant. In Georgia and Florida these blossoms are a superb sight in March and a delight to the northerner because they come so early.

One need not be forever looking aloft however. Right down in the grass are floral riches a-plenty. The first favorite, no doubt, is the violet, the dear, modest little violet, which everybody loves and which blossoms everywhere. The little blue hepatica was one of the floral early buds; likewise the pinky and exquisite arbutus, which some call the mayflower. In April and May the bloodroot is found, its pure white golden hearted blossoms being as lovely as the juice of its root stock is surprising.

A UNIQUE RECORD

Very Few Like It In Our Broad Republic

Home testimony for Doan's Kidney Pills, published in every locality, is of itself convincing evidence of merit. Confirmed testimony forms still stronger evidence. Years ago, a citizen of Tecumseh gratefully acknowledged the benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills. The statement is now confirmed—the proof more convincing. Cases of this kind are plentiful in the work of Doan's Kidney Pills—the record is unique.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, says: "My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success, I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory. I am in hopes that other kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience. I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

PAPER MEN FIGHT INCREASE

Michigan Manufacturers Say New Freight Rate Would Ruin Them.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — If Kalamazoo and other Michigan paper manufacturers, who returned from Washington, failed to convince the suspension board of the interstate commerce commission that the proposed new classification for paper made in Michigan and shipped to the east, was unjust, Michigan paper mills will practically be driven out of the eastern field.

During the present week Michigan paper manufacturers have been presenting evidence against the increase, and they stated they believed the board would not permit the increase to be made. It was pointed out that paper mills in the east would be given a great advantage

KAISER'S ENVOY TO SEE PRESIDENT

Von Bernstorff Will Discuss Germany's Reply to America.

ANSWER IS EVASIVE IS VIEW

President Has Prepared Note to Kaiser's Government, Which Was Submitted to Cabinet, and Is Being Withheld Until After Today's Conference With Von Bernstorff.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—While President Wilson was understood to have prepared in rough outline, the new note to Germany, it will be withheld, and its contents closely guard until after today's conference between the President and Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador.

Envoy Asks For Conference.

The conference was asked for by the ambassador. State department officials, who arranged it, said they did not know what the envoy wanted.

At the embassy it was stated he hoped to be able to discuss with the President Germany's latest note to the United States and find out, if possible, "what further action" the President planned.

There are two courses open to the president, according to one official of the state department.

One is to support the original American stand without reservation and the other to take a course which will entail prolonged controversy.

Will Support Stand.

It was predicted the president will take the former course.

The German note is disappointing and evasive in character and is regarded here as more conducive to parley than to quick adjustment of the present grave difficulties between this nation and Germany.

The state department completed the deciphering of the German answer shortly after 10 a. m. Monday. It is learned that the text cabled to the press from Berlin was substantially correct except in the matter of the charge made by the German foreign office that the Lusitania was known to have carried mounted guns below her decks.

The official text stated that the German government was informed that the Lusitania undoubtedly carried these guns. The official text also stated bluntly that the British government "rejected" the American proposal for the limitation of warfare proposed under the German and British blockade orders.

"Gulflight Case Error."

The American steamship Gulflight was torpedoed by mistake, according to the commander of the German submarine that attacked her, Ambassador Gerard in Berlin reported to the state department.

"The American ambassador at Berlin," says the state department announcement, "reports that the chief of the admiralty staff, Admiral Behnke, has informed him that the commander of the submarine said two boats similar to trawlers, one carrying wireless apparatus, were apparently convoying the Gulflight.

"The commander therefore thought it a British boat and did not notice the American flag on the stern until just after giving the order to fire."

Put Salt In Milk.

Milk will not turn sour if a teaspoonful of fine salt be added to every quart.

When preparing onions, turnips and carrots for cooking, cut across the fiber, as this makes them more tender when cooked.

In warming a steamed pudding or in steaming a stale cake never put the article on a plate or flat dish. Place the pudding in a colander in the steamer and you will be surprised to find how much lighter and more delicate the pudding will be than if a plate had been used for the moisture to settle on and make the pudding heavy.

MOTHER SUPERIOR ROSARY HILL HOME

Rosary Hill Home, Hawthorne, N.Y. —"I have been at work among the sick and poor for nearly eighteen years, and whenever I have used Vinol for run-down, weak or emaciated patients, they have been visibly benefited by it. One patient, a young woman, was so weak and ill she could hardly creep to my door for aid, and was leaning on a friend's arm. I supplied Vinol to her liberally and in a month when she returned to thank me I hardly recognized her. She was strong, her color charming and her cheeks rounded out. These words are uttered from my heart, in order that more people may know about Vinol, as there is nothing makes me happier in the world than to relieve the sick."—Mother M. ALPHONSA LATHROP, O.S.D., Hawthorne, N.Y.

Such disinterested and reliable testimony should convince everyone of the merits of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic to build up health and strength for all weakened and nervous conditions, whether caused from overwork, worry or chronic coughs and colds. If Vinol fails to benefit we return your money.

BERLIN REPLIES TO U. S. PROTEST

Answer to Wilson Note Requests Agreement on Facts.

CHARGES LUSITANIA CRUISER

Communication Acknowledges Error in Gulflight and Cushing Cases—Says Falaba Tried to Escape—Holds British Owners to Blame for Loss of Lusitania Lives.

BERLIN (Via The Hague) —The text of the German reply to the American note regarding the Lusitania and other incidents as made public here follows:

"The imperial government has subjected the statements of the United States to careful examination and has a lively wish to contribute in a frank and friendly manner to clear up any misunderstanding which may have entered into the relations between the two governments through the events mentioned by the American note.

Indemnity for Cushing and Gulflight.

"With regard to the Cushing and Gulflight incidents the American embassy already has been informed that it is far from the German government to have any intention of ordering attacks by submarines or fliers on neutral ships in the war zone not guilty of any hostile act. On the contrary most explicit instructions repeatedly have been given the German armed forces to avoid attacking such vessels.

"If neutral ships have come to grief through German submarine warfare during the past few months by mistake, it is a question of isolated and exceptional cases which are traceable to the misuse of flags by the British, in connection with carelessness or suspicious actions on the part of ships. In all cases where a neutral vessel, through no fault of its own, has come to grief through German submarines or fliers according to the facts as ascertained by the German government, this government has expressed its regret at the unfortunate occurrence and has promised indemnification where the facts justified it. Germany will treat the cases of the American steamers Cushing and Gulflight according to the same principles. An investigation is in progress and the results will be communicated to the embassy shortly.

"If necessary the investigation can be supplemented by a call on the international committee of inquiry, as provided for in article III of The Hague agreement of Oct. 18, 1907.

Says Falaba Tried to Escape.

"In the case of the sinking of the English ship Falaba, the commander of the German submarine had the intention of allowing the passengers and crew ample opportunity to save themselves. It was not until the captain disregarded the order to lay to and took to flight, sending up rockets for help, that the commander ordered the crew and passengers by signal through megaphone to leave within ten minutes. As a matter of fact he allowed them twenty-three minutes and did not fire a torpedo until suspicious vessels were hurrying to aid the Falaba.

Regrets Lusitania Loss of Life.

"With regard to the loss of life when the British passenger steamer Lusitania was sunk the German government already has expressed deep regret to neutrals concerned that nationals of those countries lost their lives. The imperial government is unable for the rest to reject the impression that certain important facts most directly connected with the sinking of the Lusitania may have escaped the attention of the American government. It therefore considers it necessary in the interests of the clear and full understanding aimed at by both governments primarily to convince itself that the reports of the facts which are before the two governments are complete and in agreement.

Says It Was Auxiliary Cruiser.

"The government of the United States proceeds from the assumption that the Lusitania is to be considered as an ordinary unarmed merchant vessel. The imperial government begs in this connection to point out that the Lusitania was one of the largest and fastest English commercial steamers constructed with government's funds as an auxiliary cruiser and is expressly included in the navy list published by the British admiralty.

"It is moreover known to the imperial government from reliable information furnished by its officials and neutral passengers that for some time practically all the more valuable English merchant vessels have been provided with guns, ammunition and other weapons and furnished with crews especially practiced in manning guns. According to reports here, the Lusitania, when she left New York, had guns aboard which were mounted under deck and masked.

"The imperial government furthermore has the honor to direct the particular attention of the American government to the fact that the British admiralty by secret instructions in February of this year advised the British merchant marine not only to seek protection behind neutral flags and markings but even when so disguised to attack German submarines by ramming.

Blames British Owners.

"High rewards were offered by the British government as a special incentive for the destruction of submarines by merchant vessels and such rewards already have been produced. In view of these facts which are satisfactorily known to the imperial government, it is unable to consider British merchant vessels any longer 'undefended territory' in the zone of war and time of war designated by the admiralty and staff of the imperial German navy. German commanders consequently are no longer in the position to observe the rules of right of capture otherwise usual and with which they invariably complied before this. Lastly the imperial government must specially point out that on her last trip the Lusitania, as on earlier occasions, had Canadian troops and munitions of war aboard, including no less than 5,400 cases of ammunition destined for the destruction of brave German soldiers who are fulfilling with self sacrifice and devotion their duty to the fatherland. The German government believes it acts in just self defense when its soldiers destroy ammunition destined for the enemy with the means of war at its command. English steamship companies must have been aware of the dangers to which passengers aboard the Lusitania were exposed and the circumstance. In taking them aboard in spite of this, the company quite deliberately tried to use the lives of American citizens as protection for the ammunition carried and violated the clear provisions of American laws which expressly prohibit and provide punishment for carrying passengers on ships which have explosives aboard. The company thereby wantonly caused the death of so many passengers. According to the express report of the submarine commander concerned, which is only confirmed by all other reports, there can be no doubt that the rapid sinking of the Lusitania was primarily due to an explosion of her cargo of ammunition caused by a torpedo. Otherwise there was all human possibility that the passengers would have been saved.

Asks Further Facts.

"The imperial government holds the facts recited to be of sufficient importance to recommend them to careful examination by the American government. The imperial government begs to reserve final statements of its position with regard to the demands made in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania until a reply is received from the American government and believes it should recall here that it took note with satisfaction of the proposals of good offices submitted by the American government to Berlin and London with a view of paving the way for conduct of the maritime war between Germany and Great Britain. The imperial government furnished at that time ample evidence of its good will by its willingness to consider these proposals. The realization of these proposals failed on account of their rejection by Great Britain."

ITALIANS STORM TYROL FORT

ROME — The following official statement of the operations of the Italian military forces was issued by General Cadorna, chief of the general staff:

"The advance of our troops beyond the Tyrol Trentino frontier continues, and we have ocupied the important height of Zugna, about four miles north of Ala, which dominates Bovereto. Upon this height the Austrians some time ago ordered a fortress built. Our vigorous artillery action upon the pleateu being followed up, the fire of the Austrian fort Belvedere diminished in antensity and our infantry is solidly established upon the field.

"Our front advancing in Val Sugana has arrived within five miles of Gorgo and is supported strongly on two clopes of the valley. The mountain of Belvedere, which dominates Fiera di Primieri, in the Cismon Valley, is also in our hands."

KAISER'S AIRMEN IN RAID ON LONDON

Zeppelin Fleet Reaches Goal After Many Months.

LONDON—Nnety bombs were dropped in the raid on London by Zeppelins. Four persons were killed, and a few were injured. No public building was damaged.

LONDON — The Official Press Bureau issued the following announcement:

"Zeppelins are reported to have been seen near Ramsgate (on the Kentish coast, sixty-seven miles east-southeast of London) and Brentwood (seventeen miles east-northeast of London, and in certain outlying districts of London. Many fires are reported, but these cannot be absolutely connected with the airship visits.

The press bureau appends the following note to its bulletin:

"Further particulars will be issued as soon as collected and collated."

The bureau then reminds the newspapers of London that "no statement must be published dealing with places in the neighborhood of London reached by aircraft, or the course supposed to have been taken by them. The admiralty, in a communique, will give all the news which properly can be published."

De Palma Wins 500-Mile Auto Race.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. — Ralph De Palma, driving one of the most spectacular races ever seen on any American automobile track, won the fifth annual revival of the International Sweepstakes, 500 mile race at Indianapolis when he drove his Mercedes to victory, going the route in 5:33:55.5. Dario Resta was a close second.

Takes Prisoners Off Roads.

KALAMZOO, MICH. — Declaring that the use of county prisoners on road construction work has proved expensive the new road commission has decided to abolish the system used here during the last few years.

PAIGE
"The Standard of Value and Quality"

We'll Take the Family in the Paige

It is good just to live these days. But it is better to be in the open, to be swinging through the green country-side, through woodlands, past quiet lakes, beyond the noise-zone and dirt-zone and worry-zone of the city—in the warm sunshine of young summer—with the family. That's the vital point—with the family. And the Paige "Six"—seven passenger "Six"—the most popular, the fastest selling, the sensational "Six" of the year—is the vehicle that enables the family to take its tours, and recreation—together.

Why is the Paige "Six" the most popular light "Six" of the year?

First, there is its amazingly low price—$1395.

Then, there is the national verdict that the Paige "Six" offers a combination of highest-grade features that cannot be bought in any other six-cylinder car—whatever the price.

What are the Paige Six's Features?

The unequalled ease of riding on all roads and hills, accomplished by the cantilever spring suspension.

The vast power and flexibility of the Paige-Continental motor (3½x5¼). The easily-operated and always dependable Gray & Davis electric equipment for starting the motor and electrically lighting the car.

The Rayfield carburetor which means unfailing service and the Bosch Magneto which means the world's best ignition.

The multiple disc cork-insert clutch, luxurious leather upholstery, one-man top and a score of other distinctive features that, together, mean the very acme of luxurious motoring—and at the Paige Price—$1395.

These are the reasons why the Paige "Six" is unique—why the Paige "Six" is "the year-ahead car"—why next year the Paige "Six" will be the most widely copied car in the country.

Today its position is supreme and its supremacy is unchallenged.

Today—see your Paige Dealer and let him show the family the wonder-working Paige "Six."

KIDNAPED GIRL BACK HOME

Stranger Puts Her Aboard Freight Train.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 7.—Kidnaped, placed on a freight train and taken to Stanwood by a stranger she had never seen before was the thrilling experience of Lamoine Hare, twelve year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hare, of Big Rapids. The girl was returned to her home by the conductor of a Grand Rapids and Indiana passenger train. She was unharmed but rather frightened.

The child stated that a man who was fairly good looking, was standing beside the track near her. When an empty car passed he picked her up and placed her aboard. She screamed so loud the man was frightened and jumped off. The train by this time was moving so fast the girl feared to jump and so rode to Stanwood. Officials are now making war on all tramps seen in the vicinity of Big Rapids.

FOOD CITY MEN FIGHT RATES

Battle Creek Manufacturers Say Freight Charges Kill Business.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 7.—That Battle Creek factories alone are losing $100,000 a year by exorbitant freight rates on commodities, was the claim made here by E. C. Nettels, representing the Postum Cereal company, at a session before Examiner Marshall of the interstate commerce commission. Another manufacturer, John L. Kellogg of the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flakes company attributed the failure of ten or more food concerns that started here during the boom of a few years ago was due to the high freight rates, while Chas. W. Ward, secretary of the chamber of commerce, testified that since 1910 Battle Creek has lost several pros-

NEWS FROM THE HURREYS

"I wonder if I shall ever see California!" sighed mother. "We are getting too old," replied father, but in spite of years and fears the dream of a life time has been realized.

It happened this way,——A wandering son having business on the Pacific Coast proposed that his parents accompany him as "paying guests." The challenge was accepted and George Ziehr delivered two yards of "marked up" tickets fixed up exactly right. According to agreement the parents found their son on the Lake Shore Chicago Express in Adrian May 11 and the trio continued their journey in great glee.

The first stop of any real signifience brought us face to face with a great opening for a young man; it was the Grand Canyon of Arizona. There is no use trying to do what Teddy and all the poets and artists have failed to accomplish—neither brush nor pen can portray the grandeur of a world's wonder which bankrupts the descriptive powers of the most gifted.

Friends met us at Pasadena and introduced us to the flowers and palatial homes of the City of Millionaires, the drive included a visit to the famous Busch gardens and called our attention to the residence of Mrs. James A. Garfield.

"It's a Little Gem"-that's the way those Southern California boosters talk about the San Diego exposition,-so inasmuch as our ticket man had made provision for this four hour journey from Los Angeles we saw the show for ourselves. For beauty of design and perfection of Spanish architecture it is surely "hard to beat" and amply rewards the visitor. Of course we had to see Coronado, so we spent a delightful hour on the veranda of Hotel Coronado, using a little of their free stationery and watching the hydroplanes sail over the bay.

The sojourn in Los Angeles was enriched by the generous hospitality of a former Tecumseh citizen, Rev. E. Sedweek in whose church we worshipped. Long will the memory linger of the visit to San Gabriel and the Mission Play, but longer still the recollection of the voyage to Santa Catalina. To the captain, the ocean was "just like a millpond" but to Michigrn "land lubbers" it was worse than the Ocean Wave of Coney Island.

The vision of my venerable father grabbing frantically for his departed Panama while endeavoring to support his vanquished wife, still haunts me. Where was the "chivalrous" son at that time? Space forbids, but justice demands that it be stated that bolting 'em down is useless.

California is full of prunes but what state wouldn't be if it meant an annual income of $400 an acre? Little Henry Ford guided us most delightfully over the asphalt roads among the apricot, prune, peach, walnut and orange groves of Santa Clara Valley. We tried in vain to see the top of the big trees of Santa Cruz and marveled at the wealth and genius which have created Stanford University.

Have you been to the Fair? Yes—and its great. Judged by beauty and grandeur of buildings it is the greatest of World Expositions, the exhibits are exceedingly good, the illumination baffles descriptions. The "Zone" is neither torrid nor frigid but comfortable and entertaining but possibly most fascinating of all were the dare-devil stunts of Art Smith the bird-man. In spite of the tragic death of his teacher, Beacher, this young pupil turns flip-flops two thousand feet over your head and by a wonderful illuminating device spells words againt the black midnight sky.

At first we were inclined to say, "they ain't no such bird," but there is and my father says, "Go west young man of 70 and see him."

Through the generosity of a friend we were taken to the heights of Oakland and Berkeley in a Pierce Arrow and given a wonderful view of San Francisco, the Golden Gate and the Pacific.

Fortunately our party visited Salt Lake City at the hour of service in the great Morman Tabernacle and heard the chorus choir and the powerful organ.

Just ask mother how she liked the wild ride in an open car through the Royal Gorge and get both of these veteran travelers to tell you a whole lot of things that combined to afford deep satisfaction to the conductor of the little party on their four thousand mile tour.

IS ADRIAN DEAD?

As Leon Williamson and family were motoring through Adrian Sunday, they came upon the Salvation Army with their band. Little Barbara who had become deeply impressed with the Memorial Day parade and music turned a very earnest face to her father and remarked, "Papa Adrian must be dead".

KILLED DRIVING AUTO, NO CLEW TO SLAYER

Mystery Surrounds Death of M. A. Sherwood of Jackson.

Jackson, Mich., June 7.—After a thorough investigation the police have absolutely no clew to the identity of the assailant of Mott A. Sherwood, master mechanic of the Michigan Central railroad, who was murdered as he was driving through Keeley park in an automobile.

The four persons in the machine with Sherwood told detectives that the automobile came to an abrupt stop, and investigation revealed that Sherwood was dead.

For some time it was believed Sherwood was a victim of apoplexy, but later it was discovered that a bullet had entered his left shoulder and penetrated his heart.

Members of the party reported hearing sharp reports, but said they attributed them to tire explosion.

Electricity Kills Worker.

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 7.—Bartol Kurtick was electrocuted while working on the roof of a down town store building. Forty-two thousand volts from a transformer passed through his body, when he came in contact with a defective wire.

John C. Rice, Comedian, Dead.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 7.—John C. Rice, a widely known comedian, died suddenly at a hotel here. He was fifty-seven years old.

THIRD PRESBYTERIAN

10 a. m. Morning worship and sermon. 11:30 a. m. Bible School. 3 p. m. Junior Christian Endeavor. 6:30 p. m. Senior Christian Endeavor. 7:30 p. m. Evening Worship and Address, "Alone in his generation. A short walk with Noah."

The members of the third Presbyterian church are justly rejoiced at the results of the last year. A fine increase in membership, the presence of strangers characterizing each Sunday service, a year closed with current debts paid, an increase in offerings to the benevolence of the church of 30 per cent, and pledges for the new year of still another 30 per cent increase over last year, and an increase in pledges toward local support of 100 per cent over last year, are some of the features that the reports show.

Three Midshipmen Dismissed.

Annapolis, Md., June 7.—The three midshipmen who were dismissed from the naval academy for "cribbing" examinations were Charles C. Gill, second class from Tenessee; Ralph R. Byers of Indiana, and John G. Grogan of California, both third class students.

C. J. Strobel, Baseball Magnate, Dies.

Toledo, O., June 7.—Charles J. Strobel, fifty-one years old, former baseball magnate and promoter of racing aircraft, died in a hospital of typhoid fever. Strobel was given credit for producing the late Addie Joss, former pitcher for the Cleveland Americans; Bob Ewing and Otto Knabe.

Colt Breaks World Record.

Louisville, Ky., June 7.—Luke, former United States Senator Johnson N. Camden's three year old Peter Quince-Amy J. colt, ran six furlongs at Douglas park with 109 pounds up in 1:10 3-5. The former record was 1:10 4-5.

Sues Road to Bar Liquor.

Bismarck, N. D., June 7.—Assistant Attorney General Bitzing filed an injunction order to restrain the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway from carrying liquor into prohibition North Dakota.

Charlton Sane When Wife Was Slain.

Como, Italy, June 7.—(Via Paris.)—Porter Charlton, the American accused of having murdered his wife at their villa here in June of 1910, was declared by court expert to have been mentally responsible at the time of his wife's death.

French Admiral Displaced.

Paris, June 7.—The command of the French fleet at the Dardanelles has been given to Admiral Nicol. He supersedes Admiral Guepratte, who has been made second in command. No official cause is assigned.

3,113 More British Fall.

London, June 7.—The official casualty list added 3,113 names to the list of killed, wounded, or missing since the war began. This is the longest single list issued by the government during the war.

Prince Killed in Battle.

Petrograd, June 7.—Prince Bagration-Mouchransky, son-in-law of the Grand Duke Constantine, was killed in the battle that preceded the fall of Przemysl, according to dispatches received here.

Ex-Umpire Perine Dies.

Oakland, Cal., June 7.—Fred (Bull) Perine, former American league umpire, who suffered a sunstroke in 1912 while umpiring in New York, died in the Napa state hospital.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powerc that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

BERLIN FAILS TO UNDERSTAND U.S.

Either Misreads or Gets Inadequate American Information.

THINKS ISSUE NOT SERIOUS

Reports at Washington Over Attitude of Kaiser's Government Discouraging—President Will Send Out Second Note in Day or Two—May Sever Diplomatic Relations.

Washington, June 7.—That Berlin has either lacked adequate reports from the United States or else has completely misread them, was the conclusion reached by many officials here from published dispatches asserting that the German authoritier and the public there no longer regards the submarine issue with the United States as one of serious proportions.

Reports of a similar character have reached this country through official channels and they are looked upon as the most discouraging feature of the situation. It is felt here that the prospects of a satisfactory response by Germany to the demands of the United States will not be bright until the German government and the German people have come to a realization of the intense feeling in this country and the determination of the president to insist upon adequate guarantees for the safety of American lives on the high seas.

Second Note Made Clearer.

That the second note of President Wilson, agreed upon at the cabinet meeting Friday, will go far toward imparting to Germany a clearer understanding of the firm stand of this government, isthe expectations in official quarters here.

This note, it is said authoritatively, will go forward to Berlin in a day or two. Some surprise was expressed by those close to the administration that it should be thought that the failure of he noe to Germany indicated the slightest change in policy. It was asserted that such surmises were absolutely without foundation.

The note, it is said, is still to receive its final polishing. This task the president is to perform himself. Saturday, upon the advice of his physician, he spent in the open air, exercising and motoring, while Sunday he occupied himself in much the same way, conforming to his practice of doing no work on Sunday. It is said that the president looks forward with confidence to taking up the task of making the slight modifications in the note today and disposing of it in a very short time. Officials who are familiar with the contents of the note predicted that it will be fully as popular with the people of the United States as the first communication. No backward step has been taken by the president. In fact, it is more forceful if anything than the first note giving Germany to understand that this government will expect a prompt expression from her as to whether or not she intends to abide by the principles o finternational law.

May Sever Relations.

If Germany fails to give such assurances only one course, in the opinion of most Washington officials, will be open to this country and that will be a severance of diplomatic relations.

ITALIANS CLAIM GUN SUPERIORITY

Official Report Says Advance In Trentino Is Steady.

DALMATIA IS RAIDED BY NAVY

Fleet Cruises Adriatic Without Finding Enemy Ships—Cattaro Is Bombarded and Railroad Over Which Foe's Munitions Pass to Garrison Wrecked—Trieste in Bad Way.

Rome, June 7.—While the military operations on the entire front of the Trentino frontiers limited to artillery duels, the Italians are making progress at every point, according to a report from General Cadorna, the chief of the general staff. The report says the Italian artillery is vastly superior to that of the Austrians.

Fleet Raids Dalmatia.

The first official information of the movements of the Italian fleet since the opening of hostilities was given out when the ministry of marine told of a raid by a naval division on the coast of Dalmatia. Light houses were bombarded and destroyed and serious damage was caused to the railway from Ragusa to Cattaro, which has been supplying munitions to the Austrian garrison in the latter port, besieged for ten months by the Montenegroes.

A destroyer flotilla resumed the bombardment of Monfalcone, on the railroad from the Fruili frontier to Trieste, while larger ships cruised the waters at the head of the Adriatic without sighting enemy vessels.

Report Trieste in Bad Way.

Reliable advices from Trieste say that the population of that city, which is normally about 250,000, including about 170,000 Italians, has been reduced to less than half that number. The city council has been dissolved, the mayor and aldermen being arrested and deported together with the most prominent citizens.

The troops have been withdrawn from Trieste and the police are making no effort to prevent looting. The street cars have ceased running, the trolley wires and other copper fittings having been requisitioned for the army. The railroad between Trieste and Kabrasina has been cut. Food is lacking in the city.

A report that the kaiser intends to make a visit to the Italo-Austrian front has been denied officially in Berlin, according to a dispatch from that city. Germany has not yet openly joined Austria in the war against Italy, although secret aid is given to the Austrians in the way of war material and staff officers besides which a large body of Bavarian troops are held in reserve to be sent to the Tyrol.

FRENCH NAVY UPLIFTER DIES

Senator Pelletan Tried to Replace Discipline.

Paris, June 7.—Senator Camille Pelletan, the man who tried to "democratize" the French navy, died here of heart trouble.

As minister of marine Pelletan attracted world wide attention several years ago by seeking to replace rigid discipline by brotherly relations between officers and crew and advocated revolutionary ideas of building.

Copenhagen Celebrates Constitution.

Copenhagen, June 7.—The new constitution, which has been signed by the king, was the cause of a great procession of men and women who marched to the royal palace Amalienberg to present their homage to the king. The constitution grants suffrage to all men and women of twenty-five years or over.

NEWSPAPERS CONSOLIDATED

Battle Creek, Mich., June 7.—A deal has been consummated whereby the Daily Moon and Daily Journal, the two oldest newspapers in the city, are consolidated, starting today as the Moon-Journal. The deal involves the retirement of Martin E. Brown founder and publisher of the Moon, and William A. Thomson, publisher of the Daily Journal, and until recently of newspapers at Lansing and Kalamazoo, and the sale of both newspapers to a corporation headed by Nelson E. Conine as president and treasurer and George B. Dolliver as vice president and secretary.

These two men, who have been with the Moon twenty years, the latter part of the time as business manager and managing editor, had the backing of five prominent public men, Charles E. Kolb, Frank K. Berry, Merton W. Wentworth, John Heyser and Joseph L. Hooper.

ONE GAME WOULD COST DEAR

Heir Loses $1,500 If He Plays Foot Ball.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 7—When the will of Mrs. Rachel McMullen was made public it was found to contain a provision for a trust fund of $1,500 to be used in the education of a grandson, William H. McMullen.

The will further provided that in case the grandson showed a tendency to play football the fund should revert to the estate.

STARCHED COLLARS USED.

Starched linen and pique collars are attractive below round, youthful faces, but they are hopelessly trying on thin faced women and on women past the freshness of youth. With these childish collars are worn knotted ties of soft silk in striped black and white or dotted black and white effects, or of crepe de chine in sombre shadings. The effect with one of the new mannishly tailored suits is very smart, indeed, but women of mature years do best to confine themselves to a more formal type of collar of handkerchief lawn or batiste touched with a little hand embroidery or finished with hemstitching. A collar of some sort, however, must turn over on the dark tailored coat to give it the correct air

WIPING OUT MALARIA IN PANAMA CANAL ZONE

American Sanitary Officers Meeting With Great Success.

Washington.—The report of the department of health of the Panama canal for the last calendar year shows that the American sanitary officers on the canal zone are meeting with remarkable success in combating malaria.

Those other diseases so likely to visit white men in tropical climates, dysentery and typhoid fever, are also being coped with successfully. The report shows that no deaths occurred among Americans in the canal zone in the year 1914 from malaria, dysentery or typhoid fever. Yellow fever, as is well known, has long since been banished from the canal zone by the scientific efficacy and thoroughness of the methods of the American sanitary officials.

The fact is that malaria, not only among the Americans in the canal region, but among the entire population there, has been reduced to a lower point than ever before. In this connection, it appears, apart from the report for the year 1914, that the malarial outbreaks among employees in the canal zone outside of Cristobal and Toro Point are now at the lowest point.

The pneumonia death rate increased considerably owing to prevalence of measles among the black employees and the overcrowded conditions in which the people live in Panama. The five diseases causing the highest number of deaths in their order are pneumonia, tuberculosis, nephritis, organic diseases of the heart and malaria.

In the latter half of 1914 a periodic physical examination was made of all food handlers in the kitchens, mess rooms and commissaries of the Panama canal with the result that one typhoid carrier and a number of cases of contagious diseases were detected and eliminated. This doubtless prevented much disease among employees.

In Colon and Panama the figures show a high infant mortality, due to ignorance and indifference on the part of mothers.

LEAVES TRUST TO KEEP GRAVES GREEN FOREVER.

Strange Orders Given In Will For Planting Flowers and Trees.

Herman Zur Lage of Hackensack, N. J., who left an estate of over half a million dollars, gave the following orders in his will as to his grave and the graves of his brother and sister:

"In the spring of each year four dozen pansies of the best quality to be planted on each of the graves, to be removed therefrom on the 24th of the following May, when the graves are to be planted in the middle with yellow and red allananthea, with a border of escheveria, and a palm in the center; all the flowers to be planted closely together, so the graves cannot be seen when the flowers are in bloom.

"When they become so large that they interfere with the graves the trees are to be removed and new trees planted in their place, as follows: One at each corner of the plot, one of them to have red foliage and one white.

"Also to place on each grave several days preceding Thanksgiving day each year metal wreaths, decorated with best imported artificial flowers of one color, said wreaths to be laid on easels. The railing around the plot to be sandpapered when it becomes rusty and then painted with one coat of white lead and one of aluminium."

Nurse Marries Indiana Man.

Laporte, Ind., June 7—Harry Briggs of Indianapolis, a traveling salesman, and Miss Dorothy Frederickson of Peoria, Ill., who for four years was a nurse at St. Luke's hospital, St Louis, were married at St. Paul's rectory by Rev. Daniel Leb Goodwin They will reside in Des Moines, Ia.

There was a full house of the Presbyterian church Sunday evening for the Baccalaureate sermon for the Class of 1915.

Rev W. L. Conklin of the Universalist church gave the Invocation Rev. W. W. R. Hartzog of the Baptist church read the lesson. Rev. L. G Pim of the Friends church made the prayer. Singing by the choir of the Presbyterian church and a solo by W. S. Dickinson followed.

Rev. G. W. Jennings gave a very fine address directing his remarks more especially to the class, who listened with marked attention.

Owing to the heavy rain of Monday afternoon the class day exercises were postponed until today.

The class of 1915 have finished their high school work and it only remains for them to carry out the program for Commencement week, and then—What next?

A few weeks rest with some a few days with others then they enter on new work, some preparing for college others for teaching, while some will retire to private life whatever they may do we wish them all the very best that life may have in store for them.

GARDEN CLUB IN SPOKANE.

Vacant Lots and Back Yards Are Cultivated and Beautified.

This, the fifth year of the Spokane Home Garden club, organized and conducted by the Young Men's Christian association and the Spokesman-Review, finds the club serving as a model for similar civic movements all over the country. More than fifty cities have written to the Y. M. C. A. for details of the plan by which for the past four years Spokane young people have welcomed the warm spring days by converting cluttered back yards into copiously herbiferous gardens. Letters have come from districts as widely separated as the Adirondack mountains and the Sacramento valley. Women's clubs, civic uplift organizations and other branches of the Y. M. C. A. have written for information.

It is in the cultivation of vacant lots and back yards that the Home Garden club has during the last few years shown its value as a city beautiful aid. Besides removing from the public eye a great many unsightly lots on which the accumulation of winter refuse was thick, the club last year produced vegetables whose total value is estimated by Secretary G. A. Forbes of the Y. M. C. A. at $6,000.

Active co-operation is being given by the federal government, which, through the department of agriculture, is organizing the boys and girls of many cities into garden clubs, potato clubs, corn clubs and the like. T. J. Newbill of the department of agriculture will represent the government in Spokane this spring and will advise the Home Gardeners in matters pertaining to gardening efficiency. Mr. Newbill says: "I find that boys and girls make a more profitable circle than grownups for the distribution of government seeds and literature. They are more in earnest, and they are not so likely to disregard the instructions of government experts."

HIRES PRISONER TO WIFE.

Wards of Wisconsin Sheriff Earn $10,376.81 For Their Families.

Janesville, Wis.—Letting out his prisoners to work for wages that go to their families instead of making them hammer stones, C. S. Whipple, Rock county sheriff, is demonstrating the possibilities of the Wisconsin commitment law.

During the two years the statute has been in force $16,775.85 has been earned by the prisoners in this county. Of this amount dependents of paroled persons received $10,376.81 and the county $1,210.41.

One man was paroled for a year to his wife to conduct a clothes pressing establishment.

CARRIE COLVIN

Miss Carrie Colvin passed away at her home southeast of town Monday morning at 10 a. m. at the age of 84 years

Miss Colvin has been in a general decline for the past six months just growing weaker day by day. All of her early life was spent in teaching and for seven or eight years she taught in our public schools.

She was the oldest member in point of membership of the Baptist church where she was a faithful attendent as long as she was able to come She is the last but one of her family, her brother William Colvin of Tulare Cal surviving her, and he is 93 years of age. The funeral will be held at the home at 2 o'clock Wednesday, Rev. Hartzog officiating, burial in Brookside.

FEARED OBLIVION AS VICE PRESIDENT

Roosevelt Pleaded With Platt to Save Him From Post.

IT WOULD ONLY BORE HIM.

Letter Written by Colonel In 1900, When Governor of New York, to Senator, Now Dead, Is Produced by Barnes In His Libel Suit Against Ex-President.

In the course of the hearing of the libel suit brought against him by William Barnes the following interesting letter written by Colonel Roosevelt was produced.

It was written while the colonel was governor of New York and appealed to Senator Platt to save him from oblivion by being vice president under President McKinley:

Executive Chamber,
State of New York, Feb. 1, 1900.
Hon. T. C. Platt, Senate Chamber, Washington:

My Dear Senator Platt—First and least important, if you happen to have seen the Evening Post recently, you ought to be amused, for it is moralizing with lofty indignation over the cringing servility I have displayed in the matter of the insurance superintendent.

I fear it will soon take the view that it cannot possibly support you as long as you associate with me.

Now, as to serious matters, I have, of course, done a great deal of thinking about the vice presidency since the talk I had with you, followed by the letter from Lodge and the visit from Payne of Wisconsin. I have been reserving the matter to talk over with you, but in view of the publication in the Sun this morning I would like to begin the conversation, as it were, by just a line or two now.

I need not speak of the confidence I have in the judgment of you and Lodge, yet I can't help feeling more and more that the vice presidency is not an office in which I could do anything, and not an office in which a man who is still vigorous and not past middle life has much chance of doing anything.

As you know, I am of an active nature in spite of all the work and all the worry, and very largely because of your constant courtesy and consideration, my dear senator, I have thoroughly enjoyed being governor; I have kept every promise, expressed or implied, I made on the stump, and I feel that the Republican party is stronger before the state because of my incumbency. Certainly everything is being managed now on a perfectly straight basis and every office is as clean as a whistle.

Now, I should like to be governor for another term, especially if we are able to take hold of the canals in serious shape, but as vice president I don't see that there is anything I could do. I would simply be a presiding officer and that I should find a bore.

As you know, I am a man of moderate means (although I am a little better off than the Sun's article would indicate), and I should have to live very simply in Washington and could not entertain in any way as Mr. Hobart and Mr. Morton entertained.

My children are all growing up, and I find the burden of their education constantly heavier, so that I am by no means sure that I ought to go on in public life at all providing some remunerative work provided itself.

The only reason that I should like to go on is that, as I have not been a money maker, I feel rather in honor bound to leave my children the equivalent in the way of a substantial sum of actual achievement in politics or letters.

Now, as governor, I can achieve something, but as vice president I should achieve nothing. The more I look at it the less I feel as if the vice presidency offered anything to me that would warrant my taking it. Of course I shall not say anything until I hear from you, and possibly not until I see you, but I did want you to know just how I felt.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Your Boy and You

You have figured a lot on his young career,
You have dreamed and planned and thought,
You have pictured him manly and full of cheer,
With a will for the fight you've fought,
But he'll never come up to the dreams you dream
And he never will do his part
Till you get right down in his heart with him
And take him right into your heart.

You cannot one minute believe he will care
What hopes you have formed of his life
If you haven't meant anything unto him yet
As far as he's gone in his strife;
You cannot look forward to having him rise
To positions of honor and trust
If you've never been comrades, with light in your eyes,
And with bare toes kicking the dust.

Why, maybe you never have known that he
Was a member at home with you
Of the little group of the tender and free,
As a man with a family should do)
You can't expect him, whatever may come,
To fulfill every promise your heart
Has made for him there in life's busy hum,
Unless you have made him a part.

CATARRH GERMS EASILY KILLED

By Breathing Into Throat, Nose and Lungs a Pure Antiseptic Air.

If you have catarrh and want to get rid of it you must kill germs which cause the disease

The best known way of destroying catarrh germs is to breathe into the air passages of your nose and throat and lungs the pleasant, penetrating air of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) Hyomei is made from purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other powerful healing, antiseptic and germicidal ingredients. You breath it through a little pocket inhaler which C. A. Wright & Son and other leading druggist in Tecumseh, Mich., and vicinity are furnishing with every complete treatment sold Every time you inhale the sweet, fragrant air of Hyomei through this little device you are drawing into your swollen, inflamed, germ laden membranes a medicated air, which will not only reduce all the swelling and inflammation and open your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages, but will absolutely and positively destroy every trace of Catarrh germ life it reaches. Druggists are so sure of the blessed, lasting relief that Hyomei brings to catarrh sufferers that they sell it invariably on the positive guarantee that money paid will be refunded if successful results are not secured from its use. advt

FIRST ELECTRIC BATTLESHIP.

California to Be Propelled by Motors Instead of Turbines.

The propelling machinery of the battleship California, now building at the New York navy yard, will be installed by a prominent electric company at a cost of $431,000, according to an announcement by Secretary of the Navy Daniels. The California will be the first battleship in the world to be equipped with electric instead of turbine drive.

The decision to put electric machinery in a battleship has excited the keenest interest in this country and abroad, and Mr. Daniels believes that if the experiment is a success it will mark as great an advance in marine propulsion as did the advent of the steam turbine.

Secretary Daniels claims that electric installation is cheaper by $200,000.

A Community Trust.

Following the general lines of the Cleveland foundation, which has been in existence a year, St. Louis is to have a community trust. The St. Louis Union Trust company, the oldest and largest trust company in Missouri, will administer the trust for the benefit of the present and future community.

The income derived from the trust fund will be expended for the social welfare of St. Louis, under the direction of a committee of five members, one to be appointed by the mayor, one by the judge of the probate court, one by the judge of the United States district court and two by the trust company. St. Louis hopes that it will equal if not exceed the remarkable success of the Cleveland foundation, to which, it is stated by the officers of the Cleveland Trust company, nearly $30,000,000 have been bequeathed during the first year of its existence.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Last evening the Owl Eye Club walked in on Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Blesing to assist the gentleman in celebrating his birthday. They took a splendid picnic supper and no small part of the same was a big birthday cake with 53 candles, Question? How old is Elmer? The evening passed happily in visiting and as a reminder of the evening. Mr. Blesing was presented with a handsome I. O. O. F. pin.

FIELD MEET

Rev. and W. A. Rex entertained the young folks of the Presbyterian church last Friday evening at a Field meet and gymnasium exhibit. Jumping, running, basket ball, trapese performance, tight rope walking, machine and dumb bell exercises. As all these stunts were pulled off in the small parlors of the manse, one can draw their own conclusions. We understand that base bawl was great,

Refreshments were served by the hostess, and the evening was pronounced a howling success.

SAD ACCIDENT

Johnnie Moore the 14 year old son of Mr. and Mrs Robert Moore living near Britton, met with an untimely death last Saturday. He had been riding a favorite colt in the field, and not coming in at dinner time his mother became alarmed and went in search of him, finding his lifeless body by the side of the lane to the pasture. The body was badly bruised and it is thought the colt became frightened and threw him, the colt was in the pasture with the bridle hanging loose, Conundrums.

What herb is most injurious to a girl's beauty? Thyme.

Why are human eyes like persons remote from one another? Because, although they may correspond, they never meet.

Why is a schoolboy being whipped like your eye? Because he is a pupil under the lash.

Why are clouds like coachmen? Because they hold the rains (reins).

Why was the dumb waiter returned? Because it didn't answer.

Why is a fisherman's the most profitable business? It is all net profit.

Why It's Called Picnic.

The term "picnic" originated in the following manner: When what is now known as a picnic was being arranged for the custom originally was that those who intended to be present should supply the eatables and drinkables. A list of these necessities having been drawn up, it was passed round, and each person picked out the article of food or drink that he or she was willing to furnish, and the name of the article was "nicked," or ticked, off the list. The open air entertainment thus became known as "pick and nick." The custom is said to date from 1802.

The Rime of Porcus Prime.

There lived a pig
So fat and big
That hills he could not climb,
But used to lie
Inside his sty.
His name was Porcus Prime.

One summer day
He went away
Quite proudly in a van;
Poor Porcus, he Had gone to tea
With Tom, the butcher's man!

A Mother's Seven Commandments.

Make love to every one, including your own children. If you say pretty things to the kiddies they will say pretty things to you.

The larger number of children in a family the better are the opportunities for a natural education. Your youngest child is always the brightest, because one child learns from another quicker than from an older person.

Never say "don't" to a child. If he becomes mischievous try to interest him in something else.

Never force a child. There is no danger of overburdening his brain with knowledge as long as he is interested. When you see you are tiring him let him rest.

Keep your children cheerful and happy by being cheerful and happy yourself. A disposition can be made in youth.

Not every mother is adapted to educate her own children, but all who can should do it.

All mothers should believe in the fairies and should make their babies believe in them. As long as they are your friend you will be happy.

Give Children Plenty of Sleep.

Modern education imposes upon children who are industrious, but slow, an increasing mental strain, and such children require much time for sleep. But the matter of sleep can be overdone as well as underdone. "Early to bed" is always a good principle and applies to all children. "Early to rise" is also a good principle for most children, but not for all. The child who is drowsy and languid in the morning, who begins his day lacking freshness and spirit, should be allowed to sleep longer in the morning until it has been determined what the definite cause may be, and irrespective of the baneful effect of loss of sleep upon the health of the child a pupil suffering from such loss cannot be sent to its instructor except with the assurance that its best mental work cannot be accomplished.

MINISTER IS CHARGED WITH "ASSOCIATING"

Indiana Citizens Hit at Rev. J. R. Ellis, Exonerated.

Bloomington, Ind., June 7.—An indictment, charging "association," was returned by the Monroe County Grand Jury against the Rev. John R. Ellis of Geneva, N. Y., who was pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city until a year and a half ago, when he resigned, following rumors concerning his moral conduct. The grand jury was convened in special session on the last day of the present term of court.

Several women of Bloomington were among the number who passed in and out of the grand jury room.

The reason for calling the grand jury in special session was that the charges would have been barred by the two-year statute of limitations if the investigation had been postponed until the September term. As the grand jury had no further business, the court dismissed the members after the Ellis bill was returned.

The investigation occupied just four hours. In impaneling the jury Judge Miers said that he had received a petition, signed by many prominent citizens, asking that he call the grand jury.

It was said by members of the First Presbyterian church that the indictment would act as a barrier to the Indianapolis Presbytery next week in granting a letter to Mr. Ellis, who is now pastor of a Congregationalist church in New York.

A Municipal Pier and Railway.

The municipal pier recently dedicated in Santa Cruz is the result of the work of a committee of private citizens who realized the need for water transportation facilities in addition to rail facilities at Santa Cruz in order to forward the city's industrial interests. Santa Cruz in former years depended entirely upon the Southern Pacific railroad. The fine harbor which Monterey bay provides made shipping by water easily possible, however. The citizens therefore voted almost unanimously in favor of issuing bonds in the sum of $165,000 for the building of a municipal pier. The pier was completed in December. It is a little over half a mile long and eighty feet wide at its outer end. A railway, also municipally owned and operated, runs its entire length, and this connects with the Southern Pacific railroad at its shore terminus, also with the Ocean Shore railroad. Two lines of steamers now touch at the port of Santa Cruz. It is said that a decided improvement has already been observed in the city as a result of the construction of the municipal pier.

Diamond Cut Diamond

A Story of the Police Versus Crime.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

I was traveling on a train between New York and Albany when, at Poughkeepsie, a man carrying a satchel entered the car in which I was and took the vacant seat beside me. He soon opened conversation with me, and I found him quite agreeable, though afterward I remembered that the way he obtained my admiration was by drawing out my conversational powers.

During the ride to Albany my traveling companion handed me his card, saying that he resided in that city and would be happy to have me drop in at his office during my stay there, for I had told him that I would be there several days. Naturally I gave him one of my own cards, on which I wrote my office address in New York in pencil.

Shortly before reaching Albany the man said he would go to the smoking car to enjoy a cigar and, leaving his satchel beside me, asked me if I would oblige him by keeping an eye on it for him during his absence. I assented, and he left the car. On crossing the bridge at Albany I began to fear we might reach the station before his return. When the train stopped in Albany he had not appeared. I waited till every one except myself had left the car, expecting each moment to see him hurrying toward me. Finally when the train began to fill up with a new load I left it myself, carrying the stranger's bag with me.

Stepping out on to the platform, I looked about for my traveling companion. A man stepped up to me and asked if I were looking for any one. I told him my story as I have told it here, and, snatching the satchel from me, he opened it and, thrusting in his hand, drew from among its contents a pearl necklace which, it struck me immediately, must be worth a fortune.

"I've got 'em," he remarked, "but I haven't got him!"

I pulled out the stranger's card and was looking at it when he took it from me and, after a hasty glance, put it in his pocket, remarking that there was no such street and number in Albany. He then told me that a wealthy lady of New York had lost the necklace and a detective agency with which he was connected had been employed to run down the thief and recapture the goods. The agency had obtained a clew and learned that the man proposed to take the train by which I had come from New York. My informant had been deputed to follow him, but had been misled, doubtless by a confederate of the thief who carried the property. The confederate had acted suspiciously, carrying a satchel that he kept under his own eye constantly, every now and again glancing uneasily at the detective. On reaching Albany the detective had arrested the decoy and turned him over to an associate, but a hasty examination of his satchel had revealed no booty. It was evident that the man carrying the necklace knew he was in danger and, after taking my address, had left his satchel in my hands that he might not be caught with the stolen property in his possession.

I accompanied the detective to a police station, where I turned over the satchel with its contents to the department.

Having transacted in Albany the business for which I had come, I returned to New York in company with the detective, and after a conference among the parties concerned it was agreed that I should wait a reasonable length of time for some communication from the man who had left the satchel in my keeping, and if I did not hear from him I would put an advertisement in the newspapers.

I had no confidence in the plan, and to tell the truth, I considered that the detective had bungled the case in being called off on a false scent and that my advertisement would not help matters. They argued that I had doubtless impressed the thief as being a gentleman, and no refined person would be likely to examine the contents of a bag left in his keeping by a stranger. They also suggested that many different explanations might be made for the man's failure to return for his property. I considered these arguments very thin and did not believe any thief fool enough to walk into such a trap as they were laying for him. The man had my name and address and would choose his own way of recovering the necklace, if, indeed, he intended to try to recover it, which I very much doubted, for I saw no way by which he could do so.

However, the detectives had a faint hope that their theory was correct, and I was quite willing to do anything they asked me to do. They waited a week for some communication from the thief. Then, since none had come, they inserted an advertisement. Some time was spent on its wording, and after many writings it read as follows:

> The gentleman who recently left in the keeping of another on a train from New York to Albany a satchel containing valuable property will receive a reward for the name and address of the owner of said property and no questions asked.

The detectives supposed that the thief might bite at this bait, but I did not. It seemed to me that had I been the thief I would prefer to steal some other property than to attempt to make money by owning myself the thief of property stolen and recovered. But, as I have said, the professionals were working the case, and I was simply acting for them. When, however, one morning I received the following note by mail I confess I was surprised:

> Dear Sir—I have seen your advertisement. I am not fool enough to walk into a trap. If $10,000 will tempt you to return me the necklace the money will be yours. It is worth $20,000. In other words, I'll go halves with you. If you agree to these terms put an ad. in next Sunday's personal column of any first class New York newspaper and I will write you when, how and where to deliver the goods and receive the funds.

The detectives were very hopeful on receipt of this letter. As for me, I could not believe that the man who had seen me and talked with me would consider me a person to divide the price of stolen goods even in the expectation of pocketing $10,000. The detectives said that I was probably right in my inference, but no one could tell exactly what was the man's game. It was doubtless something different from what appeared on the surface. They insisted on my inserting the ad., which I did, and in reply I received a note instructing me to take the necklace on a certain night at 11 o'clock to a house which the writer described so minutely that I could not miss it. I was warned that any attempt to put the police on the writer's track would fail, for the man from whom I had received the satchel would not act, but leave his interests in the hands of innocent persons who did not know that the transaction was illegitimate.

I had not objected to carrying the suggestions of the detectives thus far, but I did not like the idea of going any further and asked the police to put a substitute in my place. They told me that the moment the rascals saw that another than the man with whom the property had been left was not acting the whole affair would fall to the ground. I have never been a shirker of any duty, and since I considered it my duty to do all in my power to help the police catch the thief I yielded and agreed to carry out their plans.

The first thing they did was to have a spurious necklace made up to represent the real one. They had barely time for this when the evening for [illegible] the thief came round, and I repaired to the place of rendezvous. I was armed, and I knew that I was every moment under the eye of the police until I entered the house where the transfer was to take place, and after that it was surrounded by them, though they were in plain clothes and [illegible] in shadow. The house was a dilapidated dwelling. There was a light in one room, the window being covered by a shade. I went to the door and rapped. A man came to the door, and I asked him if a man was there who wished to buy some jewelry. He led me into the room lighted by a candle, which stood on a table. He pointed to a seat on one side of the table and sat down himself on the other side.

"Show up," he said, taking a roll of bank bills from his pocket and, after showing me that they were of a hundred dollar denomination, waited for me to produce the necklace.

The police had found it impossible to suggest any secret signal by which I was to notify them that it was time to close in on us, so we had agreed that they were to do so ten minutes after my entrance to the house. If I were in danger I was to cry out or fire my pistol. To delay the matter a few moments I asked the man some questions.

"Do you represent the party who turned over this satchel to me?"

"Yes."

"Does he know you are dealing with that person?"

"He does."

"How?"

"He has seen you through a hole in the partition."

I opened the bag and took out the spurious necklace. The man extended his left hand with the bills in it, while with the other he clutched the necklace, at the same time blowing out the candle, leaving the room in total darkness. I gave a yell as a signal for the men outside to come in, which they did not need, for they saw that the light was extinguished. They strove to open the front door, but it had been locked from the inside. A few minutes were spent in breaking it down, during which time I sat in darkness. They made so much noise at the door that I could hear little or nothing that was going on in the room. One thing I did hear. It sounded like the closing of a door.

When the men came in they flashed their lanterns and relit the candle. They found no one in the room but myself. There was no door in it except the one leading into the hall by which they had entered. This puzzled them for a time; but, flashing their lanterns everywhere, they at last noticed a trapdoor in the floor. Pulling it up, they descended into a cellar. There they found an iron door, which they could not pass till they had spent some time in prying it open. When this was accomplished they entered a tunnel that led them over 200 feet to a deserted house.

Thus ended a case of diamond cut diamond. The villains were too smart for the police, but the police had given them only a false necklace. We never received any explanation of the affair. Whether they were in league with the man from whom I had received the satchel or whether they were an entirely different party we never learned. Quite likely they were criminals who had seen my ad. and, taking the advertiser for a flat, had put up a job to get possession of valuable property.

HUDSON Six-40 for 1915

New Price $1,550 F. O. B. Detroit

THE 1915 GEM

The HUDSON Six-40 for 1915 offers 32 surprises.

Last year it seemed that no car could be better. And it seemed that quality cars could never sell lower.

But the HUDSON engineers—headed by Howard E. Coffin—have brought out 31 new features. And a trebled output—due to overwhelming demand—will reduce the price $200.

This light Six is lighter than ever.

It is handsomer—better-equipped. Just think—48 engineers for one whole haveworked exclusively on refinements Yet the price—which was never approached in a quality car—has been lowered by $200.

You will find in this new model the jewel car of the year—the final ideal in a Six. You will find many attractions shown in no other car. And a price which no one considered possible until Hudson made it possible.

Sample car can be seen at the Co-Operative Co's show room. Phone 256 for demonstration.

KAISER TO OFFER PEACE TERMS?

Will Not Demand Lands of Others for Ending War.

AID IS IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

One Report Says Germanic Allies Are Not Engaged in a War of Conquest, But Seek Only to Keep Own Lines Intact—Berlin Paper Raps Separate Peace Talk.

ROME — The vatican intends to propose a peace congress in the near future to end the war, Pope Benedict presiding, according to Giornale d'Italia.

AMSTERDAM — The Cologne correspondent of the Tyd says a report is current that Austria and Germany soon will announce their conditions of peace, in which emphasis will be given to the declaration that the Germanic allies are not engaged in a war of conquest, but seek only to insure the security of their territories.

LONDON — A Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says:

"The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger in an article, evidently inspired, protests against assertions made by Sergius Sazonoff, the Russian foreign minister, that Germany is trying secretly to make a separate peace with Russia. The newspaper asserts there is no reason why Germany should seek peace."

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Van Gheel Geldemeester, son of the religious adviser to Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, has by a brief visit to Washington, after conferences in Berlin with high German officials, set in motion much speculation in official and diplomatic quarters here about the possibility of peace in Europe.

Mr. Geldemeester, it became known today, saw Dr. von Jagow, the German foreign secretary, and other members of the imperial ministry shortly after the Lusitania was sunk, and received certain impressions concerning the German attitude toward the war and the ultimate making of peace.

Berlin Knew of Mission.

With the knowledge, though not with the authority of the German officials, he started for Washington in the hope that informally he could portray German feeling in official quarters.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, asked that emphasis be laid on the fact that Mr. Geldemeester carried no credentials from Germany and had absolutely no official connectio nwith his government.

Mr. Geldemeester left Washington Saturday without seeing any prominent officials of the American government.

While in Washington the visitor from the Netherlands gave the impression to those with whom he talked that there was a peace party of some importance in Great Britain as well as in Germany.

ROUMANIA READY TO ENTER

Mobilization Decree Is Signed and Hostilities May Begin at Once.

BUCHAREST — The king signed a decree ordering general mobilization. It is believed that this move signifies that the date of the entry of Roumania on the side of the allies has been decided on and that hostilities will be begun without delay.

PARIS — According to the Geneva Tribune, Roumania remitted a note to Austria on May 23 demanding territorial concessions and fixing June 6 as the time limit for a reply. Bulgaria is giving its support to the note. Austria is ready to concede one-eighth of the Roumania demands.

Submarines Go 3,400 Miles.

LONDON, ENG. — The Morning Post's naval correspondent says he has obtained authoritative confirmation that Germany is completing a new submarine every week. "A considerable proportions of these," he says, "comes from the Antwerp yards. The submarines which recently appeared in the Dardanelles journeyed to the Mediterranan by way of the Atlantic, a distance of 3,400 miles, equal to a trip across the Atlantic, and an unprecedented feat for submarines."

WIFE SAYS HUSBAND GAVE POISON TO HER

Doctor's Prescription Switched Is Accusation.

OWOSSO, MICH. — Charles H. Miller, forty-three, real estate and insurance man, who came here four years ago from St. Johns, is in the county jail on a charge of attempted poisoning preferred by his wife.

Mrs. Miller, while not confined to her bed, is in a precarious condition, physicians say, as the result of having taken unwittingly bichloride of mercury tablets.

Mrs. Miller says that while ill, she telephoned a physician who put up some medicine which her husband delivered. One envelope contained tablets, three of which, taken at intervals, made her violently ill. Miller took the envelopes, ostensibly to return them and change the medicine, and delivered to his wife, this time, three envelopes, bearing the doctor's label, one of which contained more of the same tablets, say the police. Mrs. Miller says she later found in the pocket of her husband's coat an ordinary envelope containing a quantity of the tablets which made her ill. She visited the doctor, who told her the tablets were bichloride of mercury and that he never had kept nor prescribed them.

Miller admitted after his arrest, say the police, that the envelope found in his pocket came from his office, but said he could not account for its having contained bichloride of mercury. He insisted he delivered what the physician gave him.

Mrs. Miller's two daughters corroborated the story of the mother.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powerc that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SAN-JAK

is the greatest rectifier for the blood and skin yet known. Greasy skin with pimples, blotches, eruptions or scrofula easily cleared away. Its use leaves the blood and skin as pure as the lillies. SAN-JAK for the stomach, nerves and blood is the best the world ever saw. SAN-JAK prevents the excessive flow of poison of fluid into the blood from the super renal glands near the kidneys, causing the arteries to harden in the years past 50. This preventative keeps the arteries soft and flexible, giving flexibility to the muscles as in youth.

You can feel well and active at any age from 60 to 90 years. Man should die from old age, not from diseased tissue. Mothers and daughters can avoid many dangerous operations by the use of this wonderful medicine. The use of SAN-JAK for pain in the back and abdomen greatly lessens the danger of appendicitis. $1.00 per bottle. Get SAN-JAK at

M. Inez Tenny Arner, daughter of Mahlon C. and Marion Tenney, was born at Butler, Branch county, Mich., Aug. 20 1863, and died at Plymouth, Mich., May, 31 1915 aged 31 years 9 months and 11 days. She was converted at 12 years of age while living at Hanover, Mich. She joined the Methodist church at this time and lived a consistent Christian life and was a valued and useful member of the church militant until translated to the church triumphant.

The card party and the dance had no attraction for her, but her delight was in the service of her Saviour whom she dearly loved.

She was married June 22nd 1904 to Ambrose C. Arner devoted to each other in the bonds of Christian wedlock, they maintained a home where Christ was honored and where the manifest blessing of the dispenser of all grace was apparent to those who came under their influence.

Quiet and unasuming in her life, her Christian work was largely private and personal, among her relatives and friends. many of whom have cause to be very thankful for her faithful words of counsel and testimony.

Her last sickness was prolonged and accompanied with intense suffering, yet in her patient endurance she was ever thoughtful of the welfare and comfort of others, and was especially solicitous for the spiritual welfare of her near relatives and friends: frequently asking them to be watchful, and true to their Lord and to meet her in that happy home above.

Besides her husband and parents she leaves a sister Mrs. Ethel Cummins of Hanover, Mich. and a brother, Marcus Tenney of Tecumseh. The funeral being held Friday June 4 at her parents home in Tecumseh and laid at rest at Brookside, Tecumseh.

Those out of Tecumseh who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cummins and family, Mr. and Mrs. Russel Tenney, Irying and Roy Teney Mrs. Elvin Tuttle, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Ryon of Hanover. Mr. and Mrs. Fremont Tenney of Moscow, Mrs. George Miller, Mr. Otto and Miss Rosa Miller of Jerome, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wetherwax and Mrs Ralph Woodcliff of Jackson; Mrs. Josie Moore of Benton Harbor, Mrs. Bessie Smith of Plymouth, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Farwell of Jonesville, and Mrs. H. J. Farwell and daughter Roena of Detroit.

Mrs. A. C. Arner, who had been seriously ill at her home on Penniman avenue for the past two months, passed away last Monday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Arner have recided in Plymouth only a few years, having moved here from Tecumseh, but during their residence here they have made many friends. The deceased was of a lovable disposition and a woman of refinement. She possessed qualities that endeared her to all with whom she came in contact. A short service was held from her late home Tuesday morning by Rev. B. F. Farber, after which the remains were taken to Tecumseh, where the funeral will be held this (Friday) afternoon. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, parents, one sister and one brother, besides many friends.

VALEDICTORY

"What a High School Education Should Give"

Classmates and Friends:

There may have been a time in human history when education was a matter of compulsion, accident or pleasure. If so, we have, indeed passed that stage. Today there is nothing that bears on human conditions as important as obtaining the very best training possible. "Life is real, life is earnest," and in the business of life, no one can or will dispute the absolute necessity of school preparation. The professions demand men equipped with high school and university training, the manufacturer, the business man, and even the trades insist upon more than a speaking acquaintance with the three R's.

Since education has come to be perhaps the most important matter of our lives; it is altogether fitting and proper to ask ourselves on this occasion, "What has our high school training given us?" We have studied mathematics, the sciences, history, the languages and literature almost continuously the last four years. Let us to-night take an inventory of our investments in this time.

First, we will take up Algebra, the bane of the freshman's existence. Now there are very few who will disagree with me when I say that algebra is a difficult subject, but its very hardness offers great opportunities. For most of us would let our minds rest if it were not for the hard subjects which train us to think. So algebra makes us work. Geometery, as a step into higher mathematics, continues the good work which algebra has begun. Here we are confronted with the necessity of proof, that every statement must be backed by logic or another proven statement. This should be an aid to our reasoning powers, at the same time exercising our gray matter so that we are able to think quickly and logically.

Students of botany and physical geography are getting rather close to Mother Earth. They must surely feel the mystery of the life germ in the common seed, and the power of the All-Father, whose constant care being the rain and sunshine to nourish the growing plant. "Higher still, and higher," come Physics and chemistry with more revelations. We learn laws of Nature, and how they are worked out in the natural world. We are able to explain the nature of light, heat, sound and electricity, and to make practical applications of our knowledge. Since chemistry is the science which underlies all cookery, medicine, as well as many manujactures our high school study should give us a practical working basis for daily use or further researsh.

In the history course we study of ancient and modern times as well as our own United States, together with a half-year study of Civics. From the wide range of countries studied, we should be able to remember a few important events, such as, the conquests of Alexander the Great, the Fall of Rome or the discovery of America, but after all, the greatest benefit of a history course is not this. To see the steady progress of civilization, how one age is an improvement over the preceding one, how man has advanced from the barbarion to the educated and cultured being he now is—these are more important than mere facts. Teachers of history now point out the devastating effects of war, needless waste of men money and energy to the countries involved, and above all, the after-effects on trade and commerce. In the study of current events we are able to see what the world is doing, while the class discussions give all different points of view on the important subjects and tend to make us broader-minded.

Thomas Aldrich has said, "Who lacks the art to shape his thoughts, I hold were little poorer if he lacked the thought. Our English course teaches us to shape our thoughts of greater men. We come to know what good books are and to form an appreciation of artistic features, forms, and beauty of phraze. We can trace the various epochs and the progress of our literature from the simple songs of the scops, to its present complexity. But our study has not all been passive, for we, too, have created, not classics perhaps, nor will you find our compositions on the shelves in the library. Touchstone, the fool in "As You Like It," said of his wife Andrey, "An ill-favored thing sir, but mine own." What Touchstone's Andrey was to him our compositions were to us,—they were all our own. Though they lacked grace, they made us appreciate the grace of Tennyson and Keats, the sincerity of Burns and the wonder of Shakespeare. Yes, our compositions were literature of no small worth—to us.

But in speaking of Education we must not leave Athletics entirely out of consideration. One of the things we learn from the study of the lives of great men in history and literature is, that to live well, to have a well-rounded life, we must develop equally all three fides of our nature,—the mental, moral, physical. More and more, high schools are beginning to learn the truth of the old Latin proverb, "A sound mind only in a sound body."

So, from the training received in our high school course, we should come out with a well-rounded personality, knowing approximately where we stand and able and willing to do our small part in making the world go 'round.

SALUTATORY

"Shadows of Fame"

Classmates and friends: Your presence here assures us that you are interested in our class of 1915. It also assures us that our happiness is your happiness, and that you are silently congratulating us upon reaching the goal, toward which the work of our last 4 years has been directed.

What does graduation mean? Pretty effects, music, flowers, congratulations? Yes, all these but more: Underneath is the suggestion that days of preparation are at an end. New opportunities open up before us, whether college, or teaching, our work must be on a bigger and broader scale than it has been. And in choosing our work in deciding what niche we will try to fill in the world, we must first decide the question, what is worth while work?

Our histories, our literatures are silent, but powerful witnesses of the scores of men who have had a decision like ours to make. If they chose a work worthy of human effort, impartial history has applauded them. If they devoted their lives to purely personal ambitions and selfish aims they were failures, whom from the long list of famous men, past and present, shall we follow as our models? We have gleamed the deeds and works of the Caesars, Hannibals, Alexanders, Napoleons and Lincolns of history, the Shakespeares, Miltons, Burns, Tennysons, and Longfellows of literature, the Newtons, Spencers, and Edisons of science. Whom of all these is most worthy of our admiration?

Churches and schools are teaching that the keynote of the 20th Century is service. Today, we are measuring a man's greatness, not by the might of his ruling power, not by the magnitude of wealth he has piled up, not by his selfish ambitions, however high, but by the service each does for humanity

Carlyle said: "Conquerors are a race with whom the world could well dispense." The truth of this is brought home to us today, more than ever before in the history of the world. Were the Caesars and the Napoleons actuated by unselfish, and great motives? What did they do to uplift their people and their country. In comparison to the real things of the world, Augustus Caesar, and Alfred the Great, these men seem monsters of selfishness and unbalanced ambition. Beside Washington and Lincoln, who fought for a real cause, they excite in us amazement, but no effection or admiration. Judges by modern standards, their choice of an object, to which they devoted their entire lives, was unworthy. Their fame can never be a true one.

Turning to another class of famous men—Shakespeare, Milton, Burns, Tennyson, Longfellow, and Dicken's, the true poets, who left the world better than they found it: who enriched it with the eternal melodies of their verse. Carlyle and Milton, men of wisdom, taught us the dignity of common things and to discern in the bleakest spots, a beauty and a meaning, and a revelation of God's care for all, Tennyson and Longfellow shed the glory of their own souls over every-day life, and like magicians, romance springs up where all before was prosaic. The kind and warm soul of Dickens arouse the world to sympathy with those it heeded not. Surely their lives were worth while who left the world better and richer than they found it.

Then, finally consider one other class of famous men, the men of science, whose arts are the arts of peace. Beside the revelation of truth taught us by Spencer, Huxley and Darwin, beside the practical work of the Edisons and Burbanks, how small and unworthy seems the man whose chief claim to fame was that he conquered the world, sighed for more worlds to conquor and boasted that he alone changed the map of Europe.

But classmates, though we cannot each be a shadow of fame, let us strive to grasp the best opportunities of life. First choose an ideal, remain steadfast to uphold it, and as our share not to gain glory for ourselves alone but to uplift humanity. They in conclusion we may say with the poet,

> "Lives of great men all remind us,
> We can make our lives sublime
> And departing, leave behind us
> Footprints on the sands of time."

A SAFE WAY TO STOP INDIGESTION

Your stomach must itself be strong enough to expand and contract with a sort of churning movement so as to mix its digestive juices with your food. If your stomach isn't strong enough to do this you will keep right on having indigestion and and every artificial digester you use will make your stomach weaker.

There is one Stomach remedy that every dyspeptic can depend on and that is the famous old MI-O-NA Stomach Tablets. Most stomach remedies let the stomach rest and digest the food themselves. Mi-o-na succeeds by strengthening and stimulating the stomach and making it do its own digesting. It stops stomach pains, gas, bloating, burning, belching, etc., in ten minutes and does still better by making the flabby, inflamed and inactive stomach walls grow strong and elastic and able to do their own churning. Mi-o-na Tablets never lose their effect and unlike mere artificial digesters need not be used forever. A few weeks use is generally sufficient to put any stomach in fine shape and C. A. Wright & Son and many other leading druggists hereabouts sell it with that understanding, agreeing to refund money to anyone who does not get complete relief. adv

"The Standard of Value and Quality"

Paige Means Value

Why, do you suppose, has the Paige "Six-46" proven the most popular "Six", the most-talked-of "Six" and the best-selling "Six" on the market this year? The shortest answer is—"Paige Value." Many things enter into Paige Value. There is the Paige Quality—the highest purchasable within $300 of the Paige Price. There is Paige Character. That means the financial stability of the Paige Company. That means the Real Economy in Paige Cars. The Paige "Six" is "the year-ahead" car. It is NEW in design, lines, equipment and price. It guarantees you, not only low repair bills and maintenance cost—but low DEPRECIATION. It isn't a "dolled up" car with a fictitious 1915 label. It is a 1916 CAR—in every sense. That is Paige Value.

Let us take, then, some of the essentials of Paige Value—a combination of high grade features found on no other Six regardless of price. We will merely name them. Check them off with the corresponding features in any other car you know. And select any cars—cars that cost $200, $300 or $500 more than Paige Cars.

Beauty in Paige Cars: Have you seen the new Paige "Six"? If you have, you know that it is the most beautiful and most distinctive-looking car of the year. You recognize Paige Cars anywhere—everywhere.

Comfort in Paige Cars: The Paige "Six" is a big, roomy seven-passenger car not merely with two extra seats—but DESIGNED for seven adult passengers. Its Paige Continental motor ($3\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$) gives that tremendous power and wonderful flexibility that adapt it to all motoring demands and conditions. It has a wheelbase of 124 inches.

It is equipped with the Bosch magneto and the multiple disc cork-insert clutch. These highest grade features mean reliability, unfailing service—or motoring comfort. Another over-value feature is the unsurpassed Gray & Davis electric starting and lighting systems. That means the acme of motoring luxury.

Add to Beauty and Comfort the Prestige of the Paige Name, the supreme excellence of Paige Design and Construction, and you yourself will recognize in the Paige Six a combination of high grade features found on no other Six—regardless of price.

See this epoch-making car, ride in it, drive it, compare it with any other motor cars in the world and—then remember that Paige Value is unique at the Paige Price—Fairfield Model "Six-46"—$1395.

PROGRESSIVE PARTY

The last meeting for the year of the Florence Weld Chapter, Westminster Guild was held Tuesday evening in the form of a Progressive Party. The members of the Guild accompanied by one guest each, met at the Presbyterian church, and at 7:15 the procession started. There were fifty-five in line, after being led through many highways and byways they were taken to the manse where Rev. and Mrs. Rex entertained them in true Indian style. The house was tastefully decorated in Indian fashion, A wigwam, with camp-fire light upon it, and Indians seated, in front, made a pretty picture. The guests were served to popcorn and an Indian program given, after which the procession again formed and was led to the home of Mrs. John Orr. Here they were greeted by "Japanese women". the house was beautifully decorated in Japanese style, the guests were seated upon pillows on the floor and served to tea and wafers, very becomingly by four beautiful Japanese girls. A Japanese program was given and the company were then taken to the home of Miss Gladys Thielan, where a real American supper was served to them and a jolly American time had. Everybody had a fine time and voted thanks to committee. The out of town guests were Rev. and Mrs. Hawkins of Holloway, Mrs W. E. Slayton and Mrs. Geo. Kidman of Adrian.

CLASS DAY

CLASS OF 1915 T. H. S. HAVE UNIQUE CLASS DAY EXERCISES

Tuesday June 8, 1915.

Class Day exercises were planned for Monday afternoon, but owing to the storm that prevailed were postponed until Tuesday or the first pleasant day.

As seen by the program in our last issue the first of the afternoon was given to a history of Tecumseh in Pageant, arranged by Miss Jennie Harris. This proved quite an unique affair and Miss Harris is to be be commended for her very interesting story as told in pantomime. She was ably assisted by the Misses Halladay and Caldwell,

Special praise is also due to Miss Lenore Nixon for the planning of the costumes and to Bernard Goodrich, Principal of the High School for the decorations. We would also make special mention of the untiring work of the juniors both for Class day and Wednesday night in their beautiful decorations.

First the wigwam and blankets that indicate the camping grounds of an indian band who with Tecumseh the Great Chief appear and indulge in a pow-wow and circle dance by the braves when the chief warns them of the coming of the white man to invade the land,

Two quaint indian songs were also rendered in a very pleasing manner by the Indian maidens.

The prospectors, Misgrove Evans and Austin E. Wing now appear and soon find a suitable location to which they bring the first settlers men woman and children to whom we owe our beautiful town.

The village of yesterday with its market, the citizens at their various occupation was finely portrayed and just here the school master comes in with the great news that Michigan has been admitted into the Union,

Every character of this most interesting history was taken in a very fine manner, each one entering into the spirit of the theme.

The village of today was charmingly represented by the members of the class of 1915 who gave their class exercises

The music by the orchestra under the leadership of Leonard Greenwald deserves special attention.

The games by the grade children and the childrens May pole dance were especially good being given with the good will, that children best know how to give. The Juniors closed the afternoons entertainment by serving punch and wafers to the company.

FINAL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT THE OPERA HOUSE WEDNESDAY EVENING

Prof. Davis Gave Address

The Opera House was very beautifully decorated by the Juniors for the closing event of commencement week which was held Wednesday evening. There was a full attendance,

Rev. W. A. Rex gave the invocation followed by a piano duet by Mrs, F. B. Wood and Mrs. Ella Hodges which was most heartily encored to which they responded.

The salutatory by Miss Elsie Harrington was given in a very pleasing manner, and was full of many good ideas.

The Girls Glee Club with Miss Halladay accompanist then gave a fine selection and responded to an encore.

Miss Agnes McIntyre followed with the valedictory which she gave in a very forcefull manner, her paper showed deep thought in its preparation.

A piano solo by Miss Margaret McWilliams was given in a very charming manner,

Prof. C. O. Davis of the U. of M. was introduced by Supt, Reed and gave an address on Secondary Education. His theme was a broad one and he advanced many good ideas regarding the studies taken up by the average student and their capacity for assimulating and profiting by them.

He spoke at length on the needly facilities in high school equipments, and hoped that Tecumseh might have a new school house before many years. In closing the paid tribute to the class of 1915 and wished them God speed in their lifes journey.

Messrs W. S. and Fred Dickison Leon McLaughlin and Floyd Juckett sung "In Libertys Name" in their own delightful manner and in responce to an eacore made musical inquiry rs to the where-abouts of the freshmens ,sophomores, juniors and Seniors.

Supt W. L, Reed in a few earnest parting words spoke to the class of' 15 as he presented them their diplomas.

Rev. W. A. Rex gave the benediction and commencement week became a thing of the past,

BARGAIN DAY FOR TECUMSEH

Wednesday, June 23 Will be the First Big Day,

An enthusiastic meeting of the Tecumseh business men, was held Wednesday evening at the Tecumseh Club rooms. The meeting was largely attended. Final plans were gone over for a series of bargain days to be held in Tecumseh each Wednesday during the summer months. A co-operative plan of advertising will be used. Each merchant advertising some special for the day. These ads will be arranged in an attractive manner and will run in each Tuesdays issue of the Herald and will be sent out broadcast through this section of the country. Each farmer living in the country tributary to Tecumseh will receive this issue. On this page will also appear the amusement arranged for the day.

There will be planned for each Wednesday some kind of sport, motorcycle race, matinee or ball games. In the evening a band concert will be given on the four corners down town, from 7 o'clock to 9, and a dance for those who choose to dance. Every store will be open for the evening giving our friends an opportunity to do their trading.

Tecumseh has long been famed as being one of the best trade centers in Southern Michigan and our stores are second to none, Tecumseh never does anything by halves and these special Wednesdays are bound to be a big success. Remember that Wednesday June 23d is bargain day in Tecumseh, and you will want to be on hand to take advantage of these special bargains offered by the merchants, to see the fun, and hear the band concert.

Tecumseh sure will be the biggest little town on earth. Watch the Herald for Special Ads appearing June 22.

Battle Creek Manufacturers Say Freight Charges Kill Business.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — That Battle Creek factories alone are losing $100,000 a year by exorbitant freight rates on commodities, was the claim made here by E. C. Nettels, representing the Postum Cereal company, at a session before Examiner Marshall of the interstate commerce commission. Another manufacturer, John L. Kellogg of the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flakes company attributed the failure of ten or more food concerns that started here during the boom of a few years ago was due to the high freight rates, while Chas W. Ward, secretary of the chamber of commerce, testified that since 1910 Battle Creek has lost several pros-

GETS FIRST KISS AT FORTY.

Californian Assemblyman Is Forced by Colleagues to Return It.

Assemblyman Maurice B. Browne of Sacramento, Cal., author of a constitutional amendment to impose a $10 tax on bachelors, boasted to a fair lobbyist that he had never been kissed except by his mother. Without hesitation the lobbyist threw her arms around his neck and kissed him.

In an instant Browne was surrounded by a cheering crowd of colleagues, and, under urging, he returned the kiss.

Declaring they are "watchfully waiting" for the right girl, 22 per cent of Princeton university's seniors have declared that they had never been kissed. A few "never wanted to;" others said they objected for "hygienic reasons."

SENTRY DOG BIG AID IN WAR.

British Officer Tells How Much Keener They Are Than Men.

An English officer recently home from France on a few hours' leave gives the following account of the work done by one of the sentry dogs:

"One dark night I took out the dog on patrol duty in front of our trenches near the German barbed wire. Their trenches were 400 to 500 yards from ours. We moved along for some time and saw nothing.

"Suddenly the dog, who was working a little to the left front, stopped dead, pointed and gave a low growl. We immediately lay motionless on the ground.

"The dog had discovered two German sentries in a new sap of which we knew nothing. Except for the dog we would never have known the Germans were there."

OFFER REWARD FOR SLAYER

Authorities Doubt Whether Criminal Proceeding Will Stand.

JACKSON, MICH. — Despite the fact that sheriff, police and Michigan Central detectives have sought unceasingly for the three boys who are believed to have fired the bullet which killed Mott A. Sherwood while he was driving his auto, the officers have thus far been unable to find a clue.

A reward of $50 has been offered for information which will lead to the identity of the boys who comprised the party. The officers are interested only in learning the identity of the boys, as it is believed they cannot be prosecuted.

POOR AIM SAVES TWO LIVES

Jackson Man Shoots at Wife and Himself; Misses; Arrested.

JACKSON, MICH. — Enraged at his wife when he returned home early in the morning Eric Bostrom seized a revolver and fired four shots at her and then attempted to blow out his own brains, according to the police. None of the shots struck Mrs. Bostrom and the bullet, with which Bostrom tried to end his own life, clipped his ear.

Mrs. Bostrom's cries for help attracted neighbors. Bostrom told the police that his wife hurled him through a window.

IS HELD FOR PEDDLING BEER

Case in Dry County Will Attract Attention Throughout Michigan.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Michigan wets and drys will watch with interest the trial of N. A. Smith, secretary and treasurer of the Furniture City Brewing company, of Grand Rapids, for alleged violation of the local option law, as the same circumstances prevail elsewhere in dry territory.

Smith's arrest followed that of Saul Rifkin, a Russian, who took orders for Grand Rapids beer and peddled it, with his own wagon, to his customers.

KILLED DRIVING AUTO, NO CLEW TO SLAYER

Mystery Surrounds Death of M. A. Sherwood of Jackson.

JACKSON, MICH. — After a thorough investigation the police have absolutely no clew to the identity of the assailant of Mott A. Sherwood, master mechanic of the Michigan Central railroad, who was murdered as he was driving through Keeley park in an automobile.

The four persons in the machine with Sherwood told detectives that the automobile came to an abrupt stop, and investigation revealed that Sherwood was dead.

For some time it was believed Sherwood was a victim of apoplexy, but later it was discovered that a bullet had entered his left shoulder and penetrated his heart.

Members of the party reported hearing sharp reports, but said they attributed them to tire explosion.

NEWSPAPERS CONSOLIDATED

Moon and Journal of Battle Creek Merge and Are Sold.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — A deal has been consummated whereby the Daily Moon and Daily Journal, the two oldest newspapers in the city, are consolidated, starting today as the Moon-Journal. The deal involves the retirement of Martin E. Brown founder and publisher of the Moon, and William A. Thomson, publisher of the Daily Journal, and until recently of newspapers at Lansing and Kalamazoo, and the sale of both newspapers to a corporation headed by Nelson E. Conine as president and treasurer and George B. Dolliver as vice president and secretary.

These two men, who have been with the Moon twenty years, the latter part of the time as business manager and managing editor, had the backing of five prominent public men, Charles E. Kolb, Frank K. Berry, Merton W. Wentworth, John Heysear and Joseph L. Hooper.

BIG REVENUE FRAUD IS FOUND IN SOUTH

It Embraces Distilleries Accused of Evading Taxes.

WASHINGTON — By admission at the treasury department that search is being made by the secret service for Knox Booth, division revenue agent for Tennessee and Alabama, with headquarters at Nashville, light was let into what is declared to be a $20,000,000 revenue scandal, extending through three administrations.

Booth has been missing two weeks, his disappearance being coincident, it is said, with the arrest of John L. Caspar at Fort Smith, Ark., on a charge of conspiring to defraud the government.

Casper is head of a big distillery that is said to have evaded payment of a large part of its taxes through alleged conspiracy with revenue officers.

PRESIDENT HOLDS UP NOTE

Cabinet May See Reply to Kaiser With Changes Made.

WASHINGTON — The American rejoinder to the recent German reply concerning the sinking of the Lusitania still was in the hands of President Wilson. It had been returned to him with some changes, following a careful examination by the government's legal officers.

When the document will be forwarded was not definitely known. It was expected to be given further consideration at the cabinet meeting. It was said, however, that it would be dispatched when the president is satisfied with its phraseology.

PRUSSIAN LOSSES 1,388,000

AMSTERDAM — The Telegraaf states that, according to German casualty lists, Prussian losses alone have reached a total of 1,388,000.

Recent casualty lists contain the names of fifty-six airmen, of whom eleven were killed and thirty-five wounded, the remaining ten being missing.

Germans Drop Incendiary Bombs.

LONDON — It was announced at the admiralty that a Zeppelin visited the east coast of England Sunday night, dropping incendiary and explosive bombs. Five persons were killed and forty were injured. Two fires were caused by the incendiary bombs.

The admiralty announced also that a Zeppelin had been blown to pieces over Belgium by British airmen.

Japan In New Agreement.

TOKYO, JAPAN—Foreign Minister Kato, interpellated in the house of peers by the budget committee, made the declaration that Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy and Japan had agreed to take no independent action of any kind in connection with the European war.

3,113 More British Fall.

LONDON, ENG. — The official casualty list added 3,113 names to the list of killed, wounded, or missing since the war began. This is the longest single list issued by the government during the war.

French Admiral Displaced.

PARIS — The command of the French fleet at the Dardanelles has been given to Admiral Nicol. He supersedes Admiral Guepratte, who has been made second in command. No official cause is assigned.

Placing the Howl.

"Is there anything about these feathers that might bring me into trouble with the Bird Protection society?"

"Oh, no, madam!" said the milliner.

"But did they not belong to some bird?" persisted the lady.

"Well, madam," returned the milliner pleasantly, "these feathers are the feathers of a howl, and the howl, you know, madam, seein' as 'ow fond 'e is of mice, is more of a cat than a bird."—London Globe.

FIERCE BATTLE ALONG ISONZO

Italian Troops Strike at Railway To Trieste.

AUSTRIAN GUNS OPEN FIRE

Destroy Bridge South of Gradisca in Retreat and Prevent Placing of Pontoons by Effective Fire—Dead Bridge River in Fierce Russ Battle—40,000 Turks in Pitiful Condition.

ROME — The battle of the Isonzo has begun. Italian troops have crossed the river at several points, under protection of hot artillery fire, and are striking at the railway leading south to Trieste.

Austrian guns have opened a bombardment all along the river from Tolmino to the sea.

Two Bersaglieri regiments fought their way across the river at the outskirts of Gradisca in a two days' battle. A hostile force intrenched on the west bank of the river was first shelled out of its position and forced back across the Isonzo.

Pontoons Under Austrian Shells.

The Austrians destroyed the bridge south of Gradisca in their retreat. From a hill on the east bank they sent shells crashing down upon the pontoons the Italians were attempting to throw across the river and for twenty-four hours poured in an effective fire that held the Bergsalieri at bay.

Russ Dead Choke River.

LONDON, ENG—The fiercest fighting of the war, as far as the Baltic provinces of Russia are concerned, occurred a few days ago in a battle for the mastery of the Dubysa river, according to the Post's Petrograd correspondent. The river changed hands five times in one day and at nightfall the stream was completely choked with the bodies of thousands of dead, so that a plank road way for artillery was laid by the victorious Russians across a solid bridge of bodies.

Drowned in Bayonet Charges.

The Dubysa, although wide, is so shallow it can be crossed on foot at some places. The Russians and Germans met at a ford half a mile wide, north of Rossijeny, where they fought all day in the water. There were several bayonet charges in midstream and all who fell, even though they were only slightly wounded, were drowned. Troops on both sides in their attacks and counter attacks late in the day advanced over the bodies of the dead.

40,000 Turks in Pitiful Condition.

ATHENS — Forty thousand Turkish soldiers, wounded in the Dardanelles fighting, and 250 German officers are in pitiful need of medical attention at Constantinople. Dispatches received here said hospital facilities in the Ottoman capital are entirely inadequate, and there is a great shortage of doctors. Hundreds are reported to be dying daily for lack of proper care.

TURK LOSS 100,000, REPORT

Constant Stream of Wounded Being Brought to Capital; Allies Advance.

LONDON — The Daily Chronicle's correspondent says that in recent fighting in the Gallipoli Peninsula the Turks have lost 100,000 men. In Constantinople, he says, there are at least 50,000 wounded soldiers, and adds that a constant stream of injured is being brought from the battlefields into the capital.

LONDON — Two lines of Turkish trenches along a front of three miles have been captured by the allies on the Gallipoli Peninsula after desperate fighting. This is a gain of 500 yards, which is considered highly satisfactory by the British, particularly as it induced the Turks to counter attack, in which they suffered very heavy losses.

Germans Sink 4 Ships; 17 Perish.

LONDON, ENG. — The Belgian steamer Mematier has been sunk by a German torpedo near the north Foreland. Out of twenty-three on board only six were saved. German submarines have sunk three Norwegian ships—the Trudvang, a steamer; the Superb, a bark, and the Glittertind, a steamer.

Ministers Disavow Neutrality.

LONDON, ENG. — The communique issued by the ministerial journal in Sofia declaring that Bulgaria had resolved to adhere to a policy of neutrality is now disavowed, according to a dispatch from the correspondent of the Times at Sofia.

Prince Killed in Battle.

PETROGRAD — Prince Bagration-Mouchransky, son-in-law of the Grand Duke Constantine, was killed in the battle that preceded the fall of Przemysl, according to dispatches received here.

Russ Cruiser Sunk in Baltic.

BERLIN — The following statement was given out here officially: "A German submarine on June 4 sank the Russian cruiser Amur, of the second class, near a Baltic port."

NEWS OF THE STATE

Think Girl Gave Self Away.

FLINT, MICH. — Lezia Foster, a Lansing girl, nineteen years old, telephoned to police headquarters from the Grand Trunk station complaining that she had been ordered out of town as a common thief by a detective accompanying a wild west show.

As a result she was arrested on a charge of stealing a watch from E. F. Moyer of Lansing.

One Game Would Cost Dear.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — When the will of Mrs. Rachel McMullen was made public it was found to contain a provision for a trust fund of $1,500 to be used in the education of a grandson, William H. McMullen.

The will further provided that in case the grandson showed a tendency to play football the fund should revert to the estate.

ALL IS NEW TO WOMAN 105

On Her First Auto Ride She Sees Interurban Car First Time.

Sullivan, Ind., June 14.—"Aunt" Eleanor Combs, perhaps the oldest living white woman in Indiana, as she will be 106 years old in August, took her first ride in an automobile this week with her nephew, F. E. Worthington of Dugger, Ind.

She also saw an interurban car for the first time. She has never ridden on a train. Mrs. Combs makes her home with her son, Wiley Gambill, former Sullivan county commissioner, who lives a mile east of Sullivan.

Father Copus Is Dead.

Milwaukee, June 14.—Father John H. Copus, S. J., formerly Detroit newspaper man, and for several yearss head of the department of journalism of aMrquette university, Milwaukee, is dead. For several years Father Copus had been afflicted with an ailment that was finally diagnosed as cancer of the throat.

ALUMNI IN 100-YARD RACE

U. of M. Grads to Be Handicapped in Ratio of Years.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 14.—Hon. A. C. Kingman, former senator; Burritt Hamilton, vice president of the Michigan bar, and other notables, have agreed to run a 100-yard dash next Saturday, when University of Michigan alumni from this section of Michigan will have a picnic at Gull Lake.

All starters will be handicapped in ratio to the years that have elapsed since they graduated. Thus Kingman of the class of 1869 will have to run but fifty-four yards and Hamilton only seventy-nine. Among those starting at the "scratch" will be Dr. R. H. Earlbeau, the former U. of M. pitcher, who graduated last year.

More Garibaldis to Front.

Rome, June 14.—General Ricciotti Garibaldi, accompanied by Colonel Peppino Garibaldi and two other sons, enrolled themselves for army service. The people greeted them with great enthusiasm.

DIRT FROM THE PANAMA CANAL

This dirt has been placed in a sealed vial which contains 40 distinct colors and kinds. It was collected from the Culebra Cut where so mady slides have occurred, by C. T. Tribolet who is in the government employ on the Canal Zone and took him five years to collect it.

This is a very interesting display and well worth going to see.

84th BIRTHDAY

Edward Russell was 84 years of age Wednesday June 9, 1915 and his friends gave him a very pleasant surprise on the occasion. His son Elsworth Russell and wife of Jackson, and his brother-in-law A. B. Bangs and wife of Adrian were the out-of-town guests.

Each guest brought a booklet or birthday cards with their best wishes for many happy returns of the day. The afternoon was spent in a social way, with music on the Victrola, Elsworth bringing a number of fine records. A pot-luck dinner was served.

SUICIDE VERDICT ON DRESCHER IS UPHELD

Doctor's at Spencer, Ind., Bear Out Coroner's Report.

Spencer, Ind., June 14.—The record of the testimony taken by Acting Corener James McClure, which led to the verdict of death by poison administered by his own hand in the case of Former Coroner F. Edward Drescher, has been filed. This shows that three physicians testified that one of the marked evidences of a death caused by strychnine is the early and excessive rigor mortis and that this was very pronounced in the Drescher case.

Mrs. Drescher testified that an Indianapolis undertaker, who took a midnight freight train to reach here, was called because Mr. Drescher had told her what man to call when he died.

Three persons not before mentioned are now known to have received samples of quinine, but escaped. They are Jacob Gosshorn of near Clay City, George B. Scott and W. M. Speas of near Freedom. Mr. Gosshorn received a sample package of quinine last fall, but never had occasion to use it and still has it in his possession. George B. Scott and W. M. Speas received packages of quinine about six weeks ago.

Deputy Prosecutor J. L. Duncan has asked them to send him the sample packages, including the wrappers which contain the addresses and everything else which could possibly help to identify the sender. These packages will be sent to a chemist to ascertain whether or not they contain strychnine. A total of twenty-ssix persons are now known to have received poison packages.

B. F. MILLS BACK IN CHURCH

Pulpit and Platform Orator Returns to Presbyterian Faith.

Chicago, June 14.—The eloquent Benjamin Fay Mills, whose masterly exhortations from pulpit and platform have swayed 500,000 men and women and led them into the folds of the church, has returned to the faith of his fathers.

For several years the evangelist, lecturer and student was out of harmony with the conservative tenets of the orthodox beliefs. He severed his ties with the Presbyterian church after a career which made his name known throughout the Christian world.

FRANK'S FATE UP TO SLATON

Solicitor Dorsey Opposes Commutation to Life Imprisonment.

Atlanta, Ga., June 14.—Attorneys for Leo M. Frank have made before Governor Slaton their final effort to gain commutation for their client's death sentence to life imprisonment. No new evidence was presented.

Editor JOURNAL:

I would like to say a few words about that grand and good man that was stamped on my mind as a great hero ever since my childhood, when my father tried to make me understand what the war was for and what Abraham Lincoln was doing for humanity and now as we have just commemorated his birthday I thought it fitting to say a word about how much the Scotch think of that grand and noble man.

They have erected a Lincoln monument on Calton Hill, overlooking the city of Edinburg; it is fifeen feet in height; its base is of polished Aberdeen granite, from which a freed slave gratefully looks upwards towards a life-size bronze cast of the great president, the whole being an artistic production worthy of the prominent site granted by the town council. Americans and Scottish-Americans bore the entire cost of memorial. The sculptor, Mr. George E. Bissett, an army veteran and a well-known artist, whose study of Lincoln has been faithful and painstaking. In the presence of a vast assemblage, including a number of the prominent Americans and a guard of honor of the Argyle and Lutherland Highlanders, the memorial was unveiled on the twenty-first of August, 1893. Miss Bruce, who drew aside the British and American flogs with which it was enveloped, was attired in a flowing costume, and had had her hair encircled in a band of gold, representing Columbia.

Another clash of loving hands,
Another link across the sea.

And now as the black cloud of war lies over my native land, may our Heavenly Father send another grand and noble man as His messenger of good and turn men's hearts from war to brotherly love and peace, for we need His help in this terrible time of trouble and sorrow, and don't let us forget to send our prayers to the throne of grace.

DAUGHTER IDENTIFIES DEAD MAN AS FATHER

Victim of Heart Disease Was Daniel Figgins.

Muskegon, Mich., June 14.—The body of the man who died in the lobby of the Marshall house here on Wednesday night, a victim of heart disease, was identified here by his daughter, Mrs. John Strandberg, who did not even know her father, Daniel Figgins, had located in Muskegon.

Immediately after Figgins died his body was removed to the morgue. Efforts of the officers to establish his identity proved unavailing until Mrs. Strandberg's chance reading of the story in a local paper caused her to investigate. Three daughters survive Figgins, Mrs. Otto Butkan of Grand Rapids, Miss Merilla Figgins of Chicago and Mrs. Strandberg.

GERMANY WANTS TO TALK IT OVER

Kaiser Claims Right of Reprisal for Sea War.

JOINT DISCUSSION PROPOSED

Reply to U. S. Note Expected to Seek Delay in Controversy Over the Doctrine of Retaliation — President's Rejoinder to Be Treated as Leaving Such Opening.

Washington, June 14.—Germany, in her forthcoming reply to the second note of the United States concerning submarine warfare, will propose a discussion by this government of the principle and doctrine of reprisal or retaliation as a justification or palliation of her past acts of submarine warfare which have affected the lives of American citizens.

Germany will expect a free, full and clear discussion of this theme in connection with the starvation reprisals of Great Britain.

Germany will maintain it is impossible to discuss the universally admitted doctrine of reprisals without discussing it equally with Germany and Great Britain.

This proposal, it is understood, is the argument which Germany held in reserve when she sent her last note to the United States. In that note she said she had other considerations to present in reference to the Lusitania.

Lusitania Case Embraced.

The information that the other considerations are those given comes from diplomats who are in a position to know with a reasonable degree of certainty the attitude of Germany after the publication of the Lansing note.

These officials say Germany will not go to the extent of asserting that the law of retaliation, even in its widest and most flexible interpretation, could be applied to any tragedies in the future in which there shall be a loss of American life by the illegal use of submarines without visit and search and assurances for the safety of non-combatant Americans.

It is nevertheless asserted that Germany will seek to embrace in her new argument even the case of the Lusitania. It is not, of course, expected by American diplomats that Germany's attitude will affect the determination of the president to insist on reparation for the past, and guarantees for the future. The whole object of the new argument by Germany, these officials say, will be to take proper advantage of the door left open by the president to bring forward its last argument.

THE MERRY DANCE

A scene of beauty met the merry dancing party Friday night as they entered Witherell hall. The reception room was prettily trimmed in green and white and numberless Japanese lanterns served to light the way into the hall, which had been transformed into a garden with several maple trees through the center. A latticed fence surrounded it, twined with green, and the sweet white syringa flowers. The high posts were capped by large white globes, through which a mellow light lent added beauty to the scene.

The ladies in their dainty dancing gowns, the men in their evening dress were not the least of the attractions of the hour. The ladies orchestra from Toledo, assisted by Mr. W. L. Coller, furnished most delightful music. Among the many pretty dances, was a favor dance, in the midst of which baskets laden with fans dropped from the over hanging branches, to the immense surprise of the company.

During an intermission refreshments were served little tables being spread throughout the garden.

Dancing was prolonged until a late hour. As the company desperesd they voted this a charming return to the ladies a few weeks ago.

To Lester Heesen and his committee much praise is due for the beautiful effect of their decorations and their untiring work in their construction. Also to the other committees whose united efforts made this party a society event long to be remembered

TEUTONS CROSS DNIESTER

Advances in Southern District Presage New Lemberg Drive.

London, June 14.—Renewed Austro-German activity in Bukowina, which is believed to indicate an effort to make a long drive upon Lemberg from the south, following the temporary repulse of the Teutonic offensive at Mosciska and at Zurawno on the Dneister, is admitted in the official statement received from Petrograd.

The Russians announce that the Austro-German forces approached the Dneister near Nesvisska and Zalestchiki and forced a crossing of the river at several points. This region lies to the southeast of Stanislau, and such a move opens the way for a drive northward upon Lemberg. Berlin asserts that the Germans have renewed their attacks east of Przemysl and Jaroslav, presumably with Lemberg as their objective.

LINDSEY IS AGAIN IN TOILS

Denver Judge Is Arrested on Charge of Contempt of Court.

Denver, Colo., June 14.—Judge Ben Lindsey of the juvenile court was arrested and immediately released on his own recognizance, charged with contempt of court and conniving in the commission of perjury.

His refusal to tell what a twelve year old boy told him in confidence led to the charges being filed by District Attorney Rush and Judge John Perry.

Old Maroon Captain Weds.

Monticello, Ia., June 14.—Halstead M. Carpenter, a former captain of the University of Chicago football eleven, has taken unto himself a wife. He was married at Edgewood, Ia., to Miss Lou Densmore of that city. Carpenter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Carpenter of Monticello. The groom has accepted a position as assistant cashier in a local bank of which his father is president.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powerc that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THIRTY-ONE PERSONS INJURED

Storm Raging at Ferryville, Wis., Leaves Seven Dead and Eighteen Hurt—Dixon, Ill., Experiences Terrific Rain and Wind—Acres of Crops Are Ruined.

Chicago, June 14.—The following is the toll of Sunday's storm:

Ferryville, Wis., seven dead and eighteen injured; Reedsburg, Wis., one dead and eleven injured; Chicaga, one dead, barn wrecked; Dixon, Ill., two injured. Total nine dead and thirty-one injured.

La Crosse, Wis., June 14.—Seven persons, including one Chicago man, are known to have been killed and eightee injured, some severely, in a cyclone which struck Ferryville, Wis., and vicinity last night and did property damage estimated at $100,000.

The Dead.

The Chicagoan killed is William Sheeley. The other dead are:

Mrs. K. C. Finley.
Leroy Finley.
John Leppert.
Nine year old daughter of Leppert.
Unidentified man.

Seriously Injured.

The most seriously injured are: Mrs. Timothy Finley, Rose Finley, Mrs. J. C. Daly of Atlanta, Ia., Dorothy Finley, Loretta Finlay, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Finley, Mrs. Francis McManus, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Aspenson, seven members of family of Martin Roeburg.

The river steamer Frontenac, which was to have taken an excursion out of La Crosse, was sunk when it hit the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railway bridge at Winona, Minn., thirty miles northth of here early in the morning. A heavy wind blew the craft against the bridge. So far as can be learned no life was lost.

One Killed Eleven Hurt.

John Shoeman had gone upstairs to close windows in his home when the storm struck the house, wrecking it. He was buried in the ruins and killed. The body was recovered by firemen. His wife and two year old baby had gone into the cellar and were only slightly injured.

Illinois Town Hit.

Dixon, Ill., June 14.—Dixon and vicinity suffered from one of the worst storms of the season. Cellars were flooded, hundreds of shade trees were blown down and the city light service was put out of commission for a time.

One man was struck blind; another went insane.

KING HAS BOND IN POCKET

Dugger, Ind., Cashier Surrenders on Bank Looting Charge.

Sullivan, Ind., June 14.—Edward J. King, former cashier of the Dugger State bank, surrendered to Sheriff Ed Kelley at the Sullivan County jail to face a charge of embezzlement. He gave bond of $5,000. King, upon learning that a charge was filed against him in the Sullivan Circuit court had arranged the bond himself and when he gave himself up carried with him the bond all filled out and signed by Patrick J. King, his brother; Mary King; his mother; P. R. McCarthy of Vincennes; Charles E. Noirste of Knox county and himself.

Prosecutor Bays filed an affidavit last week in the circuit court against King, charging embezzlement of $5,000 or more, the exact amount unknown. King surrendered several weeks ago after a mysterious absence from Dugger. He was charged with a shortage of $34,000.

Woman's World

College Girl at Head of Congressional Union For Woman Suffrage.

Copyright by Edmonston.

MISS ALICE PAUL.

Miss Alice Paul of New Jersey is chairman of the Congressional Union For Woman Suffrage.

Miss Paul is a graduate of Swarthmore college and has an M. A. and Ph. D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania. She is also a graduate of the New York school of philanthropy and studied at the Universities of Birmingham and London. She was formerly chairman of the congressional committee of the National American Woman Suffrage association and formerly a member of the board of the Pennsylvania State Woman Suffrage association.

The Congressional Union For Woman Suffrage is an organization which has as its basic work the establishment of a national suffrage amendment.

The women most interested in the suffrage movement felt that during the incoming of a new administration was the psychological moment for reviving interest or, rather, creating a new interest in the demand by women for an amendment to the national constitution embracing the enfranchisement of women. It was to this end that the Congressional union was formed, with Miss Alice Paul at its head, and which demonstrated in no unmistakable terms to President Wilson's administration the great strength of the movement for a national suffrage amendment.

Suffrage history was made that day preceding the inauguration of President Wilson, when approximately 8,000 women marched from the capitol at Washington up Pennsylvania avenue, past the White House and invaded the Hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

This demonstration was so beautiful in its pageantry and allegorical features that it very nearly overshadowed the interest excited in the minds of the people by the inaugural ceremonies themselves, and the Sixty-third congress entered upon its term of office fully informed upon one point at any rate—that many women were demanding the amendment.

50th ANNIVERSARY

A Deferred Meeting with a Happy Culmination June 9.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Daniels were 50 years married last March, but owing to the ill health of their youngest son in Arizonia, the general celebration of the event was postponed until [illegible] 9, when all the family [illegible] gether. John of Chicago, Walter of Ind., Marion of Arizona and Virginia Halladay of Clinton were all together with their parents for the first time in 24 years. The first break in this family occurred last winter, when the wife of their son Marion passed away at Derango Col. Of the immediate family there are now the parents, 3 sons, a daughter and 9 grandchildren.

Early in the morning of last Wednesday two auto loads arrived on the train and were taken to the home where Mr. and Mrs. Daniels were waiting to receive them.

The forenoon was passed in visiting until the call came for dinner, which proved to be a sumptuous banquet, speeches, reminiscences and the reading of an original poem followed with more social visiting.

Among the gifts received on this occasion was a beautiful silver tray with Father and Mother, 1865-1915 in 14 caret gold rivated upon it, and also engraved with a suitable inscription and the names of the four children, who presented this as a loving remembrance of the occasion. The son Marion assisted by the others planned a surprise for the evening by engaging the Clinton band to give them a serenade.

Thursday four autos bearing the party of 18 went over the old home grounds in Franklin which was their early home, the old school house was visited and all the haunts of their childhood days. They finally reached Sand Lake where they had a blue gill dinner, and indulged in various sports. On the return trip they took in the home of the daughter Mrs. Herman Halladay where a bountiful lunch was served, reaching home at 10 o'clock tired but happy.

The Evening News of Bayonne, New Journey of June 11 has an account of the Suffragists meeting being held in their city. We quote as follows: Suffragists open great four day campaign with Mrs. Jennie C. Law Hardy of Tecumseh, Mich., for speaker. This famous advocate of votes for women addresses a large crowd at a meeting held at Broadway and Twenty second street and wins many converts to the cause by her logical reasoning and astounding array of facts. She will address three open air meetings tonight, one at Constable Hook at noon tomorrow and one in the City Park on Sunday—Is stopping at the home of Mrs. Alex. Christie.

An interesting meeting of the W. C. T. U was held last Friday at the home of Mrs. Smeltzer, the program having special reference to the origin and work of the "Flower Mission." June 9th being the birthday of the founder and first Superintendent of "Flower Mission" in the W. C. T. U. was selected as a day of special observance by all local unions. The committee in charge of the work here reported the distribution of over fifty boquets and cards with scripture text, among the sick and "shut-ins" of our village all of which were received with many expressions of pleasure. The society wishes to express its thanks to all who so kindly contributed the flowers which made possible this expression of kindliness and love for those less fortunate than ourselves.

PHYSICIAN'S PRESCRIPTION FOR INDIGESTION

Important for all Those Who Suffer After Eating.

If you suffer from indigestion after eating and find that instead of the one little pepsin or soda pill you used to take, it now needs two or three to stop it, it's time you called a halt and did some hard thinking.

The plain truth is that there are thousands of men and women in this country whose stomachs are dead or dying from lack of exercise while they themselves still live.

Years ago a famous physician wrote the prescription for Mi-o-na Stomach Tablets and thousands owe their very life to them today. Most stomach remedies work on the food and digest it. Mi-o-na works on the stomach and digest nothing. Mi-o-na Tablets strengthen the stomach walls, stimulate the stomach muscles and vitalize the Stomach machinery into instant and normal action. C. A. Wright & Son, Tecumseh Mich., and many other leading druggists hereabouts sell Mi-o-na Tablets, agreeing to refund money in any case where it does not bring complete relief. If your own druggist thinks this well of Mi-o-na you surely ought to try it.

Always Hoping.

K. OF P. MEMORIAL

Services Held at Castle Hall Sunday Afternoon.

The annual memorial services of Tecumseh lodge No. 190, K. of P., were held at the Castle hall Sunday afternoon June 13, and were of a very interesting nature. There were 50 knights and ladies present.

The chancellor commander, Andrew Taylor, opened the services after which the K. of P. quartet, A. B. McLachlin, Sheldon Southwick, Glenn Tansley and A. B. Harding sang in excellent style, "Strew the fair garlands," accompanied by Mrs. McLachlin.

Other parts of the ritual service was then conducted by the officers, after which the chancellor commander introduced Rev. W. B. Hartzog, who spoke in a pleasing manner on the "Value of fraternal societies," in the cause of which he spoke highly of the speial advantages of fraternal societies which are a pre-eminent feature. He lauded the good principles of the practice of friendship, charity and benevolence that are inculcated in Pythian lodges and which make all people better. He concluded by saying that one of the great principles of the Pythian order is that they can show their fraternal spirit by these memorial services in honor of their deceased brothers.

Arthur B. Harding sang a fine solo, "Somebody," accompanied by Mrs. Harding. The concluding parts of the services followed and they ended with a pretty solo "I am a pilgrim," sung by Miss Edna Taylor.

TRYING DAYS FOR STUDENTS

School is Out, But They Can't Go—Mumps.

Adrian, Mich., June 14.—The college year at Adrian is over, but five unfortunate under-graduates are still in their rooms in the young men's dormitory. They have the mumps. The total number of suffering ones at Adrian college, up to date, is 15, three co-eds having been afflicted during the last three weeks.

The five unfortunates are under the care of the college matron, who is doing her best to reduce swollen cheeks to normal and get the victims home for their summer vacations.

150,000 Licensed Motors.

Lansing, Mich., June 14.—Secretary of State Vaughan is preparing to submit bids for the automobile license patents for 1916, and it is believed there will be 150,000 licensed motor cers in Michigan at the end of next year. Next year license plates will be white with blue numerals. This year's plates have white numerals on a blue background.

Observe the Sabbath.

Dunlap, Ia., June 14.—The women of this town are against Sunday base ball and against it strong. Out of 142 women here 120 of them signed a petition against Sunday baseball. All the ministers of this "burg" are also against playing the national game on the Sabbath.

Held for $60,000 Theft.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 14.—Oscar L. Smith, a lawyer, aged sixty, wanted in St. Louis on a charge of embezzling upwards of $60,000 from clients, is under arrest here awaiting extradition to Missouri.

Jelly Roll Recipe

Only Two Eggs Required

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

This Jelly Roll is fast becoming very popular on account of the way it keeps fresh. With proper handling it should keep fresh a whole week, providing it isn't eaten up in the meantime, for it is every bit as good as it looks. 33

K C Jelly Roll

One cup sifted flour; scant half teaspoonful salt; 2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; grated rind of 1 lemon; 2 eggs beaten light; 1 cup sugar; ½ cup hot milk; glass of jelly; powdered sugar.

Beat the sugar into the eggs; add the lemon rind, then the flour, sifted three times with the salt and baking powder; and, lastly, the milk. Bake in a buttered dripping pan; turn out on a damp cloth, trim off the crisp edges; spread with jelly and turn over and over into a roll while still warm. Dredge the top with powdered sugar.

Hot milk used in the jelly roll enables it to be rolled without danger of cracking. Have the milk scalding hot, also be careful to have the eggs and sugar beaten together until very light and creamy. Bake in a moderate oven.

K C Jelly Roll is illustrated on page thirty-two of the new and handsomely illustrated 64-page K C Cook's Book, which may be secured free by sending the certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the JAQUES MFG. Co., Chicago, Ill.

A Standard Make

We have sold in the last two years

Twenty-Six Deering Grain Binders and Twenty-three Deering Mowers.

This year, with the season just beginning, we have sold as many Binders and within one as many Mowers as all of last year.

WHY DO WE SELL SO MANY?

There are two reasons:

One—The DEERING is the most reliable, best known, and most popular line of harvesting machines in this part of the country.

The Other—TEMPLE'S SERVICE INSURANCE—which means:

A big line of repairs always on hand.

Prompt help in case of break-downs. (you do not have to wait several days while we send for an expert.)

This service free for the first year.

Can you beat it? Come in and let us show you the machines.

Made In America

From satin to sausage, from rubber to rouge,
We have always been used to, behold—
"Made in Germany," "England" or "Belgium" or "France."
On everything salable sold,
But since Europe has gone on a blood drunken spree
And the east is mixed up in the row,
The things that we eat and the things that we wear
Are made in America now.

From a white cotton gown to a diamond crown,
From hairpins to automobiles,
From embroidery floss to the pickles and sauce
We relish so much with our meals;
From pans to pianos, from carpets to cake,
Though all unadorned with a crest,
The "Made in America" label affixed
To anything stamps it the best.

A Boy Scout Is Thrifty.

The cashier of the savings bank is accustomed to see the boy scout at his window. He knows that when the khaki clad youth appears before him with a sum, no matter how small, he is living up to scout law No. 9—"a scout is thrifty."

A scout is thrifty. He does not wantonly destroy property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing and makes the best use of his opportunities. He saves his money so that he may pay his own way, be generous to those in need and helpful to worthy objects. He may work for pay, but must not receive tips for courtesies or good turns.

To become a second class scout a boy must earn and deposit at least $1 in a bank. To become a first class scout a boy must earn and deposit at least $2 in a bank.

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Mrs. [illegible], Wyandotte and Potawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, says: The first system of kidney complaint is a sharp shooting pain across the small of my back, which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. Someone advised me give Doan's Kidney [illegible] and I [illegible], procuring my supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, the pains and aches left and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering no longer troubled me. In fact, I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so. My former endorsement holds good."

THE HOUSEWIVES' BATTLE.

The Buzzing Fly One of the Deadliest of Insects.

This is the time to begin your warfare upon the fly and precautions taken now are worth all sorts of preventives later on. Every fly that you see buzzing through your rooms and allow to live may breed millions, each one of which may in turn breed millions more. Very often a housewife will not take the bother to chase a single fly, whereas if her rooms were filled with any number of them she would start a clearance at once. If she could only realize that the numbers would never be there if she killed the single one perhaps she would exert herself more at the first glimpse of the dreaded pest.

The spring of the year is the breeding time for flies. In another month, for every single fly that you allow to live today you will find hundreds of thousands. Let that sink into your mind thoroughly. That first fly you just saw buzzing about in the sunshine—look through and beyond that single fly and see its thousands and thousands of progeny. Don't you think you will save time and trouble later on by killing that single fly now?

Swat the fly! Let this be your slogan if you wish to keep your household free of sickness and disease this summer. Teach your children to swat them too. They will do it gladly if you will just arm them each with a weapon which looks very much like a miniature tennis racket made out of flexible wire, and turn them loose in the rooms. They will make a game of it and will clear up all the flies in sight.

SWAT THE FLY.

ANTI-DRUG LAWS DOING THEIR WORK

Hundreds In New York Seeking Treatment In Hospitals.

SITUATION NOT UNEXPECTED

Price of Dope Has Advanced Over 1,000 Per Cent In Many Instances, and Fiends Find It Almost Impossible to Buy It at Any Price—Prisons Filled With Victims.

New York.—Since the strict enforcement of the drastic anti-drug laws in this city has made it almost impossible for dope fiends to buy narcotics the results are both sad and interesting.

"An appalling situation in which drug maniacs are allowed at large," is Ernest K. Coulter's characterization of the present state of affairs in New York. Mr. Coulter represented Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt in the long fight to suppress drug traffic in this city. He was asked to tell what ought to be done to handle the many cases of drug victims who, deprived of cocaine, heroin and other habit forming drugs, are committing acts of violence and filling the city's prisons and hospitals.

"I don't believe the people of the city realize the seriousness of the situation," said Mr. Coulter. "It must be understood that these men who rob, assault and kill to get morphine or some similar drug are insane. They are the most dangerous kind of lunatics when the craving comes over them. The drug means more to them than life, and they will never hesitate to sacrifice lives—others and their own—to get the stuff.

"The situation which has arisen is perilous in the extreme, but it is not unexpected, and ample warning of what would come about if the city did not prepare for it was given a year ago before the Boylan law became effective on July 1 last. The city was told then that it must prepare to handle hundreds—yes, thousands—of unfortunates.

"Commitment of drug habitues to hospitals had been found to be a flat failure, because the hospitals were too overcrowded to keep these cases a sufficient length of time. In addition experience had shown that the hospitals were not the proper places for drug cases, because the clinical or medical treatment needs to be followed by a prolonged social, physical and mental rehabilitation. The prisons were then overloaded with drug users, and we found that in nearly every case the prison terms were too short for treatment to effect anything like a cure.

"Consider this: From 40 per cent to 65 per cent of prisoners are drug users. Leaving out those sentenced for this very thing, from 30 per cent to 50 per cent of persons convicted of other offenses are found to be drug users. They have to be treated for this, but the workhouse sentences, for instance, are so short that nothing adequate can be done to rid them of the habit."

The Boylan law, the Vanderbilt and other anti-drug crusades and to some extent the war have increased drug prices as much as 1,000 per cent.

A year ago a six ounce can of opium cost the "pipey" or smoker from $6 to $10. Now it costs from $35 to $55. Sold by the "toy," the smallest and most popular measure, it brought $1 for first class opium or 50 cents for lower grade. Now Lai Yuen, the best opium, costs $6 a "toy." Recently 300 six ounce tins of this opium sold for $15,000, and the buyer expected to make $3,000 profit.

Cocaine, now selling for $22 an ounce, could be obtained a year ago for $3 or less. A "deck" of cocaine, the small package generally used in the illegal drug trade, sells now for $4.50 to $5, and the user gets less than he used to for 25 cents. It is now sold in smaller packages, containing only a few doses, for 50 cents or $1. The drug now is often adulterated.

Heroin, or morphine diacetyl, was imported largely from Germany and little manufactured here. It comes in tablets, which are crushed and "sniffed" through the nose. A hundred tablets now sell for $5 to $6. Before the war they cost $1. Heroin powder adulterated with sugar of lead is sold at a corresponding advance.

The morphine user pays almost as much as the opium smoker. Morphine is selling now at $5 for twenty-five grains. Formerly the same amount was sold for 25 to 35 cents.

MOVED BY PARCEL POST.

Old Way Cost Her $20—New Only $4.62.

Seattle, Wash.—Mrs. Annie Olson is believed to be the first housewife in the United States to "move" by parcel post. Postoffice clerks were astonished a few days ago when she demanded stamps for conveyance of her household goods from this city to Quinault.

"I figured it would be cheaper this way," said Mrs. Olson, handing in a barrel containing her kitchen stove.

Other articles of furniture followed, weighing in all 837 pounds and including kitchen utensils, a rocking chair and a dining room table, among other things. The moving cost her $4.62 in stamps. It cost her $20 the old way, she said.

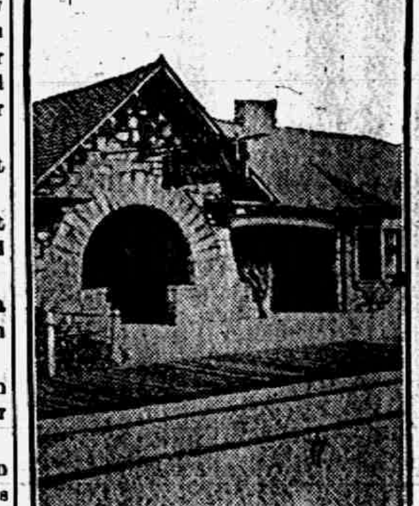
PRETTY STATIONS ON RAILROADS

Importance of Attractive Appearance From Car Window.

DEPOTS ARE INDICATORS.

First Impressions Are the Most Powerful and Lasting, Therefore the Get Up of a Suburban Station Has Its Influence Upon the Passerby.

When it is remembered that first impressions are the most powerful and the most lasting it will be easy to realize how highly important to a suburb is the appearance of the railroad station, which is generally the entrance to the village, writes Robert H. Van Comb in Art and Progress. With a majority of the people the opinion which is formed of a place is based very largely upon its appearance as seen from the vantage point of a car window. The village may possess attractions which do not appear to the casual passerby, but the station and its surroundings are generally considered representative of the place, and upon their appearance a judgment—either favorable or unfavorable—is very apt to be formed.



AN ATTRACTIVE SUBURBAN STATION.

The problem is complicated by the fact that in the vast majority of instances the business quarter of a village is situated immediately about the station, and such quarters, which are apt to be more or less unattractive, have a great effect upon the appearance of what is the very heart of the community life. There are countless instances, particularly in the newer suburbs of large cities, where the entire development has been controlled and directed by a firm of real estate operators, where the problem has been very skillfully and successfully managed and the station and its surroundings are both beautiful and picturesque. In most suburbs, however, the ownership of such property is in the hands of many different individuals, and it is difficult to awaken the public spirit or to obtain the co-operation necessary for any plan of really successful betterment.

Many years ago the officials of one railroad so fully realized the opportunities which were theirs that the care of its stations—the rearrangement of such as already existed and the planning of those yet to be established—was given into the charge of an official assisted by a corps of draftsmen, designers and landscape gardeners and aided by the resources of a nursery for the growing of shrubbery and other plants. The dignity and beauty of many of the suburban railroad stations about an eastern city prove the wisdom of the plan.

The forlorn and unattractive station was taken in hand—its architectural shortcomings were quickly remedied by a clever architect who supervised the alterations made by the company's construction department. An equally clever landscape gardener would decide upon the treatment necessary to secure the most attractive use of any natural advantages which the surroundings might possess and the best means of concealing what could not be remedied. The newer stations presented opportunities for working out really beautiful results both in the planning of the stations and in the arrangement of their grounds. The late H. H. Richardson, one of the greatest of American architects, designed several of the station buildings, which even today are models of all that a suburban railroad station should be.

Where the initiative is not taken by the railroad authorities it must logically come from residents of the village itself, and there are countless instances of the improvement of entire communities and the awakening of local civic pride by village improvement leagues.

Fops' Alley.

Fops' alley was in Her Majesty's theater, London. It was a promenade down the center of the pit and between the latter and the boxes. There the beaux of the day were wont to stroll between the acts, exchanging criticisms on the music and the singers and ogling the belles in the boxes.—London Mail.

On the Jungfrau

Story of a Slip of the Foot in a Snowstorm

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

There is a little town in the Bernese Alps called Grindelwald. It is occupied both in winter and summer principally by English people who go there for relaxation. A fine hotel furnishes accommodation for these pleasure seekers, who in winter skate on the rink attached to the hotel or glide over the crusted snow on skis. At 5 o'clock an English afternoon tea is set in the hostelry which is rather a luncheon than a tea and upon which the appetites of the guests, excited by the winter sports, are satisfied, half a dozen girls in Swiss costume serving the viands.

The summer season at Grindelwald is mostly devoted to climbing. There are mountains enough in the immediate neighborhood to furnish a field for the ambition of the most expert climbers. There are the snowy summits of the Wetterhorn, the Schreckhorn, the Finsteraarhorn, the Eiger, the Monch, the Silberhorn, but the queen of the range is the Jungfrau. Every summer some of these mountains are climbed by men whose heads are sufficiently balanced to enable them to make such an ascent and whose passion lies in ascending to giddy heights.

One night a young American named Harvey arrived at Interlaken, so called from being between Lake Briens and Lake Thun in the region of the Bernese Alps. The rain was pouring down in torrents, making his introduction to a locality noted for its beautiful scenery anything but pleasant, and, to make matters worse, he was informed that the sun had not been seen there for two weeks.

But the next morning he was awakened by a ray of sunlight and, jumping out of bed, looked through a window. High in the heaven stood the Jungfrau, white as the moon after daylight of a morning. He was first impressed with the beauty and grandeur of the sight, then was seized with a desire to stand on the mountain's summit.

Harvey was directed to go to Grindelwald, which is not far from Interlaken by the narrow gauge cogwheel railroad. From there he could go by the same transportation to Scheidegg, still farther up in the mountains, at the base of the Jungfrau peak, where he would find guides who would conduct him on the ascent.

In the train were a party of Americans and a number of English people, some going as far as Grindelwald, while others would make the trip to Scheidegg and thence down to Lauterbrunnen and back to Interlaken.

On this trip Harvey made the acquaintance of a party of Americans, among whom were several young girls. One of these girls, a Miss Ada Rutledge, proved more attractive to the young American than the Jungfrau, and, though after reaching Grindelwald he was every day about to start for the ascent, it was a month before he made his final preparations for doing so.

Meanwhile a full fledged love affair had developed between him and Miss Rutledge. Love among persons who have nothing to do but enjoy themselves grows rapidly, and with this pair it galloped. Before the thirty days had passed they had plighted their troth.

Most of those at Grindelwald were English people, and among them was a young scion of a noble house, the Hon. Mr. Chidley. Chidley was at first attentive to Miss Rutledge, but when Harvey became devoted to her withdrew from a rivalry that appeared hopeless. Whether he was much smitten with her, whether his predisposition for her had any effect on the main incident of this story, has never become known.

When Harvey finally got away from Miss Rutledge, who was holding him from his desire to rise in the air as a weight holds down a balloon, the parting was accomplished by a party of climbers that was organized to make the ascent of the Jungfrau. The party consisted of four besides the guides, two Americans and two Englishmen, one of the latter being the Hon. Mr. Chidley. They were to go up during an afternoon to a clubhouse on the side of the mountain provided by an Alpine association, where they would remain till about 2 o'clock in the morning, when they would resume their climb.

The dangers attending mountain climbing are well known. Every year a number of climbers meet with accidents and add more graves to those in the cemetery devoted to the bodies of the killed. Naturally Miss Rutledge was solicitous with reference to her lover's safety and clung to him at their parting, loath to let him go.

Most of the guests at the hotel were outside to see the starting and waved a successful climb and a safe return, Miss Rutledge's handkerchief being the last to be withdrawn. The party reached the clubhouse before sunset and helped themselves to what they needed from eatables cached there, leaving money to pay for what they used. Then they threw themselves on the straw which was provided instead of beds.

It was more than an hour before dawn when they were awakened by their guides, who prepared such a breakfast as would be expected on such an expedition, not out of keeping with the straw beds. There is no exhilaration in turning out in the cold at 2 o'clock in the morning, and the climbers started on their march in a silence that was maintained till after day had broken.

It is by no means certain when a party undertakes to make an ascent that it will succeed. In this case it gained the summit and looked over the Alpine area, its various peaks forming a surface something like that of an ocean of gigantic billows. Harvey was delighted and impulsively resolved that if he lived long enough he would climb every important peak in Switzerland.

Man proposes and God disposes. This was destined to be his only mountain ascent.

In the descent first came a guide, then an Englishman, then an American. The fourth man was Chidley, the fifth Harvey, the sixth a guide, a rope passed from the first to the last bound around the body of each person.

When the party left the summit there was scarcely a cloud in the sky. Two hours later the sun was suddenly obscured, and the party was enveloped in a dense snowstorm. Much depended upon the first guide, who selected the route. He was moving cautiously when the man behind him slipped and fell. The third man was pulled off his feet, and the weight of the two combined threw the front guide. The strain of three fallen men was too much for the rope, which was held taut by the three rear men. It broke, and the front half of the party went down into an abyss.

Chidley, who was now front man, threw himself in the opposite direction from that in which [illegible] had fallen. He fell into a depression some thirty feet deep, covered with snow, and dangled there, not knowing what was beneath him. Harvey and the rear guide fell on the opposite side. The rope held.

That night Chidley staggered into a chalet high up on the mountain and reported that he was the only member of the climbing party left alive. He said that, after hanging several hours the rope between him, on one side of a sharp ridge and Harvey and the guide on the other side broke and all had fallen. Chidley expected, he said, to go down into an abyss, but had only fallen some thirty feet into soft snow. As soon as the storm ceased he had found his way to the ridge and continued the descent alone.

Chidley was piloted to Grindelwald, where he told his story. The end of the rope about his waist showed evidence of having been cut by ice or a rock edge about four feet from his body. When asked if he believed that any of the others of the party had fallen on ground that would not necessarily bring death he said that the other side of the ridge was very deep and he had no hope that they could have survived the fall.

Miss Rutledge after the first paroxysm of grief insisted on joining a rescue party to go up the mountain and hunt for the others of the party or their dead bodies. All efforts to persuade her to remain failed. The party started soon after daylight in the morning, and she was the only woman with it.

Chidley was so enervated by the terrible experience through which he had passed that he expressed himself as unable to guide the rescue party to the scene of the accident. This set them all against him, for his guidance was essential. No effort could induce him to go, and they were obliged to content themselves with his pointing out the ridge from which the fall had occurred, which could be seen from the hotel.

The party, armed with ropes, food and stimulants, started up the mountain. On approaching the clubhouse a man was seen standing before the door looking down upon them. Then another came out and stood beside him. It looked as though at least two of the missing men had been saved. Presently these two men came down to meet the party. They were Harvey and the rear guide.

The relief felt by Miss Rutledge was too great to be concealed. She threw herself into Harvey's arms.

The men showed the end of the rope that had held them to Chidley. It had been cut with a knife. He could fray the end he carried away with him with a stone, but not the end next to Harvey. The two men had slid down several hundred feet into a pocket. The three men who had preceded them had gone much farther, but could be seen from a point near which they had fallen. Harvey and the guide, not being able to rescue them without ropes, had continued the descent and had stopped for food at the clubhouse.

The party proceeded to a lodge above the three men they sought and, having rope in plenty, assisted them up an ascent too steep and too slippery for them to climb, especially as one of the party had broken a leg. Having effected the rescue, all returned to the hotel at Grindelwald.

The Hon. Mr. Chidley saw them coming at a distance, counted them and knew that all had been saved. Moreover, they brought with them evidence that he had discovered how near he was to safety and had sacrificed two of them in his desire to insure it for himself. A train was leaving Grindelwald, and he left with it.

The reason why Harvey never climbed another mountain is apparent. In the first place, after his experience on the Jungfrau he had no desire to climb another mountain. In the second place, a Jungfrau in the person of Miss Rutledge, who became Mrs. Harvey, put her veto on his again doing anything of the kind.

Pointe for Mothers

Moral Failings of Nervous Children.

Stealing is not as common as untruthfulness and usually takes the mild form of the pilfering of jellies or sweets. Thus frequently we find the physical basis right there in the demand of the system for more sugar. Some children will take from others what they consider trifles merely from a desire to possess and would not think of appropriating anything of great value. Such a child does not consider this a form of theft and if rudely awakened to the fact that it is will suffer marked nervous shock. In a hysterical desire to ingratiate themselves with parents or teachers some children will steal money and other valuables, but always with a desire to give it to others and reserve none for themselves.

Now, in dealing with any of these forms of theft the child must not be accused of being a thief; neither must his act be called theft. It must be clearly shown to him that the act is not right; that he has no right to anything which belongs to another, and then the promise may be exacted that he will respect these rights in the future. The child should not be impressed with the full gravity of the offense because he will then be in dread of the punishment which he sees meted out to ordinary thieves. But the parent must not overlook even apparently harmless pilfering of sweets. A continuance of such habits may lead to the taking of valuables, and it must be checked as soon as possible.

Austro-German Ships Are Seized.

ROME — Eighty Austrian and German vessels in Italian ports, valued at $30,000,000, were ordered seized. Among them are several of the finest vessels in the German merchant marine, interned at Gnoa since the begining of the Europea war.

OBREGON AND NIL

EL PASO, TEXAS — General Alvaro Obregon, who was wounded in the battle of Leon by a shell which necessitated amputating his right arm, died there Saturday night.

General Obregon was the only Carranza general who defeated Villa and was commander of the constitutionalist force in central and northern Mexico. General Benjamin Hill has been appointed to succeed him in command.

SCHWAB IS FRIEND OF FRANCE IN WAR

Senator Humbert Was Offered Plant's Entire Output.

PARIS — Senator Humbert, who is France's greatest political reformer, now leading the munitions' campaign claimed, writing in the Journal, that he had outwitted the German agents in obtaining an offer of the entire output of the Bethlehem Steel plant exclusively for the allies during last August.

"I did it," he writes, "without seeking financial control of the company, without buying stock or consciences, but solely relying on the world-wide sympathies that our dear country commands.

"When the minister of marine intrusted me with the mission to the United States, I met Charles M. Schwab. We were both self-made men and both had had a tremendous struggle in early life. A close sympathy spontaneously sprang up between us.

"Charles Schwab authorized me to place at the disposal of the French government the entire resources of the Bethlehem Steel corporation and the numerous other enterprises he controls. Our mutual verbal bond sufficed, and I had no need to offer $100,000,000, as the German agents did nine months later.

"As I visited the immense Bethlehem works, inspecting the miles of shops where the United States navy was built for the greatest part, and where the Austrian heavy artillery was made, two of the directors accompanying me said:

"'All this wealth, this force, these machines, munitions, guns and workers are at your disposal.'

"Later I will tell why France unfortunately failed to take advantage of this generous and magnificent offer."

A letter from Charles M. Schwab, produced by Mr. Humbert, shows the steel man's warm sympathy for France.

PEACE NOT IN SIGHT, HOUSE

Colonel, Back From Europe, Denies Being President's Emissary.

ROSLYN, L. I. — Colonel E. M. House, who came here as soon as he got back from his four months' stay abroad, said that he saw no chance for peace in Europe. Moreover, he declared that the United States "never had the job of peace maker," and he denied that his trip had been undertaken as President Wilson's unofficial envoy on a mission of peace.

The first thing Colonel House said was to deny that he had visited the warring nations of Europe as the president's statesman to sound them on the subject of peace overtures.

BIG CAR STRIKE TIES UP CHICAGO

14,000 Men on Surface and Elevated Lines Quit.

THOUSANDS FORCED TO WALK

Steam Roads Are Swamped With Passengers and All Sorts of Vehicles Are Pressed Into Service—1,200 Miles of Railways Within the City Affected.

CHICAGO, ILL. — America's biggest street car strike—in number of men and women who are idle, cars motionless and citizens inconvenienced—began in Chicago at midnight, and its first effects were felt before daylight by hundreds of early morning workers. Never before, say street car union officials, has such a complete tieup of a vast system of street railways and elevated lines been accomplished in any city in United States.

14,000 Men Walk Out.

The tie-up of the car lines of Chicago deprives 2,500,000 patrons daily of their usual means of transportation. Of this number 500,000 find their usual means of progress to their offices and in pursuit of business at a standstill. Fourteen thousand men and women were thrown out of work when the strike order became effective.

The strike extends to Hammond, East Chicago and Whiting, Ind., South Chicago and Kankakee over the Chicago and Interurban Traction company lines.

At midnight all men on cars were ordered to finish their runs and turn in their badges. Every car was in its barn and every elevated train on switch tracks before 5 a. m., and not a coach was running on 1,200 miles of surface and elevated tracks within the city limits.

Steam Roads Swamped.

The steam railroads, that under ordinary circumstances carry only a small percentage of the city's vast traffic, are overwhelmed by the crowds that sought and even fought to get aboard their trains.

They clung to the steps; some even tried to climb to the roofs of the coaches; a few venturesome ones rode on the pilots of the locomotives. Rain during the morning drenched the thousands walking and in autos, trucks, buses wagons and on bicycles.

ITALIANS TAKE VALENTINA

ROME, ITALY—An Italian official statement concerning the progress of the campaign against Austria says:

"From Tonale to Carnia all the enemy's attempts against the positions we captured have been successfully repulsed. In the Nolaja sector in Carnia we occupied Valentina. Our heavy artillery has cut the railway from Goritz to Monfalcone in the vicinity of the Sagrado railway station."

CYCLONES KILL 10 IN TWO STATES

Wisconsin and Northern Illinois Are Swept.

LA CROSSE, WIS. — Eight persons, including one Chicago man, are known to have been killed and eighteen injured, some severely, in a cyclone which struck Ferryville, Wis., and vicinity at night and did property damage estimated at $100,000.

The river steamer Frontenac, which was to have taken an excursion out of La Crosse, was sunk when it hit the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railway bridge at Winona, Minn., thirty miles north of here early in the morning. A heavy wind blew the craft against the bridge. So far as can be learned no life was lost.

DIXON, ILL. — Dixon and vicinity suffered from one of the worst storms of the season. Cellars were flooded, hundreds of shade trees were blown down and the city light service was put out of commission for a time.

One man was struck blind; another went insane.

Russ Capture 15,779 in Three Days.

LONDON — In a battle on the Dniester River in the region of Zurawna, Galicia, which lasted from June 2 to June 10, the Russians captured 348 officers and 15,431 soldiers with 78 machine guns and 17 cannon, according to a Russian official statement issued under date of June 12.

War Cost $11,250,000,000.

BUDAPEST — The national debt of the belligerent powers have been increased $11,250,000,000 since the beginning of the war, according to figures compiled by Dr. Elemer Hantos, a Hungarian financial authority.

Six Killed in Southern Race Riot.

COLUMBIA, S. C. — Six persons are reported to have been killed in a riot early in the day at Winnsboro, S. C., as the outcome of the trial of a negro on a charge of attacking a white woman. Adjutant General Moore has gone to Winnsboro.

Austrians Move Treasure From Triest.

ROME, ITALY—The governor of Triest has transferred his residence to Adelsberg. The chamber of commerce has been transferred to Vienna and the Triest treasury has been sent to Lebeana.

TAXI KILLS WOMAN WHO GETS RATTLED

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Because she lost her head in an emergency Miss Sarah Boreing of Louisville, Ky., was killed here by a taxicab whose chauffeur did his best to run away from his victim.

Miss Boreing heard the taxi driver, R. B. Corwin, sound his horn and started to run. Corwin, to dodge her, swung around to the center of the street, but the fender hit Miss Boreing's hips. When she struck the pavement her skull was fractured and her right arm broken in two places. Corwin was married only a few days ago and was preparing to enjoy his honeymoon. He was not arrested, as his passenger, Mrs. C. B. Cahoon of Los Angeles, Ca., and other witnesses agree he was going only ten miles an hour.

Miss Boreing, thirty-five years old, is survived by a sister who is coming from Louisville for the body.

MINERS SHARE PROSPERITY

$500,000 Hard Time Bonus Paid Michigan Copper Men.

CALUMET, MICH. — Nearly 10,000 employes of the Calumet & Hecla and subsidiary mining companies today receive an average of $50 each in the distribution of half a million dollars by the companies.

Each employe who worked during the industrial depression of eight months after Sept. 1 received the amount over what he was paid in wages under the reduced wage scales effective during depression that he would have earned under normal conditions.

CHILD'S BURNS MAY BE FATAL

Little Girl Plays With Matches and Is Seriously Injured.

BAY CITY, MICH. — Mabel, the pretty three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leser, was probably fatally burned as a result of playing with matches which she and her brother took from an old coat of their father's.

Mrs. Leser was seriously burned about the hands and arms in her efforts to extinguish the blazing dress of the child with a rug.

DR. ANTHONY QUITS ADRIAN

Head of College Offered Dr. A. F. Hess, West Lafayette, Ohio.

ADRIAN, MICH. — Dr. B. W. Anthony, for eleven years president of Adrian college, resigned and his resignation was accepted by the board of trustees.

The post has been offered to Dr. A. F. Hess of West Lafayette college, West Lafayette, O. The board abolished the office of dean and provided for immediate action to pay off current debts.

Public Funds for Baseball.

BIG RAPIDS, MICH. — The local city council has voted to expend from $300 to $400 in fitting up Riverside park for a baseball diamond. An association will be formed shortly and officers elected. It is planned to secure a manager who has had previous experience in the role.

More Establishments Consolidated.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Battle Creek's second consolidation of big establishments within a week was effected when the Toeller-Dolling company department store bought the T. J. Kelleher company's store, founded in 1882.

Episcopals Set 68 as Pension Year.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — Following a heated debate by the delegates to the western Michigan diocese convention of the Episcopal church at the concluding session, it was decided to allow no old age pensions until the rector has reached the age of sixty-eight years, no matter how long he may have served. The amount of the pension is to be rated by the salary the pastor formerly received.

Lansing Man Arbitrator.

LANSING, MICH. — Frank L. Dodge of Lansing, Democrat candidate for congress in the sixth district last fall, has been appointed mediation and arbitration commissioner by Governor Ferris. This office was created as the result of the passage of the Hilsendegen bill at the last session of the legislature. The salary is $2,500 per year.

GERMANY WANTS TO TALK IT OVER

JOINT DISCUSSION PROPOSED

Reply to U. S. Note Expected to Seek Delay in Controversy Over the Doctrine of Retaliation — President's Rejoinder to Be Treated as Leaving Such Opening.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Germany, in her forthcoming reply to the second note of the United States concerning submarine warfare, will propose a discussion by this government of the principle and doctrine of reprisal or retaliation as a justification or palliation of her past acts of submarine warfare which have affected the lives of American citizens.

Germany will expect a free, full and clear discussion of this theme in connection with the starvation reprisals of Great Britain.

Germany will maintain it is impossible to discuss the universally admitted doctrine of reprisals without discussing it equally with Germany and Great Britain.

This proposal, it is understood, is the argument which Germany held in reserve when she sent her last note to the United States. In that note she said she had other considerations to present in reference to the Lusitania.

Lusitania Case Embraced.

The information that the other considerations are those given comes from diplomats who are in a position to know with a reasonable degree of certainty the attitude of Germany after the [illegible] note.

These officials say Germany will not go to the extent of asserting that the law of retaliation, even in its widest and most flexible interpretation, could be applied to any tragedies in the future in which there shall be a loss of American life by the illegal use of submarines without visit and search and assurances for the safety of non-combatant Americans.

It is nevertheless asserted that Germany will seek to embrace in her new argument even the case of the Lusitania. It is not, of course, expected by American diplomats that Germany's attitude will affect the determination of the president to insist on reparation for the past, and guarantees for the future. The whole object of the new argument by Germany, these officials say, will be to take proper advantage of the door left open by the president to bring forward its last argument.

DAUGHTER IDENTIFIES DEAD MAN AS FATHER

Victim of Heart Disease Was Daniel Figgins.

MUSKEGAN, MICH. — The body of the man who died in the lobby of the Marshall house here last Wednesday night, a victim of heart disease, was identified here by his daughter, Mrs. John Strandberg, who did not even know her father, Daniel Figgins, had located in Muskegon.

Immediately after Figgins died his body was removed to the morgue. Efforts of the officers to establish his identity proved unavailing until Mrs. Strandberg's chance reading of the story in a local paper caused her to investigate. Three daughters survive Figgins, Mrs. Otto Butkan of Grand Rapids, Miss Merilla Figgins of Chicago and Mrs. Strandberg.

ALUMNI IN 100-YARD RACE

U. of M. Grads to Be Handicapped in Ratio of Years.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Hon. A. C. Kingman, former senator; Burritt Hamilton, vice president of the Michigan bar, and other notables, have agreed to run a 100-yard dash next Saturday, when University of Michigan alumni from this section of Michigan will have a picnic at Gull Lake.

All starters will be handicapped in ratio to the years that have elapsed since they graduated. Thus Kingman of the class of 1869 will have to run but fifty-four yards and Hamilton only seventy-nine. Among those starting at the "scratch" will be Dr. R. H. Earlbeau, the former U. of M. pitcher, who graduated last year.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

TEUTONS CROSS DNIESTER

Advances in Southern District Presage New Lemberg Drive.

LONDON, ENG. — Renewed Austro-German activity in Bukowina, which is believed to indicate an effort to make a long drive upon Lemberg from the south, following the temporary repulse of the Teutonic offensive at Mosciska and at Zurawno on the Dneister, is admitted in the official statement received from Petrograd.

The Russians announce that the Austro-German forces approached the Dneister near Nesvisska and Zalestchiki and forced a crossing of the river at several points. This region lies to the southeast of Stanislau, and such a move opens the way for a drive northward upon Lemberg. Berlin asserts that the Germans have renewed their attacks east of Przemysl and Jaroslav, presumably with Lemberg as their objective.

Voice That Called.

At a club meeting a young matron began to show signs of uneasiness.

After a few more numbers a talented vocalist favored the company with a song entitled "A Voice Is Calling Me."

The young matron turned to a woman and whispered:

"A voice is calling me, too, and it's the baby."—Youngstown Telegram.

PROPHECY OF CLASS OF 1915

The world is a train which travels through the land of life, never pausing, never wavering; travelling at times through tunnels and passes, through bleak and sunless lands or hot and arid deserts; but more often through sunny happy climes where eternal spring rests on the trees and flowers and the sun sheds his benevolent rays on the smiling land. Here we have life in the present, vivid and real. The past is always behind us, to be remembered and to guide our steps by. And always, always, the future is there ahead, only waiting to become the present then to fade into the past.

A few days ago as I was riding on the observation platform of this world train, gazing at past frollicks and passing events, an automobile drew up alongside and the driver called: "Come on, leave your world awhile and take a flying trip with me to the future!" So I jumped in and off we started.

It was not so far there. Going at the rate we went, it only took a few seconds to travel a whole decade ahead. Passing events brushed by as we rushed through the years.

As we were approaching the year 1925 my driver slowed down a little bit so that I might see the styles of the future. Everywhere I saw familiar faces and once or twice I even thot I caught a glimse of myself in the passing crowd. At last I determined to accost the next familiar person I should see. As we were driving on the avenue I noticed a limousine of sumptuous elegance approaching. Inside, a handsomely gowned and pompous lady lolled among the cushions and gazed haughtily at the passersby through her lorgnette. I signalled her chaffeur to stop, then hastened up to the lady, "Madam," I began, she looked me over from head to foot, then said, "ah, yuah face is very familiah my deah, but ah"—Then suddenly it dawned on me who this lady was, "Igerna Croll" I cried, "dont you recognize me?" Whereat she dropped her Eastern accent, flung her arms about my neck and wept all the enamel off her face. She had a most romantic story which she told me as we stood there. It seems that, even when young, her greatest ambition had been to become a nurse. So after many years of diligent labor she went to the city and founded a hospital. One day as she sat by the window watching the aeroplanes and autos whirling by, a handsome debonair young motorist, passing, gazed too long on her, and smashed into the curbing. During the time of his convalescence under Igerna's care, he became more and more enamoured of her and finally kidnapped her and carried her off to the parsons.

Just as the former Miss Crolls limousine was disappearing around the corner, there was a great commotion among the people. I looked up and saw an aeroplane circling about above the town hall. Just as the machine darted away, a black speck fell through the air toward the building. Then there was a dreadful explosion and the town hall leapt into the air and fell to earth again with an awful rending of timbers and crashing of bricks! I learned from a passerby, that the women of the city were displeased with the way the mayor parted his hair, and decided to put him out of business. The aeroplane landed in a field just outside the city, so we motored out with the rest of the crowd. By standing up in car, I could see the main group and I recognized Lydia and Emmeline Pankhurst as they shook hands with the successful anarchists. I almost fell from the car when I recognized Vera Gilbert as the chief bomb thrower. She stood there in her helmet and mannish suit looking as happy as could be over the destruction which she had just caused. Directly behind her stood Leila Snell, her chief engineer and mechanic. Leila was dressed in appropriate knickers and leggings but her feet! You know what dainty number two's Leila has now? Well, you should have seen them as they appear in 1925! It was no wonder that, one day, as she sat in the aeroplane with her feet crossed and extended before, they mistook them for the fans and attempted to start the engine with them It was rumored that this change from the masculine, on Miss Gilbert's part was due to an unhappy love affair; and of course Leila left husband and home saying, "whither thou goest, Vera, there go I also."

When we had returned to the city, I noticed a man standing beside a Ford. Something strangely familiar about the set of his head and shoulders made me certain that I knew him when he looked around I recognized my old friend Mr. Hunter. I hastened up and pumping his hand up and down, asked him more questions in a second than he could ever hope to answer in an hour. "You see, Miss Peters "he said indicating the sign on the Ford, "I am running a jitney."—Then as I looked surprised and disappointed he hastened to explain: That is only to provide physical food: but for mental food—ah, in my leisure hours, I am working on a problem, the solution of which will revolutionize the world of science and bring my fame and honor." "And what is this stupendous question which you are attempting to solve" I asked. "It is" he replied, "how can the students of Tecumseh High School perform the required experiments in the present laboratory and with the given amount of paraphanalia?

"But where is Charlie Underwood now?" I asked. "Oh, Charlie—funny Charlie! Someone mistook for Charlie Chaplin one day, and put him in the funny-paper and he's been there ever since."

As I turned to leave Mr. Hunter, I felt a tap on my shoulder, and there was Amy Smith, as plump and dimpled as ever, pushing a perambulator and leading a couple of youngsters nearly as large as myself. Cupid has found her too fine a target for his arrows, and the wedding invitations had followed swiftly on the heels of those of graduation.

As Amy joggled the baby up and down and attempted to keep the two youngsters apart with the other, she told me of the fates of some of our old friends. "You remember Blanche Hendershot," she said, "well, when Miss Wimple went to the exposition in 1915. Blanche took her place and she's held it ever since. You should see her; she wears mitts on her hands and spectacles perched on the end of her nose, then she folds her hands demurely and beams over her spectacles as she talks!

"And Vera Schwartz—probably you [illegible] to Auburn, N. Y? Oh, no, no, not to the prison but to the theological seminary. She is a prominent minister now and a distinguished orator. Why she preached the sermon that converted the Emperor of China!

"Irene Conklin, poor Irene. You know she started out to become a librarian. Then a rich uncle died and left her a few millions, and it went to her head. She hired a bankrupt duchess as a chaperon, and started out to 'do' the world. They spent a summer in gay Paris, a season at Monte Carlo and a winter or so at Petrograd and Vienna until her head was so full of fun and frollick that you never would have recognized the staid librarian of former days. But finally, one day, her head became so light and frivolous that she picked up her yellow draperies and flapped them as though she would fly, when presto she changed into a big golden butterfly and flew off to her native habitat, the forest.

TO BE CONCLUDED

THE GLOOMY TRIP THROUGH THE PAPER

Editor's Note: The following editorial, condensed somewhat because of lack of space, is taken from The Wichita, Kas., Beacon. It is published to show to what lengths the critics of newspapers will go in demanding that certain advertising be omitted from the columns of a newspaer, and the absurdity of trying to spoil our lives by denying the right of anyone to enjoy whatever good things he can get out of life beyond the bare necesities.

"A subscriber from Vasser avenue sends a well written protest against some tobacco advertising which has been appearing in The Beacon.

She says that a paper whose columns generally are clean whose ambitions for a high standard are well known should print in its advertising columns nothing advising the use of that which leads to the formation of use less habits

Her argument seems plausible and we started through the pages of The Beacon to see how much advertising of this kind there is.......

The first page we turned held a large, breezy, pictorial advertisement on the delights, rewards and consolations of chewing gum. We paused to study the attractive typography of it. It was the last word in modern advertising As we gazed upon it, the desire for gum began to agitate our salivaries. Then we realized that the advertisement was bound to increase gum chewing. In fact that was why it was written.

Then we remembered that modern scientific conclusion declares gum chewing to be more deleterious than tobacco chewing Its gastronomic extravagancies attack entire families......

As we reach the conclusion that gum chewing should not not be encouraged in any virtuous newspaper, an attractive announcement of a shoe man confronts us, He is offering at a bargain shoes with French heels four inches high. Then we catch a vision of an age of gum chewing women mincing and tottering to their fall upon these unnatural stilts......Advertisements for "foot ease," bunion cures, relief from corns, flash across our vision, and we make mental note that a paper desiring to abolish the harmful should eliminate the French shoe advertising. You glance apprehensively through the teeming columns to see how many there are, but before you've proceeded far your eye falls upon the modern corset advertisment, and you recall all the things the dress reformer and the physician have said of "tight lacing" and you put corsets in the list of things that people do not need.

An so we pass wearily through the advertising columns we have in times past enjoyed, We read an advertisement for pins and shudder at the recollection that babies sometimes swallow them; we recall that it costs the wayward daughter of a New York millionaire $75 a week for "pin money," according to the reports of a recent scandal; we glimpse the picture of a nifty looking pistol for $2.98, placing homicide, suicide and foolicide within the easy reach of all; the pictured silk stockings, the temptation to wear which, Jane Addams tells us, has led poor girls into indiscretions, leer at us

We've become abnormally sensitive to the possibilities of evil in nearly all the things that are offered for sale, from the motocycle to face paint.

We lay down the paper realizing that no editor can print them all and be virtuous or refuse them and remain solvent. As a matter of fact, if our weary brains does not delude us, there are only about a dozen articles of commerce that should be advertised."

Indigestions and Constipation.

"About five years ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets after suffering from indigestion and constipation for years without finding anything to releave me. Chamberlain's Tablets helped me at once and by using them for several weeks I was cured of the complaint," writes Mrs. E. McMullen, Phelps, N. Y. For sale by all dealers. advt

For an Impaired Appetite.

To improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion try a few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets. Mr. J. H. Seitz, of Detroit, Mich., says: "They restored my appetite when impaired, relieved me of a bloated feeling and caused a pleasant and satisfactory movement of the bowels." For sale by all dealers. advt

PECULIAR LINIMENT

Many Michigan people have already heard of the discovery by that English Horse-Farrier of the peculiar liniment which made him famous back in the early 30's and 40's all along the Hudson River Valley. That it has served the American public well, is known by the fact that more and more of it has been used since 1846. Here is one of thousands of similar cases. Mr. C. Wilkie, of Syracuse, N. Y., says: "Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh was the only remedy I used when my arm was hurt. I recommend it for all cuts and bruises." adv

H. W Stevens and James Ingerso of the G. A. R. and Rev W. B. Hartzog, Jay Morse, James Smith and Martin Frayer of the S. of V. left Wednesday morning for the State Encampment at Kalamazoo. Dr. Hartzog is Chaplain of the Grand Encampment.

Members and friends of the Presbyterian church will remember that the order of a church service and Sunday school has been reversed. Sunday school will meet at 10 o'clock and morning worship will be at 11 o'clock. This change is only temporary. The sermon subject next Sunday morning "Sleepers."

Doughnuts

That will remain moist.

Every housewife who bakes her own bread knows that if a little potato is added to the sponge, the bread will not dry out as quickly. In this recipe potato is utilized to make doughnuts that will remain moist and fresh for several days.

K C will be found to have distinct advantages over any other Baking Powder for doughnuts. K C is a double acting baking powder with which a large batch of doughnuts may be mixed and fried a few at a time. The last will be as light and nice as the first.

K C Potato Doughnuts

By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, of Baking School fame.

3½ cups flour; 2 eggs; 1 cup sugar; 4 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; ½ teaspoonful salt; ¼ teaspoonful mace; 1 cup cold mashed potato; ½ cup milk, or more if needed.

K C 25 OUNCES FOR

Sift three times, the flour, salt, spice and baking Powder. Beat eggs with rotary beater, then still using rotary beater, gradually add sugar, then work in the mashed potato with a spoon and alternately add milk and flour mixture. Make a soft dough, roll into a sheet, cut into rounds, pinch a hole in the center with the finger and fry in deep fat.

Fat for frying should not be hot enough to brown the doughnut until it has risen. When the doughnut is dropped into the fat it sinks to the bottom. As soon as it comes up it should be turned and turned a number of times while cooking. This recipe is excellent as they do not take the fat in frying and will stay moist for days.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality
$1395
F.O.B. DETROIT

From Maine to California

Everywhere this summer you will meet Americans seeing America in the Paige "Six-46." Touring westward to the great Expositions on the coast—winding through the beautiful White Mountains—west, east, north and south Americans of sound judgment and good taste are already beginning those Family Outings which mean a Summer Holiday of health-giving pleasure and a winter of delightful memories.

And they are taking the Family in the big, powerful, beautiful Paige "Six-46"—everywhere—anywhere—because—

They are proud of it. The beauty and smartness of the Paige "Big Six" have made it a distinction to own and drive the Paige "Big Six." Also, the tremendous popularity of the "Six-46" has established it as the choice of discriminating Americans.

They are sure of it. They know that the excellence of its design, of its materials, of its construction means safety and uninterrupted service—on mountain road or desert trail.

They are sure of its comfort. They know that the seven-passenger roominess, the velvety Cantilever springs, the Gray & Davis lighting and starting systems, the tremendously powerful and flexible Paige-Continental motor, the Rayfield carburetor and all such features of ultra-refinement mean supreme motoring luxury under all conceivable motoring conditions.

And, last, they are sure of the Real Economy of the Paige "Six-46." Not only is the price—$1395—unprecedented and unequaled for such Quality—but the Paige Design means the minimum of maintenance and Operating Cost.

That—in a nutshell—is why you will meet the Paige "Six-46" everywhere this summer and always filled with and driven by Americans of sound judgment and good taste. It is again—the Story of Paige Quality—unprecedented Quality—the Quality which in five months has been so universally recognized by the American people, that within this period the Paige "Six-46" has won and easily holds the Leadership of all Sixes—regardless of price.

And that price for this epoch-making car, as you know, is $1395.

Let your dealer show you why the "Six-46" has won the American motordom in five short months.

FOOTE—STONE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Foote was the scene of a pretty wedding on Thursday evening, when their only daughter, Alice Marion was united in marriage to Mr. Francis B. Stone.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. E. Somers, pastor of the M. E. church. The house was prettily decorated with [illegible] blossoms.

As the clock struck six, Miss Mi[illegible]mon of Luther, Mich, cousin of the bride, took her seat at the piano, and played the wedding March The bridal party was preceded by four little girls in white, bearing ropes of white ribbon and clover blossoms with which they formed an aisle, down which the bridal party passed to their place under the arch of clover blossoms.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin and chiffon with veil of tulle, caught with spray of orange blossoms, worn by her mother at her wedding. She carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. She was unattended, but little Pauline Somers, acting as ring bearer, passed down the aisle before the bridal party, carrying a basket trimmed with clover blossoms tied with white ribbon in which rested the wedding ring.

After the ceremony and congratulations a dainty supper of three courses was served. The color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the table decorations.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful presents. The most prized being a new Ivers and Pond piano from her parents.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel R Foote of Kalamazoo, Mich., Miss Minnie Foote of Geneva, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Temple and daughter Miss Anna of Detroit, Mr and Mrs Frank Temple and Miss Vie, Dr. and Mrs. Briegel, Mr. W. G. Waldron all of Tecumseh, Mr. John McComb, Miss McComb, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hause, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shuler of Clinton, Mrs. Alice Heckert of Toledo, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Brillhart, Mrs. George Brillhart of Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Wilson Adrian.

The catering was done by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Linn. After a short honeymoon, they will be at their home near Tecumseh.

WEDNESDAY THE BIG DAY

Arrangements About Complete for Tecumseh Big Bargain Day.

The committees in charge of the arrangements for Bargain Day are hard at work and from present indications next Wednesday will be a big day for Tecumseh.

Every Wednesday during the Summer will be a Bargain Day. The merchants will have some one article to offer at a bargain and with some fifty merchants offering bargains it will pay every one to make a trip to Tecumseh to take advantage of these special offers.

Next Wednesday June 23 will be the first big day. In the afternoon their will be Motor cycle races starting and finishing on Main St. Eight entrees have already been secured and the committees state that they will have at least 25. Prizes have been offered and will be on exhibit in Gaston & Son's window, today.

The committee in charge of the band state that they will have a band ready for Wednesday night. A band stand will be erected on the four corners and a free concert will be given from 7 to 9 o'clock. Don't miss it.

Look for the big ad in next Tuesdays issue of the Herald. It will tell you about the bargains to be offered by our Tecumseh merchants, also an announcement of the days doings.

All roads will lead to Tecumseh on Wednesday June 23rd.

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and Potawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, says: "The first system of kidney complaint is a sharp shooting pain across the small of my back, which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. Someone advised me give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did, procuring my supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, the pains and aches left and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me. In fact, I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so. My former endorsement holds good."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills the same that Mrs Stevenson had. Foster-Milburn Co Props, Buffalo, N. Y. adv

HAMILTON LEADS AT DARDANELLES

In Command of Allied Forces Attacking the Straits.

ASSISTED BY GEN. D'AMADE

Both British and French Generals Have Made Fine Records In the Small Colonial Wars Waged by Their Countries — Hamilton Was Born Near Scene of Present Operations.

London.—General Sir Ian Standish Monteith Hamilton, in supreme command of the British-French army now landed on the Gallipoli peninsula to co-operate with the British-French fleet for the conquest of the Dardanelles and Constantinople, is a poet-soldier, with the tough, wiry frame of the Scotch and the Scotsman's long, narrow head, strong nose and bold chin and with the big ears of the generous Irishman and the Irishman's ingratiating smile. The eyes are shrewd and calculating, as becomes a canny Scot, but no less emotional and full of fun—the endowment of a son of Erin.

His military career is Lord Roberts' best gift to the nation, for Hamilton is the product of the training and spirit of Field Marshal "Little Bobs." Kitchener has had the good sense to show his appreciation of Lord Roberts' handiwork and to give Hamilton the chance to prove his right to a place near the top rung of the ladder. He stands there the embodiment of the best tradition and practice of the British officer—free from pretension, arrogance and "side"—a brave soldier and charming gentleman.

General D'Amade, the French commander, at the beginning reported to be chief of the land forces at the Dardanelles, can serve under General Ian Hamilton in a frank division of authority which is likely to proceed without friction. General D'Amade is said to have resented upon more than one occasion the tone of superiority and condescension assumed toward him by Field Marshal Sir John French during the campaign in France and Flanders. General Hamilton has tact and magnanimity. His intimate association with Lord Kitchener as chief of staff in South Africa began and ended without a row—testimony to Hamilton's ability to get along with the most exacting and despotic of generals, far different from the amiable, kindly General D'Amade.

GENERAL SIR IAN HAMILTON.

Hamilton came under the notice of Roberts in the Boer war of 1880, where he went with the Gordon Highlanders, and where, at the British defeat at Majuba Hill, he discovered that there wasn't a British soldier in a hundred who knew how to handle his musket, and not one in a thousand who appreciated the necessity of learning how.

Wounded at Majuba Hill and taken to the hospital, Hamilton was given up for dead. He revived when Sir Evelyn Wood dashed up, covered with mud from a long ride, to tell him that the dispatches home were going to mention his bravery. It was the first of a series of honor records which now have become so numerous that they would fill a book, while his medals and clasps, if he wore them all at the same time, would weigh him down like a coat of mail. From South Africa Hamilton went with Lord Roberts as A. D. C. to India—the "musketry maniac" the young officer was called. But he won over his chief to his own way of thinking, and the revolutionary method in training which Roberts instituted regarding musket and bayonet practice came as the result. The brilliant bayonet charges of the British in this war would have been impossible in 1880 at Majuba Hill.

Serving under Sir Evelyn Wood in the Burma expedition of 1884, Hamilton displayed such initiative that he was offered a high command in India with a salary of $15,000 a year. The School of Musketry at Hythe invited him at the same time to become its head at a salary of $4,000. He accepted the latter, and the soldiers he trained at Hythe were conspicuous for their efficiency in the last Boer war

To Remove Discolorations.

What neat housekeeper is not annoyed when she sees on the spotless woodwork of her door or windows those long, dark scratches which reveal that some one has tried to light a match by drawing it across the paint? Here is a remedy for the marks which quite defy soap and water. Cut a sour orange or lemon in half, apply the cut half to the marks, rubbing for a moment quite hard; then wash off with a clean rag, dipping first in water to moisten it, and then in whiting. Rub well with this rag, dry thoroughly, and nine times out of ten times the ugly marks will be conquered.

All finger marks on painted walls, etc., should be rubbed off with a little damp whiting in the same way and never washed with soapsuds, which destroys the paint.

WHAT IS JAPAN IN CHINA, NEW

MEANING TO DO WORLD PROBLEM

Ages Old Ambition of Islanders to Rule All Asia May Now Be Behind Sudden Move For Coercion.

Despite Denials, the Japanese Demands Are Thought to Endanger Principle of "Open Door."

WHAT does Japan intend to do with China? Everywhere this question is being asked today—even in the war trenches in Europe.

In the midst of one vast appalling conflict, in which practically all the European nations are fighting for their lives, suddenly have sprung up possibilities that may mean almost as much for the future of the world. At the moment none can tell whither or to what the situation may lead.

America is interested in this problem even more than in the war in Europe. Does Japan, either by arms or by the greatest diplomatic stroke accomplished in this age, purpose to conquer China or so bring her under Japanese influence and control that she is virtually conquered? Whatever the intention, the interests of the United States may be vitally concerned.

Japan has declared in the most solemn manner through the mouths of her statesmen that she is not going to close the "open door" in China and is not going to meddle with, let alone destroy the territorial integrity of the Chinese empire.

Kato Gives Assurances.

Baron Kato, Japanese minister of foreign affairs, said so in his historic speech in the diet Dec. 9 last. Count Okuma, the premier, said the same thing Feb. 27 this year.

TYPE OF CHINESE SOLDIER.

"As premier of Japan," he said, "I have stated and now I again state to the people of America and of the world that Japan has no ulterior motive, no desire, to secure more territory, no thought of depriving China or other people of anything which they now possess. My government and my people have given their word and their pledge, which will be as honestly kept as Japan always keeps promises."

Emphatic assurances to this effect have been given to Washington and London.

By its preamble the Anglo-Japanese treaty of July 13, 1911, declares one of the objects of the alliance between Great Britain and Japan to be "the preservation of the common interests of all the powers in China by insuring the independence and the integrity of the Chinese empire and the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in China."

In the Root-Takahira agreement Japan makes these same pledges to the United States.

But there are now some who fear that the acts of Japan toward China do not altogether tally either with the spoken explanations of her statesmen or her treaty pledges. It is felt that she is taking advantage of the fact that great, helpless, peace loving China lies at her mercy because all the powers in Europe are too tied up in defending themselves to think of defending her.

Japan Uses Diplomacy.

Soon after the Japanese had captured Kiauchau from the Germans Tokyo announced that negotiations had been begun at Peking "to determine the future status of Japanese relations with China and to decide certain questions concerning the future development of the Chinese republic." Japan notified the foreign legations, but mentioned only eleven of her twenty-one demands.

It had been understood from the wording of the Japanese ultimatum to Germany that Japan would restore Kiauchau to China. It was then understood that the Japanese negotiations with Peking were merely preliminary to the restoration to China of that section of Shantung province which had been held by the Germans.

But China protested that the demands made upon her infringed upon her sovereignty and conflicted with treaties existing between her and other powers. When eventually China succeeded in getting the whole text of the Japanese demands published in full it was seen that the situation was fraught with the utmost gravity despite their opening statement that they were "designed to preserve peace in the far east and to strengthen the friendly relations of the two countries."

To understand the situation one must go back to the days of the peace conference at Portsmouth, N. H., which ended the Russo-Japanese war ten years ago. All unknown to President Roosevelt Japan then laid the foundations for the great diplomatic stroke which, it is believed, she had already planned to play when Europe would be involved in the great war that Komura already foresaw would come.

Secret Pact at Portsmouth.

At Portsmouth Japan and Russia came to a secret agreement for the recognition and joint enjoyment of each other's "special rights" in China. This was Komura's work. The result was Japan's gradual expansion in Manchuria and eastern Mongolia. Not until 1908 did the secret arrangement become known to Washington. Secretary Root fought against it in vain, and the following year Secretary Knox also made heroic but futile efforts against it.

The greater part of the demands now made upon China by Japan merely further increase the Japanese special interests in Manchuria and east Mongolia and extend them to Shantung.

As to Shantung, China is asked to transfer to Japan all the rights Germany had in that province, not to make any more leases there to other countries, to open the principal cities to trade and to let Japan construct a railroad.

As to Manchuria and Mongolia China is asked to extend the lease of Port Arthur and its railroads to ninety-nine years, to let Japanese citizens trade, rent and own land and work mines and factories in those provinces. China is also to agree to obtain the consent of Japan before letting anybody except the Japanese build railroads in, make loans on, or give advice as to those provinces. She is also to give Japan, but no other foreigners, joint share in the proposed Hanyehping mine and iron foundry company.

Further, China is to consent not to alienate or lease to any other country than Japan any port, harbor or island on the Chinese coast.

To all these demands Yuan Shi Kai, president of the Chinese republic, has practically consented; but he has rejected those in the already famous "Article V," and when its nature became known in Peking only the great influence of Yuan Shi Kai held the people in check from demonstrations demanding war.

Demands In Article 5.

A translation of Article V. follows:

1.—The Chinese central government shall employ influential Japanese as advisers in political, financial and military affairs.

2.—Japanese hospitals, churches and schools in the interior of China shall be granted the right of owning land.

3.—Inasmuch as the Japanese government and the Chinese government have had many cases of dispute between Japanese and Chinese police to settle, cases which caused no little misunderstanding, it is for this reason necessary that the police departments of important places (in China) shall be jointly administered by Japanese and Chinese or that the police departments of these places shall employ numerous Japanese, so that they may at the same time help to plan for the improvement of the Chinese police service.

4.—China shall purchase from Japan a fixed amount of munitions of war (say 50 per cent or more of what is needed by the Chinese government) or that there shall be established in China a Chino-Japanese jointly worked arsenal. Japanese technical experts are to be employed and Japanese material to be purchased.

5.—China agrees to grant to Japan the right of constructing a railway connecting Wuchang with Kiukiang and Nanchang, another line between Nanchang and Hangchou, and another between Nanchang and Chaochou.

6.—If China needs foreign capital to work mines, build railways and construct harbor works (including dockyard) in the province of Fukien, Japan shall be first consulted.

7.—China agrees that Japanese subjects shall have the right to propagate Buddhism in China.

As to section 5 China said she could not because she had already given England the right to build the railroad. As to the Fukien works, referred to in section 6, she was equally tied up, having given a $20,000,000 contract to Americans.

From the first the Chinese declared that they had no desire for war, but might be forced into it. To guard the winter palace at Peking, where Yuan Shih Kai lives, 100,000 troops were massed, but they were given only enough ammunition for a brief resistance and were intended simply, it was said, to prevent such a coup as that by which the Japanese seized King Li of Korea.

"If it be said that Japan desires to destroy China as an independent nation," says Liang Ch'i-ch'iao, the Chinese minister of justice, "I do not believe she would attempt to commit such a colossal blunder. There is no parallel between China and Korea.

"Should Japan seek to conquer China by force she might succeed in holding China in temporary chancery on account of our temporary inferiority in arms. But a small thing like a wasp carries a sting in its tail, and is there nothing in an empire? To rule a people of alien race is not so easily done as said.

"She must first destroy our national essentials and the national spirit handed down to us these thousands of years and then impart to us those belonging to herself. But is this possible? Force of arms may keep us in subjection for a short period, but there is no need to worry. Any nation that would try to destroy us would witness its own destruction after a few decades."

Japan has in her army a war strength of 1,400,000 men, with a total of 7,021,780 available, all trained and among the best and most daring fighters the world has ever seen. Her war organization is at least equal to that of Germany. Some think it even superior. Her navy stands fourth on the list of the world's most powerful navies.

Vast Nation Has No Remedy.

China has a small peace army, and her war strength is estimated at 680,000 men. But only a portion of the army is armed or well trained, and as compared with Japan she might almost be said to have no army, just as she has practically no navy. But in available and eventual war strength which the giant of peace could put in the field, if forced to it and given time, China has 41,420,000 able men.

In her navy Japan has nine new battleships, built since the war with Russia; thirteen older battleships, five battleship cruisers and thirty other cruisers. Against that immense array of force China has but seven second class and one third class cruisers. In addition, Japan has five gunboats, sixty destroyers, thirty-seven torpedo boats and fifteen submarines. Against these China has two gunboats and ten torpedo boats. Japan has an active naval list of 47,289 officers and men, with 114,000 men in the reserve. China's naval list is an unknown quantity and in any case could take no part in war with Japan.

Count Okuma in his message to the American people on April 8 said:

"When the negotiations are disclosed it will be found that Japan has adhered strictly to the principle of equal opportunity."

But the Japanese premier was not referring to the relative strengths of China and Japan in the way of trained and armed fighting men.

JAPANESE SOLDIERS IN PEKING.

For centuries Japan's ambition has been held to be to reign supreme in the far east. "Asia for the Asiatics" is the slogan of the most powerful Japanese secret societies.

This ambition is as old as the time of the Empress Jingo, who nearly 2,000 years ago attempted to establish the supremacy of Japan. Her brilliant victories in Korea are still the delight of the Japanese schoolboy. Though the empress did not succeed in retaining her hold on the peninsula, the policy was never abandoned. In the sixteenth century it was renewed with great vigor, when Hideyoshi, the Napoleon of Japan, sent a vast army to Korea.

Through three centuries this ambition lay dormant, but now it is an obsession with a large part of the island people. Japan does not regard her policy as in any way a menace to other nations. It is the result of her natural expansion and she believes it essential to the security of her dominions from western aggression.

China of Old Is Gone.

But the China of today is hardly the China that Japan defeated so easily in 1895. Within less than a score of years China has entered upon a course of progress without an equal in the history of the world. Japan's magnificent record of the past fifty years included. Customs stereotyped by thousands of years of observance have been abandoned.

The revenues have increased beyond the most sanguine expectations. Several high officials have been convicted of graft and have been executed. To the surprise of the world in 1914, notwithstanding the diminished revenues due to the European war and without foreign aid, China paid all her obligations for foreign loans and indemnities and besides raised a domestic loan of $24,000,000, a result which would have been an impossibility in any other period of Chinese history.

It may be that, as friends of the Japanese claim, Japan merely wishes to do for China what under the guidance of Henry W. Denison, their American adviser, Japan did for herself. But Denison was not forced on Japan.

A LOMBARD TOWER.

New and Novel Departure In American Architecture.

A new departure in American architecture has just been completed at the University museum in Philadelphia. It is an addition to the general structure in the shape of a lofty tower 100 feet in diameter, which, like the rest of the building, is inspired by the Lombard architecture of the fourteenth century. This tower is one of the few structures ever erected without regard to cost. The word to the architects and builders was to spare no expense to make of the tower itself all that art and money could achieve, for it is intended to be in and of itself one of the chief exhibits of the museum.

NEW TOWER OF UNIVERSITY MUSEUM, PHILADELPHIA.

The tower contains in its lower story a perfectly circular auditorium 100 feet in diameter, with a flattened dome all lined with tile of a peculiar construction to get the best acoustic properties. It is believed to be the finest auditorium in America. The upper story of the tower is 100 feet in diameter, 100 feet high, with a dome, and all lined with light gray tiling. It is lighted entirely from the top and is an amazing piece of architecture because of its beautiful tone and its admirable proportions. The walls are six feet thick. The room is for exhibition purposes. With the completion of this addition the museum authorities are preparing to spend a million dollars more in extending the galleries to accommodate the rapidly accumulating specimens of archaeology and ethnology from all over the world.

CONCLUDED FROM LAST ISSUE

"And the two Harrington girls, Amy shook her head sorrowfully, they have established an Oriental palace in the suburbs, where they will tell your future for a few hundred dollars. Ruby sits cross legged among silken cushions, with Ethiopian attendants to wave palms [illegible]. She is dressed in the silken turban and golden embroidered vest and trousers of an Eastern lord, and about her are many wives from her harem. Elsie is one of these and she whispers suggestions when Ruby's store of alluring prophecies runs low. They predicted a new school building for some ten years ago but it hasn't appeared as yet."

Just then the baby came to the decision that he wasn't receiving his due amount of attention so he hastened to announce his presence by a series of lusty yells. So I made my adieus and started back toward the waiting car. A boy went by yelling "extra," so I bought a paper and looked over the news of the day. On the front page, this startling information confronted me: "Tragic Death of Noted Scientist o' the Day. Miss Agnes McIntyre, noted far and wide for her inventions and who had nearly solved the unanswered questions of perpetual motion and the fourth dimension, expired today. She had pondered so long on that ponderous question—why is a cow—that her mental equilibrium was threatened and her mind tugged with great violence at the leash which held spirit and body together. At last the strain was to great, the chains broke and her spirit scampered off to the Elysian fields.

On the next page this item attracted my attention: "Mr Leon McLachlin, the famous violinist, has secured a position as chief fiddler to Miss Lillian Kennedy."

As I turned the pages farther I noticed a full page colored ad. There was something hauntingly familiar about the young lady depicted there, but I could not place her. She was dressed in the latest "Made in America" gown and her hair was tortured in the most fashionable coiffure but the most noticeable thing about her was her wonderful peaches and cream complexion. Whom had I ever known with such a perfect complexion? As I glanced at the ad below, my question was answered: Use La Modes marvelous mystic cream. It banishes freckles, pimples, wrinkles and cares! Miss Ellen Snedicor the well known Christy model, testifies that it has preserved her complexion and given her eternal youth."

A few pages farther, I read in large type: "Odd experience of Margaret McWilliams.

Not long ago, Miss Margaret McWilliams the noted pianist, attended Ringling Brother's Circus. During the performance a storm arose and the tent was blown down. In the ensuing excitement, the manager snatched up Margaret, thinking her the tentpole; and, driving her feet into the ground erected the tent again above her. The error was later discovered. Miss Margaret has had a "howling" success as a feminine atlas for her pretty face and winning smile have proven a unique drawing card."

I folded up my newspaper then and again started back to the car. I had received so many surprises that I only gasped when I saw Russell McNeil approaching under the espionage of a very determined looking young lady. I shook hands with him and he seemed delighted to see me. He almost wept when I mentioned the good old times of our high school days. "But why, "I began, glancing at his custodian. But he looked at me warningly then turned to his companion and said "Wifie dear, May I talk to the lady a moment? I'll give you two whole kisses and a hug for it sweetheart!" She looked unwillingly and started to march him on, but one of the promised kisses delivered on the spot consoled her, so she stepped aside a few paces. "You see," began Russell in a low guarded tone, "I was having such a good time, had fallen in love so often and gotten out of it safely, that I began to get reckless and make love to all the girls in the whole wide world. But alas, one day I was arrested for lady killing and sentenced to married life for the rest of my days." The tears rolled down his cheeks unheeded, as wifie dragged him away, and I myself could scarcely restrain a sympathetic sob for the sad fate of the debonair Russel of ye olden times.

But now my mind was becoming wearied and dazed these many astonishing revelations, so I hastened back to my car, and we defied John Smith and worried the guardian angels in our hasty return to the land of 1915.

SOMETHING ABOUT

Tecumseh Business Houses Who are Asking for Your Trade

THE WEBSTER-ANDERSON CO.

This dry goods business now run by the corporation known as The Webster Anderson Co was first started by D. C. Larned. Webster and Henry Anderson in 1865—just fifty years ago when your mother's best dress was of calico and 50c per yard at that. They occupied the west store of the building where the present firm are now located.

Mr. Larned retired in the course of two or three years and the firm name became W. & H. E Anderson. Various partners were added at different times but the name of Anderson has controlled the enterprise without interruption.

The present stock company was incorporated in 1909 with J. D. Shull, president; F S Anderson, general manager; E H. Anderson, secretary and treasurer.

They occupy both floors in the two stores with a fine assortment of goods. In the basement of the west store the company have placed a bargain department with china, enamel and glassware. On the first floor is a general dry goods stock with the floor above for carpet and rug room.

The east store is the coat and ready-to wear department and a beautiful millinery room in the rear. These rooms are fitted with handsome green rugs and with the comfortable reed furniture makes a cozy apartment. Upstairs in the east store is a room devoted to the Victrola business which is increasing rapidly. Also up here are delightful rest and toilet rooms which are certainly highly appreciated by tired mothers.

Raynor and Faron are keeping up the reputation of the old institution for fair dealing which extends over the large tributary territory from which its large trade is derived. They are two of the most popular young men of the town and, following in the footsteps of their fathers. Webster and Seaton W. Anderson respectively, in being at the head of different public enterprises and boosting anything which is for the good of "the biggest little town on earth."

FRED ROSACRANS & SONS

Among the first families to come to Tecumseh were those of Wm. Anderson and Asa Rosacrans. Of their descendants come Fred Rosacrans, senior partner of Fred Rosacrans & Sons, dry goods merchants, located on the corner of Chicago and Evans streets.

Some 45 years ago Mr. Rosacrans, then a mere boy, began his business career as a clerk for Moses Wright & Son, druggists, and then came 40 years of close attention to business or as he says "40 years without losing a single day's pay." After a few years in the drug store, he went to work for the firm of W. & H E Anderson, dry goods merchants, in which firm he became a partner in 15 years.

For five years he held the position of postmaster. Then it was possible to have other business as well so he procured competent help for the office and did his work at the store as usual dropping in at the postoffice three or four times a day. To an ordinary man this strain would have been impossible but to our friend with his snap and get there ness it was pleasure.

In 1891 he, Webster and John Anderson organized as Anderson & Rosacrans which firm continued until 1910 when with his two sons, Leon and Eugene started the present business with an entirely new stock. The two young men are keen and genial and make fine partners for their father, all pulling together to make a satisfactory and ever increasing business.

They have 3000 square ft of floor space, the main store being filled with the general dry goods stock, ready-to-wear goods, coats and suits, with an ell at the rear filled with hosiery and underwear. Above is a display room with a splendid stock of carpets, room rugs, draperies and linoleums.

At "the Make Yourself at Home Store" you will get the glad hand whether you buy or not and the members of the firm and a courteous group of clerks are ready to show you their line of goods and wait upon you most graciously.

TRYING DAYS FOR STUDENTS

School Is Out, But They Can't Go—Mumps.

ADRIAN, MICH. — The college year at Adrian is over, but five unfortunate under-graduates are still in their rooms in the young men's dormitory. They have the mumps. The total number of suffering ones at Adrian college, up to date, is 15, three co-eds having been afflicted during the last three weeks.

The five unfortunates are under the care of the college matron, who is doing her best to reduce swollen cheeks to normal and get the victims home for their summer vacations.

Such Cases Are Known.

"I can say this much for Cupid," remarked the sentimental man. "He doesn't use dumdum bullets."

"Perhaps not," replied the confirmed cynic, "but a dumdum bullet brings a speedy death, while a person who is struck by one of Cupid's darts is apt to linger on for years."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A DIVERTED RIVER.

Arabistan lies at the head of the Persian gulf, its western boundary being the Shatel-Arab, the great river formed by the combined waters of the Tigris and Euphrates, the right bank of which is in Persian territory, while the left is in Turkish Arabia. Forty miles above where it flows into the Persian gulf the Shatel-Arab is joined by the Karun, and the town of Mohammerah stands at the junction of the two rivers, the former a clear green stream, the latter thick and red.

In ancient times the Karun flowed into the gulf and part of the river still runs along the old channel, but the main stream has been diverted, three miles above Mohammerah, into an artificial channel known geographically as the Haffar canal.

It is impossible even to make a guess at the date of this wonderful work, not even a tradition remaining of the ruler whose farsightedness realized the enormous advantage of joining up the two water ways. Alexander the Great has been suggested, but apparently for no other reason than that he is a convenient and likely person to credit with any ambitious enterprise, and that one of his many Alexandrias was built on the site of the present Mohammerah.—Wide World Magazine.

Law and the Queen.

The quaintness of many provisions of British law is curiously illustrated in the status of the queen of England. So far as her majesty's private business is concerned, she is not regarded by the laws and customs of England as a married woman at all. She is the only woman in Great Britain who does not come within the scope of the married woman's property act. The idea in all this is that affairs of state consume all the time of the king, and therefore no responsibility for the queen's private business rests upon him. If the queen contracted debts in her husband's name he would not be responsible for them, as any other husband in the United Kingdom would. The king cannot be sued for debt, but the queen can be. Should the king die some authorities hold that the queen could not marry again, in case she wished to, without the license of the king's successor.—New York Tribune.

An Old Sailing Vessel.

Modern steamships have a very brief life as compared with the old sailing vessels. The Princess Mary, which conveyed King William III. to England from Holland in 1688 and was then over seventy years old, lasted until 1827. This vessel was retained as a royal yacht until the reign of George I., by whose orders she was sold. As the Betsy Cairns she sailed to the West Indies and back for over fifty years and then after another change of ownership was employed as a collier until Feb. 17, 1827, when she struck a rock and was totally wrecked.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

ARLO K HIGLEY

Arlo Kenneth son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Higley of Hudson passed away at the home on South Church St. Wednesday afternoon June 9, 1915. A sickness of a year ago left Arlo somewhat reduced in strength, but he was able to attend school most of the time. He recently suffered a severe attack of tonsilitis which was treated carefully and he seemed on the way to recovery when suddenly death came, due doubtless to heart failure.

He was only 8 years of age. He was a bright attractive boy much beloved by parents friends and playmates. The funeral was private and was held Friday afternoon. Dr. Hyslop conducted it and spoke feelingly of his young friend. Arlo was looking forward to childrens day with delight and had already prepared his recitation. However in the mystery of providence, Arlo has been added to the number of those young in years who have gone on to the larger home and sweet life. He leaves the hearts of fond parent stricken and sore.

"Away" I cannot say and I will not say, that he is dead. He is just gone away!
With a cherry smile and a way of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming, how very fair
It need must be, since he linger there.
Think of him still as the same. I say
He is not dead he is just, away.

Arlo was the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. John ONeal former residents of Tecumseh now livingin Franklin. They attended the funeral in Hudson, Friday June 11th.

U. OF M. SAVANT WOUNDED

Rene Talamon Writes Facetiously Regarding His Injuries.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 19.—A post card was received here from Professor Rene Talamon of the French department of the University of Michigan, on leave and serving in the French army. Professor Talamon writes: "The Germans are the people who suggested this nice little vacation by sending me the other day a bullet for my left hand, a bit of shell for my right foot, and a few splinters from a hand grenade for my head. All this ought to keep me here in this hospital for several weeks. I received the whole bouquet in a few seconds on Sunday, May 30, when I unfortunately took the notion of charging a German trench at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but we took the trench."

Professor Talamon was married to a niece of Congressman Underwood last June and was drafted into the French army, in whose reserves he was lieutenant, while on his honeymoon in Paris.

Grand Rapids Husband Punishes Alleged Unfaithfulness.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 19.—Building a bonfire of the love letters which another man is alleged to have written to his wife, Frank Belo, aged twenty-five years, a boiler maker, held her hands in the flames until they were badly burned.

Belo alleges that he told his wife he was going to work, but instead of doing so he returned home. He says he found his wife and Joseph Kelly, twenty-four, another boiler maker, in a compromising situation.

He then, according to the story he told the police, collected the letters which Kelly had written his wife and started the fire, over which he held Mrs. Belo's hands.

INDICTED IN LUSITANIA CASE

Man Who Swore He Saw Guns Aboard Liner Is Charged With Perjury.

New York, June 19.—Gustav Stahl, the German reservist, who swore in an affidavit submitted to the state department by the German embassy that he saw guns aboard the Lusitania, was indicted for perjury by a federal grand jury. The alleged perjury was committed, it is said, not when he made the affidavit, but in testimony to the same effect before the grand jury in its inquiry against Paul Koenig, head of the secret service department of the Hamburg-American line, and others, to determine whether they should be indicted for conspiracy against the United States. It is alleged that Koenig was instrumental in procuring the Stahl affidavits.

Stahl is now in the Tombs in default of $10,000 bail.

Statement From John F. Hicks.

JOHN F. HICKS

Mr. Hicks has been a life long resident of Tecumseh. Has been in the lightning rod business for the past 62 years and his best advertisment is thousands of satisfied customers.

We are pleased to print the following article which appeared in the Dundee Reporter under date of June 4th.

Tecumseh, June 2, 1915.

To the Editor,
Dundee Reporter,
Dundee, Michigan.

Dear Sir:

I noticed in your issue of May 28th a letter headed, "The Truth about Lightning Rods" and knowing that the writer has not told all the truths on the subject, I would like to tell your readers through the columns of your paper, the balance of the truth, I feel they should know.

If the writer of this letter is the gentleman I think he is, I had the pleasure of meeting him at the hotel in Dundee about two weeks ago. He informed me at that time that he had been in the lightning rod business for over 30 years and that now he is employed by the Bulldog Lightning Rod Co., of Toledo as an expert salesman to go out among their agents and teach them how to sell rods.

Now the first great truth he would impress upon the minds of your readers, is that the strictly scientific and complete system of rodding a building is to use two or more rods to the ground. He says that a house or barn rodded this way with a good copper cable conductor is absolutely protected for years to come. He says that a pretty good illustration of this fact is in the buildings owned by Mr. Gilday, near Erie in Monroe County, which were rodded 7 and 8 years ago with rods known as the galvanized copper covered with one rod to the ground; that before those rods were on those buildings six months, the barn was struck and the corner post splintered. I would like to add right here that I did that work myself, and that when notified I went to see Mr Gilday and put a new point in the place of the one that was melted, free of cost, just as I have always guaranteed to do. Mr. Gilday said that he was satisfied that his barn would have burned to the ground if it had not been for the rod, I put up for him; and afterwards he had us rod another large barn for him upon another farm.

Now for another truthful illustration. On the 17th of July, 1914, the barns of Wm. Stewlow, near Blissfield were rodded with a copper cable rod in circuit form, seven points and four rods to the ground. Those rods had not been on the building 30 days when the barns were struck by lightning and burned to the ground.

Which of the two rods afforded the best protection? The rods on the Gilday barn with four rods to the ground?

The next question as to which is the best rod sold in this country; echo answers the rod on the Gilday barn.

He also says that one thing he does know is, that plenty of the old galvanized rods are taken off, but he does not say that copper cable is being put up on those buildings in place of them. Another fact that we would like to impress upon the minds of your readers is that we are taking off the copper cable in many cases ARE replacing it with celebrated star galvanized rod, which we have used for 62 years. In confirmation of this we would ask everyone to read the following statements from farmers like Mr. Thomas Murphy, Director of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Lenawee County, Mr. Cass Baker, President of the same, and Mr. Benj. Ball, who have all had us replace the copper rod on their buildings with the galvanized rod, and their reasons for doing so.

He states that he is selling a copper cable for 15c. per foot with all points, ornamentation, etc. The fact is that according to their catalogues put out by the manufacturers of copper cable rod, they make six different styles and sizes. Now at this price an expert salesman with strict economy and cheap help, using the cheapest grade of copper cable and putting up 1000 feet a week, would net a clear profit of $35.00; if he should use the best grade of copper cable and should put up 1000 feet, they would find themselves in debt about $12.63. He is however, very generous in giving the farmer a privilege, as he says that if you can buy any lightning rod which you think is better and cheaper, it is up to you.

In closing this letter, I will make the following statement without fear of tradition; there have been more buildings burned by lightning with the copper cable in circuit from (that is two or more ground rods) upon them in the last ten years within the radius of 100 miles from Tecumseh, than has been burned with any other make with one grounding on them during the past 62 years.

Yours very truly,
JOHN F. HICKS, President,
The Hicks Lightning Rod Co. Tecumseh, Mich.

Read a Few Testmonials.

Ionia, Mich., May 26, 1915.

Yours of the 25th inst. at hand and contents noted.

I had two barns burned; they stood in an Ashwood one 20x32, the other 20x50, were rodded with Dodd and Struthers copper cable, were grounded in three places and three points on each barn, and one on the silo, the loss was about $2000.00. This barn was struck just seven years ago the day your letter was written.

Yours truly,
(Signed) E. A. COWAN,

Dundee, Mich., May 19, 1915.

The Hicks Lightning Rod Co. of Tecumseh, Mich., have this day placed lightning rods on all my buildings, on my home farm; and I am very much pleased with work and with the rod that they use.

Mr. Hicks, the President of the company has been engaged in this business for the past sixty-two years. I have known him personally for over forty years, and I have always heard of him as the best posted lightning rod man in the country and as a man who is reliable in every respect, and also that the rod he has always used is considered to be the largest and best rod made. I also consider their [illegible] as they guarantee to keep all rods put up by them in repair at their own expense and to replace the rods after any building has been rebuilt or remodeled.

These are some of the reasons why I have had Mr. Hicks do the work on my buildings, and I confidently believe that if all the farm buildings that are insured in our Monroe & Wayne Insurance Company were rodded by the Hicks' Lightning Rod Company of Tecumseh, it would save our Company thousands of dollars every year. I gladly recommend them and their work to the patrons of our Company.

I have been a director of this company for the past 18 years, and County adjuster for the past 5 years.

Yours truly,
ELMER KELLIS,
Director of Dundee.

Office of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Lenawee County, Michigan.

Adrian, Mich., Sept. 25, 1914.

William and Amelia Stewlow of Blissfield Township lost their barns by lightning August 7, 1914. These buildings were rodded July 17, 1914 with copper cable rod. They were insured for $960 and contents therein was insured for $1,100.00. We paid them [illegible] for loss of buildings and to granary and $731.75 for contents there in September 2nd, 1914.

(Signed) R. M. BOYD, Secretary of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Lenawee County, Michigan.

Adrian, Mich., June 1, 1914.

This is to certify that J. F. Hicks, now President of the Hicks Lightning Rod Co. placed rods on the horse barns belonging to my mother, some thirty-five (35) years ago, and to-day he has installed a system of their celebrated galvanized rods on the balance of my buildings consisting of two barns, shed, granary and residence.

I had on my residence a copper cable rod, but not feeling it to be a sure protection, had them removeit and replace it with their rod, and the work has all been done to my entire satisfaction. I consider their rod to be the largest and best I have ever seen, and I gladly recommend them to any one wishing rods put up, to be reliable and trustworthy in every respect.

Signed FRANK A. TREAT.

Dundee, Michigan.
May 21, 1915.

Several years ago the Hicks Lightning Rod Co., of Tecumseh, Michigan, placed rods on my farm where I now live the buildings were rodded with the copper cable rod. Today I have had the copper cable rod taken off my barn and had the Hicks Lightning Rod Company place their own rods thereon. The work has been done to my entire satisfaction and I feel more secured with this than I did with the cable rod.

I gladly recommend them and their rod as they have always done just as they agreed to do with me.

Yours truly
BENJ. BALL.

Office of Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Lenawee County, Michigan.

Adrian, Mich., June 1, 1915, Mr. John F. Hicks.

Dear sir:

I fully concur with the statement made by Thomas Murphy, one of the directors of our company, in his statement concerning the cable rod, as I have had cable rods removed from my barns and Hicks rods placed thereon for the same reason given by Mr. Murphy.

I will further state that this company has not been called upon to pay for any loss from fire caused by lightning that the Hicks Lightning Rod Company has placed their rods on.

Tecumseh, Mich., May 29, 1915.

Some thirty years ago I had Mr. Hicks rod all my farm buildings on the Ridge Road in Macon, and when I bought the Hall farm near Tecumseh he rodded all my buildings there, and the work was always done to my satisfaction. Last week, I had him rod my large new house on the farm just east of the Ridge Road. When I built my large barn on that farm I had it rodded with the copper cable rod as I could get it for considerably less money than Hicks charged for his rod, but I never felt quite secure with this small cable particularly when there was a heavy thunderstorm. After the Wm. Stewlow barn near Blissfield, which was rodded on July 17, 1914, with seven points and four groundings of the copper cable rod was struck by lightning and burned on the evening of August 7th, 1914, I felt more nervous with my barn than I ever had before. I have this day made arrangements with Mr. Hicks, President of the Hicks Lightning Rod Co., to have the copper cable taken off this barn and to have it replaced with their rod. Knowing that our company has never been called upon to pay for the loss of a building that was burned by lightning with their rod, on it, and that Mr Hicks has been in business for the past sixty two years in this County, I feel now that I am secure from any damage by lightning. And I confidently believe that if all the buildings insured in our company, were rodded by the Hicks Lightning Rod Co. with the rod they have always used, that the company would save thousands of dollars each year.

I have been a director of Lenawee Mutual Fire Insurance Company for the past eight years; also an adjuster for the Company.

Yours truly,
(Signed) THOMAS MURPHY.

Mr. Hicks is well known by all the farmers in Southern Michigan and is looked upon as the most reliable man in the lightning rod business. adv.

PHYSICIAN'S PRESCRIPTION FOR INDIGESTION

Important for all Those Who Suffer After Eating

If you suffer from indigestion after eating and find that instead of the one little pepsin or soda pill you used to take, it now needs two or three to stop it, it's time you called a halt and did some hard thinking.

The plain truth is that there are thousands of men and women in this country whose stomachs are dead or dying from lack of exercise while they themselves still live.

Years ago a famous physician wrote the prescription for Mi-o-na Stomach Tablets and thousands owe their very life to them today. Most stomach remedies work on the food and digest it. Mi-o-na works on the stomach and digest nothing. Mi-o-na Tablets strengthen the stomach walls, stimulate the stomach muscles and vitalize the Stomach machinery into instant and normal action. C. A. Wright & Son, Tecumseh Mich., and many other leading druggists hereabouts sell Mi-o-na Tablets, agreeing to refund money in any case where it does not bring complete relief. If your own druggist thinks this well of Mi-o-na you surely ought to try it.

SAN-JAK

is the greatest rectifier for the blood and skin yet known. Greasy skin with pimples, blotches, eruptions or scrofula easily cleared away. Its use leaves the blood and skin as pure as the lilies. SAN-JAK for the stomach, nerves and blood is the best the world ever saw. SAN-JAK prevents the excessive flow of poison of fluid into the blood from the super renal glands near the kidneys, causing the arteries to harden in the years past 50. This preventative keeps the arteries soft and flexible; giving flexibility to the muscles as in youth.

You can feel well and active at any age from 60 to 90 years. Man should die from old age, not from diseased tissue. Mothers and daughters can avoid many dangerous operations by the use of this wonderful medicine. The use of SAN-JAK for pain in the back and abdomen greatly lessens the danger of appendicitis. $1.00 per bottle. Get SAN-JAK at

FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

AUTHOR'S FOREWORD.

This little story is the outcome of [illegible] a member of which was in the Bear Tooth forest during the years 19— and 1910. The golden trail is an actuality for me. The camp on the lake was mine. The rain, the snow I met, the prying camp robbers, the grouse, the muskrats, the beaver, were my companions. But Berea McFarlane [illegible] me only in imagination. She [illegible], born of a momentary power [illegible] clasp of a western rancher's [illegible]. The story of Wayland Norcross is fiction also. But the McFarlane ranch, the mill and the lonely ranger station are closely drawn pictures of [illegible]. Although the stage of my [illegible] Colorado, I have not held to any locality. The scene is [illegible].

It was my intention originally to write a much longer and more important [illegible] concerning Supervisor McFarlane, but this is merely the very slender story of a young western girl who, being desired of three strong men, bestows her love on a tourist whose weakness is at once her allurement and her care. The administration problem, the sociologic theme, which was to have made the novel worth while, got lost in some way on the low trail and never caught up with the lovers. I'm sorry, but so it was.

CHAPTER I.

The Happy Girl.

THE stage line which ran from Williams to Bear Tooth (one of the most authentic then to be found in all the west) possessed at least one genuine Concord coach, so faded, so saddened, so cracked and so splintered that its passengers entered it under protest and alighted from it with thanksgiving, and yet it must have been built by honorable men, for in 19— it still made the run of 120 miles twice each week without loss of wheel or even so much as molting a scrap of paint.

And yet whatever it may have been in its youth it was in its age no longer a gay dash of color in the landscape. On the contrary, it fitted into the dust brown and sage green plain as defensively as a beetle in a dusty path. Nevertheless it was an indispensable part of a very moving picture as it crept, creaking and groaning (or it may be it was the suffering passenger creaking and groaning), along the hillside.

After leaving the Grande river the road winds up a pretty high divide before plunging down into Ute park, as they call all that region lying between the Continental range on the east and the Bear Tooth plateau on the west. It was a big spread of land and very far from an eastern man's conception of a park. From Dome peak it seems a plain; but, in fact, when clouds shut off the high summits to the west this "valley" becomes a veritable mountain land, a tumbled, lonely country, over which an occasional horseman crawls, a minute but persistent insect. It is, to be exact, a succession of ridges and ravines, sculptured (in some far off, post glacial time) by floods of water, covered now, rather sparsely, with pinons, cedars and aspens, a dry, forbidding but majestic landscape.

[illegible] August the hills become iri[illegible] opaline with the transluce[illegible] yellow of the aspen, the coral a[illegible] crimson of the fire weed, the blood [illegible] of huckleberry beds and the royal [illegible]ple of the asters, while flowing [illegible] all, as solvent and neutral setting, [illegible] the gray green of the ever present [illegible] ever enduring sage brush.

Through this gorgeous land of [illegible] of stillness and of death a few [illegible] ago a pale young man (seated b[illegible] the driver) rode one summer day in voiceless rapture which made Bill McCoy weary.

"If you'd had as much of this as I have you'd talk of something else," he growled after a half dozen attempts at conversation. Bill wasn't much to look at, but he was a good driver, and the stranger respected him for it.

Eventually this simple minded horseman became curious about the slim young fellow sitting beside him.

"What you doing out here anyhow—fishing or just rebuilding a lung?"

"Rebuilding two lungs," answered the tourist.

"Well, this climate will just about put lungs into a coffee can," retorted Bill, with official loyalty to his country.

To his discerning eye "the tourist" now became "a lunger." "Where do you live when you're to home?"

"Connecticut."

"I knew it."

"How did you know it?" The youth seemed really interested to know.

"I drove another fellow up here last fall that dealt out the same kind of brogue you do."

Bill was prevented at the [illegible] from pursuing this [illegible] by the dis[illegible] of [illegible] horsemen [illegible] ranch toward the road. It was plain, even to the stranger, that they intended to intercept the stage, and Bill plied the lash with sudden vigor.

"I'll give 'em a chase," said he grimly.

The other appeared a little alarmed. "What are they, bandits?"

"Bandits!" sneered Bill. "Your eye[illegible] is [illegible]. Them's girls."

The traveler apologized. "My eyes [illegible] very good," he said hurriedly. [illegible] was, however, quite justified in [illegible]take, for both riders wore wide [illegible] sombreros and rode astride at a [illegible] pace, bandanas fluttering, [illegible] streaming, and one was calling [illegible] command, "Oh, Bill!"

As they neared the gate the driver drew up with a word of surprise. "Why, howdy, girls! Howdy?" he said, with an assumption of innocence. "Were you wishin' fer to speak to me?"

"Oh! shut up!" commanded one of the girls, a round faced, freckled romp. "You know perfectly well that Berrie is going home today. We told you all about it yesterday."

"Sure thing!" exclaimed Bill. "I'd forgot all about it."

"Like nothin'!" exclaimed the maid. "You've been countin' the hours till you got here. I know you."

"Goodby. Run down again."

"I will. You come up."

The young passenger sprang to the ground and politely said: "May I help you in?"

Bill stared, the girl smiled, and her companion called: "Be careful, Berrie, don't hurt yourself, the wagon might pitch."

The youth, perceiving that he had made another mistake, stammered an apology.

The girl perceived his embarrassment and sweetly accepted his hand. "I am much obliged, all the same."

Bill shook with malicious laughter.

"Out in the country girls are warranted to jump clean over a measly little hack like this," he explained.

The girl took a seat in the back corner of the dusty vehicle, and Bill opened conversation with her by asking what kind of a time she had been having "in the east."

"Fine," said she.

"Did ye get as far back as my old town?"

"What town is that, Bill?"

"Oh, come off! You know I'm from Omaha."

"No; I only got as far as South Bend."

The picture which the girl had made as she dashed up to the pasture gate—her hat rim blown away from her brown face and sparkling eyes—united with the kindliness in her voice as she accepted his gallant aid, entered a deep impression on the tourist's mind, but he did not turn his head to look at her—perhaps he feared Bill's elbow quite as much as his guffaw—but he listened closely, and by listening learned that she had been "east" for several weeks, and also that she was known, and favorably known, all along the line, for whenever they met a team or passed a ranch some one called out, "Hello, Berrie!" in cordial salute, and the men, old and young, were especially pleased to see her.

Meanwhile the stage rose and fell over the gigantic swells like a tiny boat on a monster sea, while the sun blazed ever more fervently from the splendid sky, and the hills glowed with ever increasing tumult of color. Through this land of color, of repose, of romance, the young traveler rode, drinking deep of the germless air, feeling that the girl behind him was a wondrous part of this wild and unaccountable country.

He had no chance to study her face again till the coach rolled down the hill to "Yancy's," a ranch house, where they were to take dinner and change horses.

With intent to show Bill that he did not greatly fear his smiles the youth sprang down and offered a hand to assist his charming fellow passenger to alight, and she, with kindly understanding, again accepted his aid, to Bill's chagrin, and they walked up the path side by side.

The Girl Behind Him Was a Wondrous Part of This Wild and Unaccountable Country.

"This is all very new and wonderful to me," the young man said in explanation, "but I suppose it's quite commonplace to you—and Bill."

"Oh, no—it's home!"

"You were born here?"

"No, I was born in the east, but I've lived here ever since I was three years old."

"By east you mean Kansas?"

"No, Missouri," she laughed back at him.

She was taller than most women and gave out an air of fine unconscious health which made her good to see, although her face was too broad to be pretty. She smiled easily, and her teeth were white and even. Her hand he noticed was as strong as steel and brown as leather. Her neck rose from her shoulders like that of an acrobat, and she walked with the sense of security which comes from self reliant strength.

She was met at the door by old lady Yancy, who pumped her hand up and down, exclaiming: "My stars! I'm glad to see ye back! 'Pears like the country is just naturally goin' to the dogs without you. The dance last Saturday was a frost, so I hear—no snap to the fiddlin', no ginger to the jiggin'. It shorely was pitiful."

Yancy himself, tall, grizzled, succinct, shook her hand in his turn. "Ma's right, girl, the country needs ye. I'm scared every time ye go away fer fear some feller will snap ye up."

The young tourist—he signed W. W. Norcross in Yancy's register—watched her closely and listened to every word she spoke with an intensity of interest which led Mrs. Yancy to say privately:

"'Pears like that young 'lunger' ain't goin' to forgit ye if he can help it."

"What makes you think he's a 'lunger?'"

"Don't haf to think. One look at him is enough."

Thereafter a softer light—the light of pity—shone in the eyes of the girl. "Poor fellow! He does look kind o' peaked. But this climate will bring him up to the scratch," she added, with optimistic faith in her beloved hills.

A moment later the downcoming stage pulled in loaded to the side lines, and everybody on it seemed to know Berea McFarlane. It was hello here and hello there and how are ye between, with smacks from the women and open cries of "Pass it around" on the part of the men, till Norcross marveled at the display.

"She seems a great favorite," he observed to Yancy.

"Who—Berrie? She's the whole works up at Bear Tooth. Good thing she don't want to go to congress—she'd lay Jim Worthy on the shelf."

Berea's popularity was not so remarkable as her manner of receiving it. She took it all as a sort of joke—a good, kindly joke. She shook hands with her male admirers and smacked the cheeks of her female friends with an air of modest deprecation. "Oh, you don't mean it," was one of her phrases. She enjoyed this display of affection, but it seemed not to touch her deeply, and her impartial, humorous acceptance of the courtship of the men was equally charming, though this was due, according to remark, to the claims of some rancher up the line.

She continued to be the theme of conversation at the dinner table and yet remained unembarrassed and gave back quite as good as she received.

"If I was Cliff," declared one lanky admirer, "I'd be shot if I let you out of my sight. It ain't safe."

She smiled broadly. "I don't feel scared."

"Oh, you're all right! It's the other feller—like me—that gets hurt."

The northbound coach got away first, and as the girl came out to take her place Norcross said, "Won't you have my seat with the driver?"

Norcross understood. She didn't relish the notion of being so close to the frankly amorous driver, who neglected no opportunity to be personal. Therefore he helped her to her seat inside and resumed his place in front.

Bill, now broadly communicative, minutely detailed his tastes in food, horses, liquors and saddlers in a monologue which would have been tiresome to any one but an imaginative young eastern student. Bill had a vast knowledge of the west, but a distressing habit of repetition.

In this informing way some ten miles were traversed, the road climbing ever higher and the mountains to right and left increasing in grandeur each hour, till of a sudden and in a deep valley on the bank of another swift stream they came upon a squalid saloon and a minute postoffice. This was the town of Moskow.

Bill, lumbering down over the wheel, took a bag of mail from the boot and dragged it into the cabin. The girl rose, stretched herself and said: "This stagin' is slow business. I'm cramped. I'm going to walk on ahead."

"May I go with you?" asked Norcross.

"Sure thing! Come along."

As they crossed the little pole bridge which spanned the flood the tourist exclaimed: "What exquisite water! It's like melted opals."

"Comes right down from the snow," she answered, impressed by the poetry of his simile.

He would gladly have lingered, listening to the song of the water, but as she passed on he followed. The opposite hill was sharp and the road stony, but as they reached the top the young easterner called out, "See the savins!"

Before them stood a grove of cedars, old, gray and drear, as weirdly impressive as the cacti in a Mexican desert. Torn by winds, scarred by lightnings, deeply rooted, tenacious as tradition, unlovely as Egyptian mummies, fantastic, dwarfed and blackened, these unaccountable creatures clung to the ledges. "What do you suppose planted those trees there?"

The girl was deeply impressed by the novelty of this query. "I never thought to ask. I reckon they just grew."

"No, there's a reason for all these plantings," he insisted.

"We don't worry ourselves much about such things out here," she replied, with charming humor. "We don't even worry about the weather. We just take things as they come."

They walked on talking with new intimacy. "Where is your home?" he asked.

"A few miles out of Bear Tooth. You are from the east, Bill says—'the far east,' we call it."

"From New Haven. I've just finished at Yale. Have you ever been in a city?"

"Oh, yes! I go to Denver once in awhile, and I saw St. Louis once, but I was only a yearling and don't remember much about it. What are you doing out here, if it's a fair question?"

He looked away at the mountains. "I got rather used up last spring, and my doctor said I'd better come out here for awhile and build up. I'm going up to Meeker's mill. Do you know where that is?"

"I know every stovepipe in this park," she answered. "Joe Meeker is kind o' related to me—uncle by marriage. He lives about fifteen miles over the hill from Bear Tooth."

This fact seemed to bring them still closer together. "I'm glad of that," he said pointedly. "Perhaps I shall be permitted to see you now and again? I'm going to be lonesome for awhile, I'm afraid."

"Don't you believe it! Joe Meeker's boys will keep you interested," she assured him.

The stage overtook them at this point and Bill surlily remarked, "If you'd been alone, young feller, I'd 'a' give you a chase." His resentment of the outsider's growing favor with the girl was ludicrously evident.

As they rose into the higher levels the aspen shook its yellowish leaves in the breeze and the purple foothills gained in majesty. Great new peaks came into view on the right, and the lofty cliffs of the Bear Tooth range loomed in naked grandeur high above the blue green of the pines which clothed their sloping eastern sides.

At intervals the road passed small log ranches crouching low on the banks of creeks, but aside from these—and the sparse animal life around them—no sign of settlement could be seen. The valley lay as it had lain for thousands of years, repeating its forests as the meadows of the lower levels send forth their annual grasses. Norcross said to himself, "I have circled the track of progress and have re-entered the border America, where the stagecoach is still the one stirring thing beneath the sun."

At last the driver, with a note of exultation, called out, "Grab a root, everybody; it's all the way down hill and time to feed."

And so as the dusk came over the mighty spread of the hills to the east and the peaks to the west darkened from violet to purple black the stage rumbled and rattled and rushed down the winding road through thickening signs of civilization and just at nightfall rolled into the little town of Bear Tooth, which is the eastern gateway of the Ute plateau.

Norcross had given a great deal of thought to the young girl behind him, and thought had deepened her charm. Her frankness, her humor, her superb physical strength and her calm self reliance appealed to him, and the more dangerously because he was so well aware of his own weakness and loneliness, and as the stage drew up before the hotel he fervently said, "I hope I shall see you again?"

BIG NAVAL GUNS.

Death at Times Comes From Merely Serving Them In Battle.

Modern naval engagements demonstrate that the gunners sometimes die after the battle, even when they have not been wounded or injured in any way. Death is caused by disturbance of the circulation due to the strain placed upon the nervous system by the excitement and the tremendous vibrations of modern guns.

Curiously enough, this collapse is quite as likely to affect the most robust members of the gun crew as the ones with poorer physiques and bears no relation to the individual's courage. It is due to a lack of sufficient reserve power of the heart, which is dependent upon the quality of the heart muscles, and there is no known means of estimating this inherent quality exactly.

It is possible, of course, to determine the force and strength of the heart in an individual, but only some test, such as that of actual battle, will determine the quality of the heart muscles.

Thus the veteran gunner who has proved his heart quality in actual battle has become a peculiarly valuable factor in modern naval warfare.—Los Angeles Times.

They Like Fat Girls In Tunis.

A Tunisian girl has no chance of marriage unless she tips the scale at 200 pounds, and to that end she commences to fatten when she is fifteen years old. She takes medicine and eats a great deal of sweet stuff and leads a sedentary life to hasten the process. Up to fifteen she is very handsome, but at twenty what an immense, unwieldy mass of fat she becomes! She waddles, or, rather, undulates, along the street. Her costume is very picturesque, especially if she be of the richer class. She is clothed in fine silks of resplendent hues of a bright red, yellow or green and wears a sort of conical shaped headdress, from which depends a loose white drapery. Turkish trousers and dainty slippers, the heels of which barely reach the middle of the feet, complete the costume.

Spanish Surnames.

In addition to three or four Christian names the Spanish child bears the combined family names of his father and mother. When the surnames are doubled or connected by the y, meaning "and," the first is the more important one and the only one that may be taken alone, for it is in the father's name, while the last is in the name of the mother. In Spain they know no "senior" and "junior." Father and son may bear the same Christian name, but each takes his own mother's name as a distinction, the father being, for instance, Pedro Diaz y Castillo and the son Pedro Diaz y Blanco.

Cause Found at Last.

The teacher was having an interesting half hour with the children, asking them questions, any one having the privilege to answer. It was a great time to show off. The teacher asked about various things, and one question was about locusts. Several hands were raised, and finally one boy was selected to speak. "A locust is a bug that gives people tuberculocusts," was his answer.—Indianapolis News.

Care of the Baby In Summer

Artificial Feeding.

[Prepared by the children's bureau, United States department of labor.]

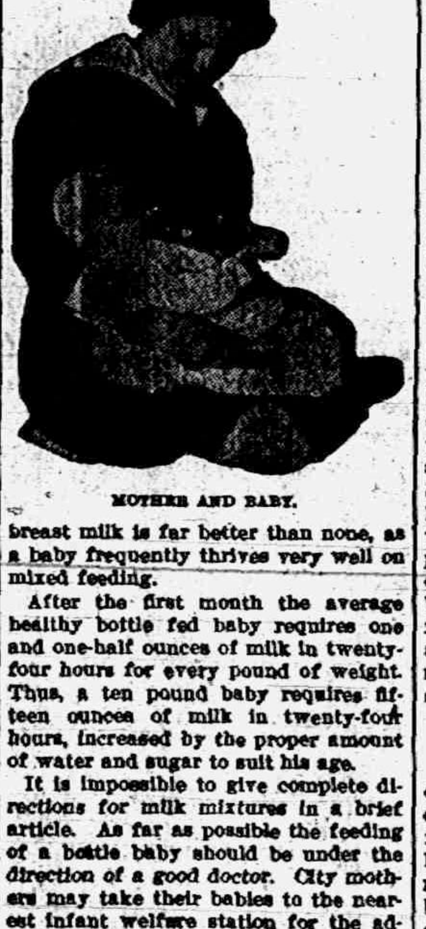
When a baby is deprived of breast milk altogether and fed entirely from a bottle this method is called artificial feeding.

If he is partly nursed and partly fed from the bottle this method is known as mixed feeding. In both of these methods the preparation of the bottles and the amount and kind of food to use are questions of vast importance to the baby. Many thousands of bottle fed babies die every year because they do not have breast milk or because of some mistake in feeding or because they cannot adapt themselves to a strange food.

Artificial feeding is not only hard on the baby, but imposes no slight task upon the mother. To bring up a baby on the bottle without mishap requires unremitting daily attention to a multitude of petty details which can only be neglected at the risk of making the baby sick.

The milk must have special care from the moment it is delivered at the house until it is fed to the baby.

The utensils used in the preparation of the feedings and the bottles and nipples must be kept scrupulously clean. The strength and quantity of the food must be increased or decreased in accordance with the baby's varying needs as indicated by his age, his weight, the condition of his bowels and other things. All this necessarily makes such demands on the time and strength of a mother that she will not undertake this burden if breast milk can possibly be had. Even a little breast milk is far better than none, as a baby frequently thrives very well on mixed feeding.



MOTHER AND BABY.

After the first month the average healthy bottle fed baby requires one and one-half ounces of milk in twenty-four hours for every pound of weight. Thus, a ten pound baby requires fifteen ounces of milk in twenty-four hours, increased by the proper amount of water and sugar to suit his age.

It is impossible to give complete directions for milk mixtures in a brief article. As far as possible the feeding of a bottle baby should be under the direction of a good doctor. City mothers may take their babies to the nearest infant welfare station for the advice and help they need.

Country mothers who are far from the doctor will need to have some book giving directions for the feeding of the baby. There are several good books of this kind which may be bought. The children's bureau of the department of labor at Washington will send free to all who ask for it a little pamphlet called "Infant Care," which gives some simple rules for feeding.

VALUABLE HINTS.

Tuck For Shrinkage.—When making up wash material to allow for shrinkage before turning the hem the first time take a tuck on the inside before turning and stitch down at the second time. This can be easily let out and the result is most satisfactory. This is especially good for growing girls' dresses.

To Make Gas Mantles Last.—When lighting the gas do not turn the key on full, but only four-fifths of the way and see that sufficient air enters through the air passage. This will eliminate the hissing and give proportional flow of air and gas. When the mantle gets black throw a little ordinary salt in the same from the top, which will consume the carbon and make your mantle clear and white. It also adds a thin coating to the mantle which makes it last much longer.

A Cure For Runners.—I had such a time with runners in my silk stockings, and after trying many plans to prevent them I finally hit upon a satisfactory one as a final experiment. Buying two inch satin ribbon I put it around the top, catching it in the garters to hold it. Since I have not a single runner, and so I feel that for me the luxury of silk stockings is no longer one I must be denied.

God grants liberty only to those who love it and are always ready to guard and defend it.—Webster.

Joy of Obliviousness.

"How did you like my turning off the gas at 10 while you and that young fool were in the parlor last night?" asked her father.

"Did you?" she responded innocently, and father knew the true meaning of the word failure.—Philadelphia Ledger.

FARMERS' DISTILLERIES.

For several years there has been in force a law that is supposed to favor the manufacture of denatured alcohol by farmers, yet we find no successful farmers' alcohol plants. In Germany, where this industry has developed, considerable encouragement has been given by the government; there has been long continued experimentation, and a system is in operation for the return of the mash from the alcohol distilleries for the farmers' use as feed for cattle.

On American farms there is far less need for a method of using byproducts, and our farmers have not been forced to practice such close economies as have the Germans.

Co-operation in the ownership of distilleries is necessary, and they can be expected to succeed only in localities where large acreages of particular crops are grown—such as the potato belts of Maine and Minnesota, the fruit growing sections, and in certain other localities where there are large quantities of waste vegetables that should be conserved. The denatured alcohol boom appears to resemble some others that were based upon superficial observation in Europe. The attempt to graft these ideas on American agriculture has failed because of too little regard for our own conditions and requirements.—Country Gentleman.

DISEASES OF NURSERY STOCK.

Losses Caused by Various Plant Ailments Are Sometimes Heavy.

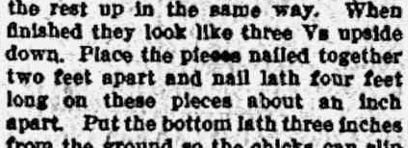
[Prepared by New York State College of Agriculture.]

The losses in nursery stock caused by various plant diseases are sometimes very heavy. Fire blight, for example, will destroy all the stock attacked unless it is eradicated by cutting out the affected parts of the plants. Some other diseases affect the leaves only, and by causing them to fall prematurely prevent the normal growth and development of the plants. Methods of control which are effective on larger trees and bushes cannot be used in the nursery, and, on the other hand, methods used in the nursery are of no service for mature plants. For this reason, a special study of the principal leaf diseases of nursery stock has been made at the Cornell university agricultural experiment station, and its results are given in a bulletin just issued.

Nursery apple stock is liable to attack by scab and powdery mildew; pear stock, to attack by scab, leaf-blight, and leaf spot; cherry and plum, to yellow leaf disease, and the former to powdery mildew as well, currant and gooseberry stock may be attacked by anthracnose and leaf spot, and the latter by mildew also; peach is subject to peach leaf curl, some varieties apparently being more susceptible than others, and quince is subject to leaf blight. In addition to this fruit stock, many horse chestnut trees in nurseries are greatly injured by leaf blotch, and nursery rosebushes are subject to black spot and mildew.

Place to Feed Chicks.

It often is hard to feed little chicks on account of the old hens eating most of the feed. To prevent this I make a feeding creep for the special use of the little chicks. To make one of these runs take six pieces of 2 by 2 inch lumber two feet long and saw one end of each to bevel. Nail two of them with the beveled ends firmly together. Nail the rest up in the same way. When finished they look like three Vs upside down. Place the pieces nailed together two feet apart and nail lath four feet long on these pieces about an inch apart. Put the bottom lath three inches from the ground so the chicks can slip under to get the feed. When through using the runs they may be set away for another season. By doing this they will last several years. They save both time and feed in raising chicks.—Nebraska Farm Journal.



ABOUT LIVE STOCK.

Feed the calf lightly until it is five to seven weeks old, giving not over ten to twelve pounds of milk daily. Later the amount may be increased to fourteen or sixteen pounds and at three months may, though not always, go to about twenty pounds. The amount fed, however, must be carefully regulated by the ability of the calf to handle it without scouring.

Cleanliness is a big factor in the successful raising of sheep.

Raise roots for the sheep. They are relished, and it improves their health. Sugar beets rank first, rutabagas next, then pumpkins. Four to five pounds daily to each sheep will improve their general health and make the meat tender and juicy.

A good ram has a broad head, chest and back, short thick neck and shoulders and straight hind legs.

There is no kind of animal breeding that will pay better than the breeding of horses, but horses that will sell, not "dunghills" or misfits.

It is impossible to develop a colt into a sound, serviceable horse if it is kept tied on a hard floor day in and day out through the winter.

O'Connell's Big Head.

Thackeray was six feet two inches in height, and Sir H. W. Lucy says the great novelist wore a seven and five-eighths inch hat, beating Dickens and John Bright by a full half inch. Mr. Gladstone's hat was of seven and three-eighths inch measurement—the same as Macaulay's—while Beaconsfield needed a full seven inch. The hat of Daniel O'Connell, however, would have beaten them all, measuring eight and one-half inches by ten inches.

CHERRY SEASON.

This Is the Time of Year When Fruit Is at Its Best.

MANY WAYS TO USE IT.

Desserts and Salads Can Be Made as Well as Frozen Dainties—Several Recipes For Use of Cherries Given Below.

Try a cherry dessert with rice for the children's dinner. Drop large cherries into a hot rich sirup until they are heated through. Have some boiled rice ready and pile the cherries on a nest of it on the platter, serving the whole with whipped cream. Garnish, if possible, with a few cherry leaves or two or three clusters of the dipped cherries to which the stems are still fixed.

Cherry Salad.

Select some firm, ripe bananas that are not too long. Loosen a strip of the skin, turn this back with a spoon carefully and remove the inside in small pieces. Allow half a cup of the banana to each cup of cherries. To make the dressing, take the juice from the cherries and mix with lemon and orange juices to taste, sweetening with pulverized sugar as necessary. Pour this over the salad and put the mixture on the ice. Just before serving stir the ingredients together lightly, pack them into the banana cases and serve on individual plates garnished with cherry leaves and pitted cherries.

Cherry Betty.

Butter a deep baking dish and cover the bottom with a layer of stoned cherries. Sprinkle the fruit with sugar, nutmeg and cocoanut. Add sufficient cherry juice to moisten. On top of this spread a layer of breadcrumbs and continue in alternate layers of fruit and crumbs until the dish is full. See that the top layer is one of breadcrumbs. Cover and steam in the oven for one hour; then uncover and brown quickly. Serve hot with sweetened cream as a sauce.

Cherry Roll.

Sift together two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Beat two eggs, add to them a cupful of milk and a rounding tablespoonful of melted butter. Mix with the dry ingredients to a light batter and stir in two cupfuls of pitted cherries. Turn into a well greased pudding mold having a tightly fitting lid and steam for two hours. Turn out, garnish with cherries and serve with hard sauce.

Cherries In Jelly Mold.

To one pint of juice drained from stewed cherries add sugar to make quite sweet and let it come to a boil. Dissolve a tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in cold water to cover, pour over it the boiling hot cherry juice and strain into a border mold. Set aside to become firm; then turn out carefully on a low glass dish, fill the center with pitted, sweetened cherries and heap over all whipped cream.

Cherry Shortcake.

Sift together two cupfuls of flour, a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Rub in half a cupful of butter and mix with a well beaten egg added to a half cupful of milk. Make the dough soft, roll out about an inch thick and bake for about twenty-five minutes. When done split carefully, butter well and cover with half of the cherries, from which of course the stones have been removed. Sprinkle with sugar. Butter the top layer, cover the cherries, sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve with whipped cream. The cherries should be very ripe.

Cherry Toast.

Cook a pint of pitted cherries with a cupful of sugar until the fruit is tender. Have buttered slices of toast ready, pour this mixture over them and when cold serve with whipped cream.

BARGAINS

We have taken in exchange several Hay Loaders and Side Delivery Rakes.

Don't think these are worn-out tools. We don't take in such. The owners of these Loaders and Rakes wanted the newer styles and let the old go while in good working condition.

We will warrant these machines to be in good working condition. Where we found any defect or breakage we have replaced them with new parts.

As for price—when you see the quality of these tools you will wonder how they can be replaced so cheap.

As for terms—we are willing to give you any reasonable terms you may think necessary.

Don't delay, but come and see them at once.

This bank was the first in northern Lenawee to introduce a savings bank and pay interest on deposits. It has paid its depositors $101,687.89 interest. Its stockholders have received $31,600 dividends. The bank solicits the business of all, large and small deposits treated alike, interest is paid at the rate of 3 per cent on savings accounts and on certificates of deposits for all full months, one or more.

The bank is centrally located. It equipped with modern banking rooms, burglar and fire proof vaults, safe and safety deposit boxes for the convenience and protection of its patrons. This bank is in position to furnish every service demanded of any bank consistent with good banking. It is the largest bank in northern Lenawee and is in position at all times to accommodate its patrons with approved loans.

L. G NORTH, Vice President

Special attention is given to the business of farmers and stockmen in furnishing them means to secure stock for feeding purposes. Every depositor in this bank is guaranteed "Absolute Safety" and "Special Service" and is building up his credit with the bank which is a convenience in securing loans when needed. There is no occasion for the citizens of Tecumseh to keep money deposited in other cities with the banking service that is offered in Tecumseh.

THE LILLEY STATE BANK

Occupying one of the most beautiful banking offices in the state is the Lilley State Bank which was established in 1855 by Lucius Lilley and others under the name of Perley Bills & Co. It has occupied the same building all these sixty years.

In 1865 they took advantage of the then new National Bank Act and incorporated as the National Bank of Tecumseh. In 1873 the bank was again changed to a private bank, doing business as Bills, Lilley & Co. Mr. Bills died in 1880 and the name then became Lilley, Bidwell & Co. In 1893 the bank was incorporated under the state laws as The Lilley State Bank.

Through all the years the bank with its stability and increase in volume of business shows the guiding hand of Mr Lilley whose one thought and constant endeavor was for the concern. Since the death of Mr. Lilley in 1912 the business has been ably conducted by this corp of officers:

President—P. W. A. Fitzsimmons
Vice Pres.—R. A. Heesen
Cashier—F. J. Temple
Asst. Cashier—H. S. Temple
Directors—F. E. Bradley, Dr. W. D Reed, Col. A. S Cummins.

One novel plan for saving money which this firm put before the people two years ago is their Christmas Money Club. Both old and young to the number of 400 have taken advantage of this savings plan.

To show the increase of volume of business done compare these figures of their statements of Jan. 1, 1910, and Jan 1, 1915: In 1910 the figure was $261,869 65 and in 1915 was a total of $420,050 60.

The president, P. W. A. A SUMMER SHOWER.

Not a regular downpour of rain with thunder and lightning for an accompaniment, but a miscellaneous shower for Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Waldron was given last Thursday evening at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Waldron, just west of town

About 60 members of the Epworth League and other friends perpetrated a surprise on the newly-weds on their return from Wampler's lake where they had been spending the time since their marriage.

The company came laden with a bit of almost every thing in the line of house holding equipment and a merry time was enjoyed in presenting them and explaining their uses. A very pleasant evening was spent with music and social visiting later ice cream and cake were served.

Many good wishes for the future of the happy pair were expressed and it was a late hour when the guests departed for their homes.

TESTING MATERIALS FOR USE OF THE CITY.

Practical Services Rendered by the Cincinnati Bureau of City Tests.

The bureau of city tests (Cincinnati) aids the city in two ways. It helps the government to purchase the best materials by examining the dealers' samples and by making further tests from time to time enables it to receive supplies of good quality throughout the year. Cincinnati is one of the first large cities to purchase coal under competitive bidding in accordance with well drawn specifications. All its purchases are made on the British thermal unit basis. In submitting bids dealers guarantee a certain number of heat units a pound and a certain percentage of ash. The cost a heat unit in the various bids is then calculated and the contracts awarded. All moisture in excess of the amount normally present is deducted from the tonnage delivered. The result of this new system has been the receiving of a good uniform grade of coal.

The bureau tested the 450 or more carloads of cement used during the year for various city improvements. In spite of the fact that only standard brands which have proved dependable are used, eleven carloads of cement of poor quality were rejected.

By testing fire hose the city saved $11,000 on the contract of 1912 and about the same amount on that of 1914. The bureau analyzes samples without any knowledge of the bidders' prices, and contracts are let on a quality basis to the lowest bidder whose product conforms to the standard underwriters' specifications. The satisfactory performance of the hose under heavy duty has shown the value of these examinations.

In the case of lubricating oils, also, the contracts are let to the lowest bidder whose oil conforms to the specifications of the bureau. At one time twenty-six samples of oil were rejected, and it was necessary to advertise for new bids. The second set of samples were practically all up to the requirements.

The 1,164 samples examined during the past year cannot all be mentioned, but here are a few that were rejected as inferior: Paint, with over 20 per cent gasoline; sand, dirty, not well graded and unsuitable; anti-freezing compound, guaranteed free from calcium chloride, yet found on analysis to be composed entirely of calcium chloride and water; marble cleaner, high in price and consisting entirely of washing soda; woolen blankets, supposed to contain not more than 15 per cent of cotton, yet shown on analysis to have 30 per cent; sulphuric acid, containing such a high percentage of iron that it would have ruined the expensive storage batteries of the fire alarm telegraph system.—Science.

SPAIN NOW BUYING WAR STORES HERE

Special Commission Is Making Contracts For Supplies.

ESTABLISHES VAST CREDITS

Leader Denies Spanish Nation Is to Join European Conflict, Give Aid to Huerta or Enter Mexican Troubles. "We Are Merely Making Ready," Says Colonel Balbil.

Spain is now said to be "on the verge of war." There is some mystery in the preparations being made.

A special commission of the Spanish government has opened headquarters in New York for the purpose of buying 250,000,000 cartridges, several thousand war automobiles and a large flotilla of aeroplanes.

The commission is also expected to order a number of submarines. They are to be of two tonnages, a large type for ocean cruisings and a smaller craft for the shallower waters of the Mediterranean.

The Bank of Spain has established large deposits for the purchase of war supplies with the National City and First National banks.

There are five Spanish commissioners—Colonel Manuel Rivero Balbil, Captain B. Sarda and Captain Louis Claros of the Spanish army and Commanders Fernando de Carranza and Julio Moreira of the Spanish navy.

"We Are Only Preparing."

Colonel Balbil is president of the commission, which has headquarters in the Spanish consulate, 18 Broadway. Seen by a reporter, the colonel said:

"Our country is not going to war, but we are preparing. We believe it is wise to be all ready in these days of trouble. The rest of Europe is on fire. We do not know how long or how far this war will go."

"Is it true that Spain is preparing to protect the rights of the wealthy Spaniards driven out of Mexico and whose interests are said to be represented by General Huerta?" the newspaper man asked.

"There is no truth in that story," replied Senor F. Xavier de Salas, the Spanish consul. "The Spaniards who settled in Mexico will have to look out for themselves."

Denies Aid For Huerta.

Captain Louis Claros, who has been negotiating for large supplies for cartridges for Mauser rifles, was told of a report that the ammunition was intended to put Huerta back in power in Mexico. Captain Claros replied:

"These cartridges are for Spain, not for Mexico. It is true that the Mexican rifle is of the same standard Mauser type, but don't let that fact misguide you. Although Huerta has been living in Spain and although many wealthy Spaniards were driven out of Mexico and have returned to Spain, we have nothing to do with Huerta or the Mexican Spaniards. The Spanish government is paying our bills.

"The commission," Captain Claros added, "is greatly interested in automobiles, aeroplanes and submarines. We are now going over specifications submitted by several automobile manufacturers. A special expert on aviation is on his way from Madrid, and when he arrives we will take up the purchase of a large number of aeroplanes."

A Thumb Print Fantasia.

"You seem very much interested in those thumb print records," commented the man at police headquarters.

"Yes," answered the visitor. "I can't help feeling the greatest curiosity about how one of those things would sound if you put it on a phonograph and played it."—Washington Star.

DIDN'T GET A JOB.

But She Should Have Landed It If Nerve Was a Recommendation.

"I've seen a lot of cool ones in my time, but believe me I caught one the other day that had 'em all skinned for nerve."

The speaker, a detective in one of the large downtown department stores, was leaning against the rail in a police court waiting for her case to be called.

"I spotted a woman whose action didn't just suit me. I trailed her for about ten minutes and then, presto, she gobbled on to a bar of five cent soap. That wasn't hardly enough in itself to hang a case on, so I kept my mouth shut and my eyes open as she made her way toward the elevator. When she got into the cage I was right behind her, and I almost stepped on her skirt as she 'traipsed' along the aisle toward the office.

"Apparently, as if in search of work, I played with a slip as she told the boss her story, and, would you believe me, she was trying to get a job. She wanted to get a place in the soap department, saying that she had been a demonstrator for a large soap concern; that she was tired of the outdoor work and offered the bar of soap she had just stolen as evidence of the fact that she was an experienced saleswoman.

"I stood it as long as I could and then gave the superintendent the 'high sign' to 'can' her. Can you beat that for nerve?"—Detroit Saturday Night.

Enough Is Enough.

"Say, pop."

"Let's have it," said the tired business man, who had answered already fifty-seven varieties of impossible questions.

"Do you believe that if at first we don't succeed we should try, try again?"

"Not in every case. For example, you have been trying for the last half hour to wear out my patience. If you take my advice you will stop right where you are."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

AMERICAN GUNS HIT THE HARDEST

Daniels Tells Why We Use Fourteen Inch Cannon.

MORE GUNS ON EVERY SHIP

England's Queen Elizabeth Has Eight Fifteen-inch Guns, While the Pennsylvania Carries Twelve Fourteen-inch Pieces—American Boat Is 70 Per Cent More Effective.

Washington.—In a recent letter giving a detailed review of what had been done to improve and strengthen the navy in the last two years Secretary Daniels made this statement:

"The bureau of ordnance has developed a fourteen inch gun that will shoot farther, shoot straighter and hit harder than any gun now in use or known to be designed by a foreign country."

There has been much interest in the matter of the effectiveness of the guns of the navy, and Secretary Daniels has given out the following information amplifying his earlier statement:

"The question of the proper caliber for the main battery guns of our battleships is one that has received the most careful consideration on the part of the bureau of ordnance and the general board.

BATTERY OF BIG GUNS DESIGNED IN AMERICA.

"There is an axiom with regard to calibers which amounts to this: That a ship should mount the smallest big gun that will pierce the enemy's armor over vitals at the maximum probable fighting range. The fourteen inch guns of the Pennsylvania will get through the maximum armor afloat, so far as our knowledge goes, at a range of 12,000 yards. The Queen Elizabeth's fifteen inch guns will do little more than that. If our information is correct as to the velocity of the British fifteen inch gun the fourteen inch guns on the Pennsylvania will range a little farther than the Queen Elizabeth's fifteen inch gun. The flatter trajectory of the fourteen inch gun gives it increased probability of hitting in comparison with the fifteen inch gun.

"The Pennsylvania mounts twelve guns to the Queen Elizabeth's eight. Therefore the volume of fire of our ship exceeds the volume of fire of the British ship by 50 per cent.

"The navy department has built and proved a sixteen inch gun superior to both the fifteen inch and fourteen inch so far as penetration of armor at fighting range is concerned. If the Pennsylvania were to be armed with the sixteen inch gun she could carry only eight as against the twelve fourteen-inch guns now assigned her. If we adopted the fifteen inch caliber we would have to make a sacrifice in number of guns as great or nearly as great as was done in the design of the Queen Elizabeth.

"Counting volume of fire and probability of hitting, we see that at battle range the number of blows delivered by the Pennsylvania in a given time will exceed those given by the Queen Elizabeth by 70 per cent. The fifteen inch gun, it is stated, fires a shell weighing 1,920 pounds. Our fourteen inch shell weighs 1,400 pounds. The bursting effect of the larger shell will be greater, of course, but we have little doubt that the destructive effect of the burst of the fourteen inch shell will be quite sufficient for its task. No one can doubt the advisability of delivering seventeen hits to ten of the enemy. Added to all of the above, we must recollect that the chance of having gunfire survive rests with the ship carrying the greater number.

"Now, if we compare these guns at range greater than battle range or armor piercing range and merely count the ability to reach the enemy's decks or unarmored parts we find that the Pennsylvania's guns range quite as far at a maximum as those of the Queen Elizabeth. Both guns range farther than they would have any hope of hitting a ship—that is to say, over 21,000 yards, or something like twelve land miles."

A Town of Distinction.

"Where can one find a more filthy, hot, sweltering, odorous town than Hodeidah?" asks a recent traveler regarding that Arabian port. A filthier town it would indeed be difficult to discover, even in Asiatic Turkey, and the character of its inhabitants may be judged from the fact that the Akhdam Arabs, who are treated as outcasts by all the other tribes, have been allowed to establish themselves in Hodeidah. Nevertheless the port is the gateway to one of the most beautiful, fertile and populous regions of Arabia and had a flourishing trade in days prior to Turkish misrule.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Letter of the Law.

"Didn't I tell you," demanded the stern mother, "always to wash your hands before coming to dinner?"

"I did wash them before dinner," responded truthful James.

"Nothing of the sort. You haven't been inside the house since lunch time."

"Well, I washed them then. That was before dinner, wasn't it?"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

WHITHER THOU GOEST

By E. HOWELL NEUMANN

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"And thou wilt return to me, my husband?"

"Soul of mine, why dost thou doubt? Lorinka, I go. There remains but the night between me and Sakhalin, the grave of my country. And we be starving, little Madonna, and a man's work is a man's work.

"Why do you tremble so? It is but a little mouse gnawing my food, a bold little starveling. I will return quickly from America and wait for you in Italy, where the Russian police may not seek me out and the sun always shines."

"And if thou die, my life?"

"I cannot die, beautiful child, without thee."

"And—and some one else—Olga, who goes with thee?"

"Ah, soul of mine, I am thine! My body goes unwillingly, and my soul stays with thee. A body without a soul, I wander—a body torn by the separation.

"Ah, Lorinka, there is but one thing left to me—the mercy of thy letters—but thou must guard well the contents, for they will watch thee."

"I cannot let thee go."

He wrapped his great shouba with its warmth of sheepskin about her, but the girl still trembled, yet not with the deadly cold.

She was a beautiful girl and nearly as tall as he. Her blue black hair was in great plaits around her head.

Her wide black eyes, lidded with long lashes and the eyebrows arching delicately above them, were now wild with terror.

She was the bride of a year, and her husband was fleeing in the night from the Russian police.

There was a noise outside, the wheels of a cart dragging in the mud, and above it rang clearly the silver tones of the bells of the drosky, which arches from the shafts above the horse's neck.

Lorinka straightened her body till it was rigid in suspense.

Before the narrow door of the little hut drew up a Siberian horse, white and beautiful as the snow it stepped on, with long, flowing tail and mane and the peculiar grace of its species.

A girl stepped down from the loose hay she sat on.

She stood half embarrassed, half smiling, her glance lingering over every feature of Michael's—the straight even brows that were drawn, the shadows beneath the high maxillary bones; glancing down to his neck and shoulders, which were strong like a bull's; seeing even on the floor at his feet the old cap that he had worn six years when a Cossack, fast freezing to the ground, and a tiny silver cross on its chain on his breast.

Then her lashes drooped as her eyes turned to Lorinka, whose dark head, with its plaits, rested close to where the cross lay.

Lorinka raised her head and nodded to the little woman in the door, who seemed to her as the embodied instrument of fate.

Olga and she had been rivals.

Olga had loved Michael long and would now drive the tarantas, the rough cart—perhaps walk beside it part of the way, as driving was freezing work, and Michael, living, would pass as the corpse of her brother, which she, poor peasant, was driving to the church—and perhaps he would be a real corpse when the long, weary ride in the cold should be ended.

Who else but some one who loved him would venture it, risk liberty and help him escape?

Olga would go to America with him, for she dared not return, while Lorinka, his wife, must stay and bide her time.

Under the urge of Lorinka's hands, like a man in some evil dream, he went out to the tarantas and laid himself flat on its boards, while she pulled a black cover over his prostrate figure, placed a bundle of hay beneath his head and two heavy loaves of ten pounds each of black bread done up in jute beside him, with teakettle and glasses and an old worn Bible.

The white horse and the tarantas drew out into the white still night and the vast steppes.

Michael made a little hole in the cover, and his eyes watched the slowly receding hut in the snow field.

He wanted to impress her image in his soul for dark nights in alien lands, and he strained his eyes till her white face and arms, luminous in the door, seemed frozen there, and he felt that he, too, was frozen in the watching.

Olga drove into the slumbering village of Alexandrovska with the reins in one hand and crossing herself piously with the other.

The police watched her go past, and her eyes were ever on the gold cross of the domed church at the far end of the village.

A day brought them into the city of Habarovska, where the nearly frozen Michael revived, and they took the slow train of the fourth class of the Ussuriski railway, stopping at every little station for hot water for tea, and in seventeen days they reached Odessa and took ship for America.

Always Olga stayed close to Michael with her naive little smile, biding her time and waiting with the infinite patience of woman.

And ever Michael turned on her dull eyes, his tall figure never relaxing into ease, his black eyes hollow, as if his soul had indeed stayed back there in the snow and whiteness, close to the soul of Lorinka.

Once he was gay—as the ship sailed into the harbor of New York and the sun flashed its welcome from the towering skyscrapers.

His slow, plodding soul had the new land fixed as refuge, freedom, liberty—the peasant's dream.

Thereafter and for many days he abode as an exile, working on contract down in Mulberry street, making Russian cigarettes for a Greek firm.

He did well and gave a bit of his earnings to Olga.

He bore himself toward her with a gentle good will, guarding her from any chance of harm, and the blue eyed Olga, in her Russian blouse and with a yellow kerchief outlining the oval of her face, sold the red and blue prismatic embroideries that her busy fingers made.

Slowly, as all things came to him, entered the spirit of the new land, most marvelous as it opened great sweeping spaces of life and laughter and freedom of men, newspapers without the columns blotted out by the ink roller of a Russian censor, gatherings at night with old acquaintances.

Days went by without the mercy of her letters, and Olga became a song bird for joy, but he seemed, as he had said that night on the steppes, a body without a soul.

Then word came that Lorinka had been sent to prison in Siberia for the vague reason of aiding her husband to escape, and during the [illegible] fever Olga tended him when his hot, parched lips called forth in delirium: "Lorinka! Lorinka! Ljuboff moia!"

That was the only happiness that Olga snatched to her breast—the delirium of a sick man who saw her as the form of his beloved—and she waited and watched ever after with that memory of those hours.

She knew Michael [illegible] would be hers in the end.

The next day Michael greeted her with a rare smile, and her heart trembled within her.

"Olga, Olga, doragoia!" he called her, "Lorinka has escaped! She comes by the next steamer!"

Wild with delight that Tuesday, Michael waited down in the big government building at Ellis island in the room that has been called the "kissing post," where bare walls and supporting columns have been known to glimmer and sparkle.

The minutes dragged, and Lorinka did not come.

Michael went from one official to another. He saw Mishka, from his old village. She had been on the boat with him. She must be detained in the building somewhere.

Swiftly the soul swept passionately into them and she lay in his arms, knowing no world beyond their shelter, her heart singing.

"Her eyes—trachoma," he said softly. "She must go back. Perhaps—who can tell?—she may soon be cured and then come again."

Slowly the words sank into the deep waters of Michael's soul.

His face was heavy, his straight brows were drawn.

"She is my wife." He spoke brusquely, his deep voice filled with still passion. "I am a citizen, an American citizen"—

"Perhaps—in a year or six months?" The doctor's words trickled into silence.

Michael put his hand to his head and glanced round the room with the same dull glance with which he had gazed at the bare hut that night on the steppes, and his thoughts were there in the bitter cold.

"My very soul! Go back"—

He looked at her and laughed. It was a hard, strange sound.

He leaned down and drew her mouth to his.

And gray skies, the expanse of eternal snows, whistling blizzards, the steppes everlastingly the same with their vastness and loneliness, their undulating waves of lush grass, the purple voloshki with its pall of color, the white kashka with its mushroom heads drooping, the sallow drok and the silver, timid moon—Siberia, the dungeon—and she!

Lorinka's eyes, charged with dreams, were on his.

Suddenly and passionately both his arms shot up in supplication.

"Go back!" he cried. "Da-da. Yes, yes, I go, I go—if it were to hell! Where she goes there go I."

His hands dropped down again in a mighty embrace, encircling the woman, and in his passionate, primitive way he took her off her feet.

The steppe, that Russian sea, surged up before him, but now it cradled them in the arms of night, with love like a rich and lustrous coat shutting out the cold.

"We go together, always together—together—together!" he cried in a wild, exultant passion.

The bare walls echoed again and again and again, softly, triumphantly.

"Together!"

She now knew her patient waiting had been in vain—that she had lost him forever.

A Short Memory.

Uncle Jed was a trifle slack about quitting the bottom when the levee broke and had to take to a tree. Morning came and there was sixty feet of Mississippi flood water between him and shore. The preacher happened along on the high ground and saw Jed, but there wasn't any boat. Moreover, Jed's suspicion that there were alligators about was well founded.

The preacher besought Jed to swim, but in vain. Finally he called out:

"Jed, have faith. Remember how Jonah was cared for in the whale and saved after three days."

Jed spoke earnestly.

"Yas, suh, I remember. I ain' denyin' nuthin' 'bout Jonah, 'cause I wa'n't nigh um. But dis year alligator, he ain' no whale, suh. Alligator, he eat a nigger an' go off an' sleep a week, suh, an' disremember all 'bout dat nigger inside um."—New York Post.

Celebrated Dwarfs.

Early in the eighteenth century a brother and sister attracted great attention for smallness of stature. They were of Polish birth and were people of great accomplishments and elegant manners. When the brother, Count Berowlaski, was one year old he measured fourteen inches in height. Five years after he had gained but three inches, but at the age of twenty the measurement was six inches more, and then the growth ceased. The sister, Anastasia, seven years younger, could stand under her brother's arm. The count lived over ninety years.

Art Criticism.

"This artist," remarked the teacher at the conclusion of the drawing lesson, "painted many other beautiful pictures, which were hung in the galleries of Paris. Now I want you little boys and girls to write me a composition about this great painter."

One of said little boys wrote. "The artist painted many beautiful pictures, for which he was hung on the gallows in Paris."—Chicago Herald.

Quite Necessary.

"A ship doesn't have to have an anchor, does she?"

"Of course, she does. Why do you ask that?"

"But even if she loses her anchor, doesn't she still keep her hold?"—Baltimore American.

WARDEN'S WIFE SLAIN IN PRISON

Mrs Edmund M. Allen Assaulted and Burned to Death.

FIRE STARTED TO HIDE CRIME

Buzzer Alarm From Murdered Woman's Quarters Fails to Get Prompt Response—Negro Trusty Placed in Solitary Confinement—Warden Allen Humane Official.

CHICAGO — Mrs. Edward M. Allen, wife of the warden, was murdered in her bed room on the third floor of the administration building of the state penitentiary at Joliet early Sunday morning.

It is believed that an attempt was made to attack Mrs. Allen before she was struck down. Then, when she was either dead or unconscious, her body was placed on the bed, a quantity of wood alcohol poured over it, and the bed clothes ignited.

The crime was accomplished within a remarkably short space of time, as the electric buzzer, by which Mrs. Allen made her calls for the convict who acted as house servant in the warden's private quarters had sounded but a few minutes before two other convicts, who had not been able to find the houseman, made their way to the third floor of the building to answer the call, and found smoke emptying into the hall and the room aflame.

Pressed Button as Alarm.

Mrs. Allen was a young and very handsome woman in robust health, but evidently was cowed into a state bordering upon helplessness when she divined the purpose of the convict who entered her bed room. Her first impulse was to press the button at the side of her bed and summon a "trusty" to her aid. The buzzer sounded sharp calls in rapid succession and then was quiet. It is possible that her hand was at the button when she was attacked.

Convict Slayer Unknown.

The man who slew Mrs. Allen, who was the only woman in that part of the prison structure known as the "men's quarters," was an inmate of the institution, and is now within its walls. The question is how to find him out among so many capable of committing such an atrocious crime.

There are approximately 1,750 men prisoners confined in the Joliet penitentiary, many of them murderers who have lost all sense of value of human life, and to whom another murder would mean nothing in their present life or the hope of a hereafter.

Negro Trusty Suspected.

Joe Campbell, a negro sent to the penitentiary in January, 1914, for killing another negro in Chicago, was the only trusty having access to Mrs. Allen's quarters.

Campbell is now in solitary confinement in the penitentiary as a suspect, but he declares that he can easily establish his innocence and an alibi, as he was outside the prison inclosure when the fire was discovered.

Allen Kind to Convicts.

Warden Allen left Joliet Saturday for a ten day visit to West Baden, and Mrs. Allen was to have joined him there Sunday. There were but few of the prisoners who knew of the warden's absence, and this fact may aid in the solution of the crime.

Since becoming warden of the penitentiary, a place his father held years ago, Allen had attracted national attention by his devotion to the policy of greater freedom for the convicts in his charge.

FRANZ JOSEF USING THE AX

Emperor Displeased Over Situation in Tyrol Reduces Generals.

ROME, ITALY — Reports from a reliable source in Vienna are to the effect that Emperor Francis Joseph is indignant at the defeats of his army on the Italian frontier. In spite of heavy reinforcements sent to the Austrians from Bosnia and Herzegovina, strategical and strongly fortified positions which had been considered impregnable have been lost. The Austrians have shown themselves apparently unable to guard against surprise attacks and the Italian advance has gone on unchecked, while the Austrian losses have been tremendous.

It is reported that the emperor has relieved General Dankl and General Rohr of their commands on the Tyrolean front and has threatened the commander in chief, Archduke Eugene, with the same fate if he allows Goritz to fall into the hands of the enemy.

L. FRANK SAVED FROM GALLOWS

Sentence of Convicted Slayer Is Commuted on Eve of Hanging.

GOVERNOR GRANTS LIFE TERM

Prisoner Is Secretly Removed From Atlanta Jail to Prison Farm at Milledgeville Under a Heavy Guard as Precaution Against Any Demonstration Which Might Result.

ATLANTA, GA. — Leo M. Frank under sentence for the murder of Mary Phagan, was secretly removed from the county jail here shortly after midnight and taken under heavy guard to the state prison farm at Milledgeville, upon orders of Governor Slaton.

Governor Slaton announced that he had commuted the sentence of Frank from death to life imprisonment.

He said he had ordered the prisoner removed to Milledgeville as a precaution against any demonstration which might result from any decision he might make.

Removal Carefully Effected.

Frank's removal from the jail here was carefully planned and the officers were able to elude newspaper men and others who might have recognized the prisoners. Leaving the jail by a rear door shortly before midnight, they went in an automobile to the terminal station, where a deputy purchased tickets for the party to Macon. Frank was not handcuffed and was without the heavy spectacles he usually wears. A black slouched hat was pulled down over his face.

The few persons who were in the railway station at the time failed to recognize him, and it was more than an hour after midnight before the report was circulated that he had been moved from the cell he had occupied for many months.

At Griffin, Ga., a Pullman conductor said he had recognized Frank in his car, but efforts to confirm his assertion at first were futile. Telephone connections with the county jail here had been cut off and jail officers refused to cerify the report.

Take Motor Car at Macon.

Governor Slaton was at his country home, several miles from the city, and telephone connection with his home also had been cut.

When the train reached Macon several persons at the station saw the sheriff and the prisoner leave their car, and Frank was positively identified. Obtaining an automobile, the party started from Macon immediately for Milledgeville, a distance of thirty-one miles, arriving at the state farm at 4:30 o'clock in the morning.

Hillsdale Will Get $90,000.

HILLSDALE, MICH — It is announced at Hillsdale college that the $30,000 which the college set out to raise a year ago, has been subscribed.

The college will thereby secure $10,000 additional, making an endowment of $90,000.

SUN BROS. CIRCUS

It is rumored that Sun Bros. Circus will be in Tecumseh some time in August. This is a one ring and two platform circus with a big menagerie Side shows and all other circus attractions with a good street parade.

This circus has been playing in Hudson and other nearby towns and those who have attended pronounce it unusually good.

RINGLING DAY ALMOST HERE

Big Circus Bound This Way On Five Great Trains Loaded With Wonders.

Children are now on their best behavior in anticipation of a real holiday treat on Thursday July 1st when Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows will exhibit in Adrian. It is expected that this city will send more than its usual number of "sawdust fans" to welcome this popular circus.

Ringling Brother's promise many novelties and innovations and a "bigger and better everything" is the slogan. Preceding the regular circus performance the new spectacle of "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba" will be enacted on the largest stage in the world. This mammoth 1,250 character pageant cost $1,000,000 and the costumes, scenery and stage properties are said to be a revelation in gorgeousness. Among the 385 arenic acts, are scores of equestrians including the Lloyds, famous English riders the Borsinis, rolling globe artists; the Josephson Glima troupe; the five highest perch acts ever presented: Big Bingo, the biggest living elephant; five herds of trick elephants; 50 clowns 20 families of aerialists and a magnificent horse show and speed tournament. The menagerie is larger and more complete than ever and features many animals never before exhibited in America. A free street parade will be given on the morning of show day.

ONE CHILD IS KILLED; TWO OTHERS INJURED

Flint, Mich., Has Hurried Chapter of Accidents.

FLINT, MICH. — Three children were injured, one of them fatally, in accidents which occurred a few minutes apart.

Ralph Sargent, twelve, a newsboy, was crushed by a freight car which struck a bumping post, on which he was playing in the Pere Marquette yards. He died in an ambulance on the way to the hospital.

Dennis Hagerman, two years old, son of Leroy Hagerman, farmer employed at the Michigan school for deaf, was stepped on by a horse while playing in a driveway in the institution grounds. His head was lacerated and his condition is critical.

Charles Baker, fifteen, jumped from a bench on some broken glass and his left leg was badly cut.

275 CLAIMED IN MAY BY TBC

Cancer Ranks Next to White Plague in Deadliness.

LANSING, MICH. — Of the 3,147 deaths from all causes in Michigan during May, 275 were due to tuberculosis. This is a gain in the number of deaths from tuberculosis over the preceding month. There were 6,137 births during the month, nearly double the number of deaths. The birth rate corresponds to an annual birth rate of 23.8 per 1,000 estimated population. Five hundred and four infants under one year of age died during May; 134 children, aged one to four years, and 1,028 persons sixty-five years old or over.

Next to the number of deaths from tuberculosis, cancer ranked second with 207. One death from mumps is reported.

CRAIG FOR ACADEMY COACH

Former Michigan Star Yields to Attractive Offer From East.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — "Jimmie" Craig, star Michigan football player who twice was the unanimous choice of all critics for halfback on the All-American selections, will coach the Mercersburg, Pa., academy eleven this fall. Craig, who has been in the employ of a Detroit wholesale pharmacy concern since graduating in February, at first announced he would not coach but he has finally yielded to the attractive offer of the Keystone state prep school.

He was the backfield star of the Wolverine eleven for three years and one year won the low hurdles at the eastern inter-collegiate track meet.

TWO MICHIGAN PLAYERS HIT

Charges of Professionalism in Baseball Against Sheehy and Maltby.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — Upon recommendation of the board in control of athletics, the faculty of the engineering college of the University of Michigan suspended Outfielder Sheehy for one semester and placed First Baseman Maltby on the probation list. These are two of the quartet against whom charges of professionalism were brought by former varsity Catcher Webber, and against whom the athletic board found enough evidence to substantiate Webber's claims in part.

BURNS WIFE'S HANDS IN FIRED LOVE NOTES

Grand Rapids Husband Pnnishes Alleged Untaithfulness.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Building a bonfire of the love letters which another man is alleged to have written to his wife, Frank Belo, aged twenty-five years, a boiler maker, held her hands in the flames until they were badly burned.

Belo alleges that he told his wife he was going to work, but instead of doing so he returned home. He says he found his wife and Joseph Kelly, twenty-four, another boiler maker, in a compromising situation.

He then, according to the story he told the police, collected the letters which Kelly had written his wife and started the fire, over which he held Mrs. Belo's hands.

U. OF M. SAVANT WOUNDED

Rene Talamon Writes Facetiously Regarding His Injuries.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — A post card was received here from Professor Rene Talamon of the French department of the University of Michigan, on leave and serving in the French army. Professor Talamon writes: "The Germans are the people who suggested this nice little vacation by sending me the other day a bullet for my left hand, a bit of shell for my right foot, and a few splinters from a hand grenade for my head. All this ought to keep me here in this hospital for several weeks. I received the whole bouquet in a few seconds on Sunday, May 30, when I unfortunately took the notion of charging a German trench at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but we took the trench."

Professor Talamon was married to a niece of Congressman Underwood last June and was drafted into the French army, in whose reserves he was lieutenant, while on his honeymoon in Paris.

LOSES $30,000 DAMAGE CASE

Detroit Nurse Balked In Suit Against University of Michigan.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — Judge Kinne, in sustaining a demurrer in behalf of the board of regents of the University of Michigan, and Miss Genevieve Read, superintendent of nurses in the homeopathic hosspital training school for nurses, in the $30,000 damage suit of Miss Mary Bancroft of Detroit, former student in the hospital school, virtually decided in favor of the university. The only recourse left to Miss Bancroft's lawyer is an appeal to the supreme court. Miss Bancroft alleges she suffered an infection while a student nurse in the hospital.

French Take Greek Ship.

PARIS — The following official statement was issued by the French ministry of marine: "A French torpedo boat captured between Cape Matapan, Greece and Crete, a small Greek sailing ship, which was navigating with false papers and carrying a mission of Turkish officers sent by Enver Pasha into Tripoli to carry gifts to the Senoussi."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

FRENCH GAIN NEAR ARRAS

War Office Also Reports Further Advance in Lorraine.

PARIS — Another important gain by the French in the region to the north of Arras is announced in the night communique. After the capture of Le Fond-De-Buval, which was reported in Saturday's official statement, the French delivered a new attack in the morning and succeeded in gaining an advance of one kilometre. The Germans made a desperate attempt to check the progress of the French troops, and after being forced to withdraw they continued to rain shells on their enemy's lines. The artillery duel in this region is still going on.

Two lines of German trenches were captured on the heights of the Meuse during the day and further progress in Lorraine is also announced.

LEMBERG IS NEAR CAPTURE

Kaiser Now Watching Last Desperate Battle For City Held by Russ.

BERLIN — Lemberg is about to fall before the eyes of the kaiser. The Russians are preparing to evacuate the city. A dispatch from Permysl reported that Austrian regiments are storming the last line of Russian defenses on a ridge eleven miles from the city, and that Austrian shells are falling in the western suburbs.

Since early Sunday trainloads of Russian wounded have been hurrying out of Lemberg, northeast toward Brody. Aviators have brought word that several trainloads of heavy guns are moving out of Lemberg.

THE ARIZONA IS LAUNCHED

Newest Superdreadnought Christened With Bottle of Water.

NEW YORK — The newest of the sea fighters of the United States, the superdreadnought Arizona, slipped into the water from the ways of the New York navy-yard Saturday. Built at an expense of over $7,000,000, the battleship will have cost the government $16,000,000 by the time she is fitted with her guns and armor plate.

Miss Esther Ross, "the prettiest girl in Arizona," selected as sponsor for the vessel by Governor Hunt of Arizona, smashed a bottle of water over the bow.

BAKED CIGARS.

Before Smoking the English Dry Out All Spirits and Nicotine.

The English bake their cigars thoroughly in the oven until all of the moisture and nicotine are dried out. As is well known, they have the pick of the tobacco crop over there, and what they apply to the best of cigars might well be administered to those of inferior quality which are smoked in America.

Here is what every smoker should do: First, loosen the cigars in the box and let them stand on or near a stove or radiator until absolutely dry.

A moment before smoking wash the cigar in water on the outside and dampen well the wrapper. This may be done at the table by holding the cigar by the tip in a glass of drinking water, taking care not to wet the filler. Then wipe the tip end before cutting it off on the napkin. Water revives the leaf and restores its natural flavor.

What you have previously dried out in the oven is not water moisture. It is the bay rum and other spirits which are frequently sprinkled over the cigars after boxing to keep them looking fresh. Both the wholesaler and the retailer often sprinkle them again before showing them to customers. It is these spirits that impart such a strong odor to clothes in which cigars are carried. Drying and washing afterward will make for a better smoke, to say nothing of better health, in cases where very cheap spirits have been used on the cigars.—Cleveland Plain Dealer

SUBMARINE CABLES.

Placed End to End They Would Reach Halfway to the Moon.

The various governments of the world own together 880 cables, having a total length of 14,480 miles and containing 21,560 miles of conductors. The French government, which takes the lead as to length of cables, has 3,460 miles in fifty-four cables. As to number, the Norwegian government comes first, with 255 cables, having a total length of 248 miles. Finally, as to the length of conductors, the English government comes first, with 5,468 miles of conductors, divided among 115 cables, having a total length of 1,588 miles. Private companies to the number of twenty-eight own 288 cables, having a length of 126,864 miles and containing 127,632 miles of conductors.

The French companies, only two in number—the Compagnie Francaise du Telegraphe de Paris et New York and the Societe Francaise des Telegraphes Sous-Marins—have eighteen cables with a total length of 7,249 nautical miles. The most important of the private companies is the Eastern Telegraph company, which operates seventy-five cables, with a total length of 25,347 miles The total number of cables in the world is 1,168, with a total length of 140,347 miles and 149,193 miles of conductors. This is not sufficient to reach to the moon, but would extend more than halfway there.—London Tit-Bits

The Ancient Brahmans.

The Brahmans were the lawyers, priests, professors, the sole instructed class, the sole authorities on taste, morality, the sole depositaries of whatever stood in the place of science. Everybody was to minister unto them, everybody to give way to them. The Brahman was above the law. He was "not to be subjected to corporal punishment, must not be imprisoned or fined or exiled or reviled." In the law of the Vishnu it was written: "The Brahmans sustain the world. It is by the favor of the Brahmans that the gods reside in heaven." Under English rule and ideas the ancient caste has lost some of its prestige, but is still a forcible reminder of its former grandeur.—New York American.

An Early Legal Blunder.

Dyeing, or, at any rate, the madder root used in it, was the subject of one of the oddest of England's legislative blunders. In the reign of George III. it was found necessary to regulate the trade in madder, and accordingly an act was passed for that purpose. Tests of its purity were ordained, and various regulations spread the length of the act to over sixty sections. But when it was finally passed into law it was found that madder was not once mentioned by name in it. In fact, those called upon to administer it had no official knowledge of what the act was talking about.—London Telegraph.

DOCTOR, AGED 99, ARRESTED

Authorities Charge Near-Centenarian With "Quackery."

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Deprived of his only means of livelihood, "Dr." A. J. Allison, ninety-nine years old, told the police that he did not care what they did with him. For thirty or forty years he has sold herb medicines about southern Michigan, but was arrested on request of Stanton authorities, who charge him with being a "quack."

The aged man objects to being arrested now for an alleged offense committed steadily for half a century.

Jail Term His Apprenticeship.

Jackson, Mich., June 19.—John McDonald, who has just completed a ninety day sentence in the Centerville jail for liquor law violation, has been appointed turnkey by Sheriff Cupp of St. Joseph county.

Fly Menaces Kent County Wheat.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Kent county wheat growers are discouraged over the conditions of some of the wheat fields, owing to the havoc wrought by the Hessian fly.

HE WAS HUNGRY.

Under the Circumstances His Jumble of Words Was Excusable.

Professor Sigmond Freud, the eminent German scholar, has made a study of lingual blunders, spoken and printed, and has embodied the result in his book, "Psychopathology." As an example of blundering speech caused by subconscious cerebration he gives the following:

"A wealthy but not very generous American host invited his friends to an evening party. Everything went well until about midnight, when there was an intermission for supper. To the disappointment of many of the guests there was no real supper. Instead they were regaled with thin sandwiches and lemonade.

"As it was during the presidential campaign, the conversation turned upon the different candidates, and as the discussion grew warmer one of the guests, an ardent Progressive, remarked to the host:

"'You may say what you please about Roosevelt, but there is one thing he can always be relied upon to do—he always gives you a square meal.'

"He meant, of course, to say a 'square deal.' The assembled guests burst into a roar of laughter, to the great embarrassment both of the speaker and of the host."

NINE ARE DROWNED, SCORES ARE PERILED

Current Drags Down Bathers at Atlantic City.

ATLTNTIC CITY, N. J. — Nine persons were drowned and scores of others were pulled from the surf unconscious, including several life guards who braved the most treacherous seas in the history of the bathing here in daring efforts to save visitors who had become imperiled when the current dragged them out into deep water.

The known dead are:

Miss Marian R. Creamer, eighteen, daughter of James Cramer of Jenkintown, Pa.; John Lisle of Philadelphia, lawyer; Philip Arnold, eighteen, son of a Philadelphia clothing merchant; William Crow, forty-eight, of Philadelphia; James McCay, fifty, florist, of Philadelphia; Charles J. Matlock of Philadelphia; Frank Brigham, sixteen, son of Commodore Martin E. Brigham of Philadelphia; Captain Charles Green, forty-four, fisherman, of Atlantic City.

Besides these a man and woman are believed to have perished. The man's name is believed to be Arnold; the girl's is unknown. The man and woman were torn from their feet while breasting the breakers at Sovereign avenue.

GRODEK TAKEN BY TEUTONS

General Von Mackensen Storms Enemy's Trenches, Berlin Claims.

BERLIN — via London — The German army headquarters statement says:

"The armies under General Von McKensen have taken the Grodek position. After stubborn fighting enemy trenches, one behind the other, almost along the entire front, extending over a distance of thirty-five kilometres, north of Janow, Blaputa and Obedynski and southeast of Rawa-Ruska have been stormed. The enemy has been thrown back behind the high road to Solkiew, north of Lemberg and Rawa-Ruska."

WILL BUILD BIG ZINC PLANT

Judge Gary Announces New Project by Steel Corporation.

NEW YORK. — E. H. Gary, the president of the United States Steel corporation, announced that the corporation had decided to build a plant near Pittsburgh for the manufacture of zinc and by-products. Judge Gary said:

"We have decided to build near Pittsburgh, probably at Donora, a new plant for the manufacture of zinc and its by-products, including sulphuric acid, at a cost of from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000. We have for some years been considering the building of such a plant in order to supply material for our own use."

Haytien Revolutionists Defeated.

CAPE HATIEN, HATYI — Cape Hatien was captured by the government forces. Marines have been landed from the French cruiser Descartes. The city is calm. Dr. Rosalvo Bobo, leader of the revolutionists, and his followers are in flight toward the village of Trou.

JAPANESE UMBRELLA TRICK.

It Was a Street Incident That Led Up to the Clever Feat.

Feats with an umbrella—of the Japanese kind—are very common. The juggler throws up a ball, catches it on the top of an open umbrella and, by twisting the handle rapidly, causes the ball to run round the edge of the umbrella. A similar feat is performed with curtain rings and with coins. The smaller and lighter the coin the more difficult the feat.

All these feats were originated by a street performer in Japan. One day while passing under the walls of a castle a small audience collected on the top of the wall and playfully dropped some tangerines on to the comedian of the company of struggling jugglers. (No such company is complete without a comedian.) The next day the comedian was treated in the same manner, and so he put up a paper umbrella to shield himself. The shower of tangerines broke through the umbrella.

Then the leading juggler of the company saw his opportunity. He took the umbrella, twisted it quickly and by making it revolve caused the tangeries to fly off. While he was doing this he was helped by a lucky accident. One of the tangerines rolled round the umbrella once before dropping on the ground. The juggler picked up the tangerine and caught it once more on his revolving umbrella, and thus the feat was invented.

The hardest feat of all with the umbrella is done with a Japanese coin which is lighter than an American cent. —London Strand Magazine.

THOUGHT HE HAD CHRONIC DYSPEPSIA

But Now Eats Corned Beef, Cabbage, Pork, Onions and Mince Pie For Dinner and Never Feels a Pain.

Do you belong to the "No, thank you" society of the dinner table where the mere sight of certain foods makes you feel that pain you know would be yours if you ever ate them?

What a weak, easily upset stomach really needs is not a digestive aid but stomach strengthener. Any reliable physician will tell you it's dangerous to continually dose the pepsin digestors and the like His own prescription will act on the stomach instead No physician ever wrote a better stomach prescription than that embodied in the famous MI-O-NA Stomach Tablets that C. A. Wright & Son and most every other druggist in this vicinity sells with the positive guarantee that they must put a complete and lasting end to stomach misery or money back. Mi-o-na strengthens the walls and muscular fibres of the stomach and induces prompt normal working of your own stomach machinery. It gives relief in ten minutes to all the common and uncomfortable symptoms of sour rising, gas, belching, burning, bloating, shooting pains, etc., and in a few weeks, will put the stomach in such a clear and perfectly healthy condition that it can digest a typical New England boiled dinner without the slightest effort or distres. adv

Asiatic Russia.

Asiatic Russia contains 188 rivers with a total navigable length of 13,558 miles and four lakes that can be navigated for 707 miles.

Ironwork in India.

India was the first country which turned iron into weapons. Persia borrowed the art from India. The Rig-veda, which is the oldest record in the world, gives evidence of this. So do also the Astras and Sastras of the Dhanurneda, and during the early part of the Christian era the Indian blade was the most used throughout the eastern and western world. This art reached its greatest perfection in northern India, the Punjab, Nepaul, Rajputana, Gujarat and other provinces, where they still make beautiful arms.

Why He Was Shy.

Passing of Papyrus.

One of the modern mysteries of Egypt is the disappearance of the papyrus plant that once fringed the lower Nile and made a desirable haunt for water fowl. A botanist, recently from Cairo, declares that in all lower Egypt the only papyri now growing in a natural state are in the Esbekieh Gardens fountain at Cairo, the botanical gardens and at the Barrage. Perhaps Isaiah may have thrown the evil eye on the plant, for among his prophecies is the destruction of the "paper reeds by the brooks." If we did not have ancient illustrations to guide us it would be impossible from the present scanty remains to reconstruct the amazing fields of papyri that indirectly helped to civilize us.—London Tatler.

The Immensity of Space.

A photographic plate exposed to the heavens in a large telescope for any considerable length of time shows nothing but a continuous blur of light, indicating that the photographic eye sees beyond the reach of human vision such a multitude of suns that every part of space is filled. One may gain some inkling of the immensity of space by supposing the photographic plate exposed upon the remotest star it now records and looking out still farther to find the heavens still crowded with millions and millions of suns, each possibly having its own planets.

The Law of the Land.

The prisoner's lawyer was making an impassioned appeal to the jury.

"It were better," he thundered, "that ninety-nine innocent men escape than that one guilty be punished."

"I cannot allow that statement to go to the jury unchallenged," said the learned judge.

"Exception," thundered the lawyer, and the jury promptly voted to acquit the one guilty.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Silent Drama.

"Father, I want to go on the stage."

"Do not be too anxious to push yourself forward, my dear. Little girls should be seen and not heard."

"That fits in all right, dad. It is in the movies that I want to act."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BARGAIN DAY

A Big Success, Good Sized Crowd, Exciting Races, Band Concert in the Evening and an All-Round Good Day Enjoyed.

Bargain Day June 23rd opened bright and clear and early in the morning people began coming into town and the merchants were kept busy. As the day advanced the crowd increas[illegible] the races began the street presented a lively appearance. The ten mile motor-cyle race was run by Satterthwaite, Kempf, Price, Cox, Simples, Crouch and Dailey. Crouch winning 1st prize, a tire; Dailey 2nd, a lamp and Satterthwaite 3rd a box of cigars; time 13 m. 44 sec.

Simples had a blowout starting on 2nd lap. Cox out on 4th lap, Kempf out on first lap.

The five mile race was run by the same men, Satterthwaite 1st, a thermos bottle, Crouch 2nd, an inner tube and Dailey 3rd, a flash light.

The Saxon auto put up at auction by Otto Garlinghouse was knocked down to Lawrence Miller of Britton for $350.

The bad concert in the evening was a decided success and drew out a large crowd, the street being a moving mass of people. The small boy was every where with horns and fire-crackers, pistols and anything to make a noise. The first Bargain Day was certainly all right.

Don't forget the next Bargain Day, Wednesday June 30. Aside from the bargains given by the merchants the attraction will be a matinee on the race track with three races. Pacing and trotting. $12.00 for each race to be divided: 1st money, $5.00; 2nd, $3.50; 3rd, $2.50; 4th, $100. Races start at 1 o'clock.

Horses and drivers from a distance will be cared for free.

Admission 25c. Ladies free.

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—The Illinois tax levy for the biennium ending June 30, 1917, for state taxes, will be $33,000,000. The tax levy bill passed the senate at the morning session on the final day of the session and goes to the governor for his signature.

The bill calls for a levy of $12,500,000 for each year for general state tax, and $4,000,000 annually for the school fund.

PERFECT CONFIDENCE

Tecumseh People Have Good Reason For Complete Reliance.

Do you know how—
To find relief from backache;
To correct distressing urinary ills;
To assist weak kidneys?
Your neighbors know the way—
Have used Doan's Kidney Pills;
Have proved their worth in many tests

Here's Tecumseh testimony.

E. C. Brisbin, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doans Kidney Pills went to the seat of the trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand. You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this remedy and it acts promptly and effectively."

Displeased Because Parent Marries Young Woman, He Kills Both.

Jamestown, N. Y., June 19.—Fred W. Shaver, twenty-seven years, murdered his aged father, H. A. Shaver, shot the latter's bride of ten days to death, killed Policeman George Kendall, twenty-four, and while dodging bullets from a dozen revolvers, turned a shot gun upon himself and blew his own head off. The tragedy occurred at the Shaver residence.

Hudson A. Shaver, wealthy retired merchant, sixty-seven years old, married Ruth Campbell, twenty-seven years old, of Jamestown, on June 8. Fred Shaver, who, with his sister, Mrs. Pearl Carlson, are said to be Shaver's only heirs, opposed the marriage. Fred started drinking, the police say, on the afternoon of the wedding and had been drunk ever since. He had told friends he would never countenance his father living with the young woman and threatened he would "Kill the old man and his bride."

BECKER LOSES HIS APPEAL

Must Die Week of July 12 Unless Governor Interferes.

Albany, N. Y., June 19.—The court of appeals denied the application of counsel for Charles Becker, the former New York police lieutenant, for a reargument on its decision affirming sentence of death. Becker, convicted of inspiring the murder of Herman Rosenthal, a New York gambler, now is in the Sing Sing death house, sentenced to die in the electric chair during the week beginning July 12.

Unless Governor Whitman pardons him, or the United States Supreme court interferes, he must die.

Killed Aiding Husband.

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—Mrs. Henrietta Schmidt, aged fifty years, was shot and almost instantly killed here when she went to the aid of her husband, Herman Schmidt, who was struggling with an unidentified negro in their grocery store. Schmidt escaped injury.

PROTEGE OF MRS. G. M. PULLMAN MISSING

Chicago Police Asked to Look for Miss Grace S. Potter.

Chicago, June 19.—Miss Grace Stewart Potter, thirty years old, protege of Mrs. George M. Pullman and a pianist, has mysteriously disappeared and police are asked to assist in the search for her. She has been boarding at 320 South Ashland boulevard and has been giving recitals in the Bush Temple Conservatory of Music. The police search was requested by K. M. Bradley, director of the conservatory, who went to the Chicago avenue station and held a conference with Captain O'Toole. He told the official that the young woman's disappearance is a complete mystery to her many friends and associates.

Mr. Bradley said she has not been ill or despondent and that he is inclined to the belief that she may have met with an accident and has been taken to some institution.

Mrs. Pullman became interested in the artistic qualities of Miss Potter and financed her musical education in Europe. Miss Potter returned from abroad about a year ago. Since that time she has been giving recitals in various parts of the country, more recently in Chicago.

A List of Drugs

Being a Story For Memorial Day

By Captain F. A. MITCHEL

I had done some secret service work in Tennessee in '62 when General Buell was in command of the department of the Ohio, and after Sherman marched to the sea, leaving Pap Thomas in command of what troops remained in the west, I was recommended to the latter by my colonel, who knew something of what I had done in this line. I was ordered one evening shortly before the battle of Nashville to report to the general in person, and when I arrived he said to me:

"Sergeant, I have heard that you are very artful in working your way among the Confederate camps; I want some one to bring me information of the enemy in my front."

"I will cheerfully undertake your mission, general," I replied, "but whether I will be able to bring you the information is a matter principally of luck. But if I can't bring it to you I may be able to send it."

"You should be prepared to send it if you can't bring it," said the general. "And such being the case we must arrange a cipher. My cipher officer will give you a code."

"A regular cipher code won't serve my purpose, general," I replied. "Such codes may do for regular messengers or telegraph dispatches, but what I want is something that won't be recognized as a cipher if it falls into the enemy's hands."

"That would be difficult to invent," said the general.

I then proposed a plan of operations that I had used before in '62. I spent an hour with the general perfecting it and arranging the cipher, at the end of which time he dismissed me with the hope that I would be able to bring back the information in person and would not be obliged to use the cipher.

The Confederates by this time had run out of most everything they needed. Medicines were in especial demand and, being small in bulk, were [illegible]. The morning after my interview with General Thomas I was passed through our lines carrying a satchel, which by a special order of the chief of staff was not examined. I was dressed as a clergyman, cleanly shaven, and flattered myself that I looked especially sanctimonious. Having been born and raised in east Tennessee, my dialect was naturally that of a southerner. I was admitted to the camp of a Confederate brigade holding an advance position and asked to be conducted to the general in command.

"General," I said, "desiring to serve my country (the Confederacy) in some way, yet being a man of peace, I have cast about me fo' some method of doing so. The southe'n people are sadly in need of drugs, and I decided to devote myself to the work of bringing them through the lines. I have made my first incursion into the no'the'n country and have brought back a supply. If my work is appreciated and encouraged by the military commanders I propose to continue in this service."

I opened my satchel and took out a five pound package marked "Quinine."

When the general saw the label his eyes lighted with joy. He seized upon it greedily and, assuming a knowing look, said:

"This is more quinine than I have seen since the wa' began; but, large as it is, my medical officers could use it up in a month. I wish to keep it fo' my command."

Taking a roll of Confederate bills from his pocket, he handed them to me. I drew back, stating that I was doing the work upon a sense of duty and not for gain. He was welcome to the quinine for his share of the proceeds of my labor. All I asked of him was to facilitate my labors. I would like to be passed by him to another commander who would aid me in my next trip and be passed on to the different forces. He said that he could not do that, but he would send me to the general in chief, to whom I might state my case, and I would doubtless receive every encouragement. I told him that my ignorance of military etiquette had led me to make my request as I had made it and that it did not matter to whom he sent me provided I was permitted to bring medicines to those in need.

I gave him a few other drugs, keeping the rest for the general in chief. I was sent to his headquarters attended by an aid-de-camp, who vouched for me, and I found the army commander as eager for my medicines as the brigade commander had been. To him I developed my plan, telling him just how I proposed to work it. I must be furnished with a list of the drugs the army needed. He asked me how I proposed to pay for them, and I told him they would be furnished by Confederate sympathizers in Kentucky.

He turned me over to the medical director of the army, who gave me not a list of what was required, but of a few that were indispensable. I took it, put it in my wallet and promised him that he should have every article mentioned—that is, if I were not prevented from bringing them through the lines.

"I presume you know," he said, "that if you are caught in the work you will receive the punishment of a spy."

I told him I was aware of that and felt a chill at my heart under his gaze as he spoke the words, for it was the fate of a spy that I dreaded from him and not from the Federal government.

I had kept my eyes open, but had not visited many camps. I longed for an excuse to go about under cover of a pass from the general and thought of asking him to give me one to visit some relative farther south. But should I do this? Had he the slightest suspicion of me, he could have me followed. I preferred to ask him to pass me through his lines northward, trusting to my ingenuity to get back again in another part of his command.

I left the general soon after dark with a safe conduct from him and walked up a turnpike for a short distance, when, coming to a crossroad, I turned eastward. Reaching a farmhouse, I entered and asked for information concerning roads and distances. I showed the safe conduct from Confederate headquarters, supposing the family to be Confederates. Something in the looks of the planter and his wife indicated that they were not overpleased, and I wondered if they were not Union people. I told them that I was an east Tennesseean, whereupon they declared themselves surprised that an east Tennesseean should be a Confederate sympathizer, the people in that section being mostly bitter anti-Confederates. Upon this I hazarded declaring myself a Union man, and the moment I did so the bearing of the family toward me changed. They were strong Union sympathizers.

The old folks were, however, for a time noncommittal, but the oldest daughter, a girl of twenty, was less guarded, and since the family had suffered for their Union sentiments she was not only bitter, but showed her antagonism. It occurred to me that I might use her, and I sympathized with her accordingly. I received a good deal of information from these people concerning the different forces in the region, but not enough to warrant my return without getting more.

I was invited to spend the night in the house, but declined. Before leaving I gave the girl my confidence, telling her that if she received a paper signed "Rex" to take it to General Thomas. From what they told me I knew where to go to strike a part of the army different from those parts I had visited. Just before daylight I took position near the Confederate picket and waited till those on duty were relieved. This enabled me to locate two pickets, and under cover of the darkness I crawled in the long grass between them.

Having once passed the line, I was at liberty to go where I pleased. I wandered through a wood and brought up against a negro's cabin. It was by this time daylight, and the head of the family, a man with grizzly gray hair, came out with a tin basin in his hand. I knew well that the negroes were mostly on the Union side, and I soon proved to my satisfaction that I could trust this one. I borrowed a suit of his clothes, and he brought me some berries, with the juice of which I darkened the skin of my face and hands. The disguise was helped by my hair, which was black and inclined to be curly.

In this disguise I went about through the camps in the neighborhood and by talking with various persons acquired a pretty good knowledge of the army confronting our own.

After several unsuccessful attempts to steal out of the lines I determined to try for a pass. While being questioned by an officer who was charged with the granting of passes he noticed a small spot on the back of my neck that I had failed to cover. He at once pulled down the collar of my woolen shirt and exposed the white skin.

I saw nothing for a few moments but a rope with a noose on one end dangling before me. Then a faint hope came that it could not be proved that I was a Union soldier. Next the idea occurred to me of confessing myself to [illegible] federacy, and that, having been suspected while in the Federal lines, I had disguised myself and was waiting an opportunity to resume my mission. By the time I was taken to the general commanding the troops in that locality I had laid my plan. I asked to see him alone, and when he ordered his tent cleared I drew my safe conduct from the general in chief and handed it to him. Then I told him my story. He at once telegraphed to general headquarters for its confirmation and received an order to send me to the general in chief.

I told the general who held me that I had orders to bring south certain drugs that were greatly needed and the delay would be fatal. I asked him to permit me to send the list to a confederate. After much hesitation he assented and gave me paper and pencil, with which I wrote, "Ten pounds quinine, three pounds calomel, one quart iodine."

There were several other items that after an interval of fifty years I don't remember. Signing "Rex" to the list, I showed it to the general. He offered to send it for me, and I thought I was gone up, but I told him it must go through a secret channel or it would never reach its destination. This convinced him, and he permitted me to send it by a country boy that he provided for the purpose. I told the boy to take it to the girl at the farm where I had stopped, and he set out with it.

I was taken to general headquarters, where I was put through a rigid examination. I told the same story I had told before. I was held for further evidence and would doubtless in the end have been strung up as a spy had not General Thomas fought and won the battle of Nashville. In the demoralization which followed his victory I was forgotten and seized an opportunity to walk away.

My list of drugs was a cipher message. Quinine represented infantry, calomel artillery and iodine cavalry; the quantity represented the number of each arm.

Barnes Counsel In Breakdown.

New York, June 19.—That Wm. M. Ivins, chief of counsel for Wm. COMMERCE CLUB

MEETING AT K. OF P. HALL THURSDAY EVENING, WELL ATTENDED.

An Aeroplane is Planned for a Wednesday Attraction.

The meeting of the Commerce club held at K. of P. hall was well attended Thursday evening. Everyone seemed well pleased with Tecumseh's first Bargain Day and pronounced it a big success.

A special committee was appointed to have general charge of all Wednesday sports, Wade Jones chairman, Guy Belding, Floyd Hessen, Leon Temple and Lester Rogers. The committee was instructed to secure an aeroplane for some Wednesday in the near future.

It is especially desired to get ideas from anyone on ammusements for these Bargain Days and the committee would consider it a great favor if anyone with such suggestions would kindly get in touch with them.

A lot of hard work is being put into these Wednesday Bargain Days and it is bound to make Tecumseh one of the most popular towns in Southern Michigan this summer. Something worth while and it is bound to be a big success.

WORDS IN THE MAKING.

Our Language Grows by Terms Created to Fit the Occasion.

Language can be made in the library, no doubt, and in the laboratory also, but it is most often and most effectively created in the workshop and in the market place, where the imaginative energy of our race expresses itself spontaneously in swift creating the lacking term in response to the unexpected demand. Nothing could be better, each in its own day, than picturesque vocables like scare head and loan shark, windjammer and hen minded, all of them American contributions to the English language and all of them examples of the purest English. Hen minded is an adjective devised by Mr. Howells to describe those women who are so common in all walks of life and who are made up of only one aim at a time and of manifold anxieties at all times. Scare head and loan shark are the products of the newspaper office, while windjammer was put together by some down east sailor man, inheritor of the word forming gift of his island ancestors who helped to harry the armada. "Windjammer," remarked Professor Gildersleeve, trained by his intimate knowledge of Greek to appreciate verbal vigor as well as verbal delicacy—"windjammer is a fine word, I grant, and so is every Anglo-Saxon compound that grows and is not made."

But all new words are not of necessity good words. Ben Jonson, who was himself a frequent maker of new words, displayed his shrewdness when he declared that "custom is the most certain mistress of language as the publicke stampe makes the current money," adding as a caution, "But wee must not be too frequent with the mint, every day coyning."—Brander Matthews in Harper's Magazine.

RUSSIA'S MIGHTY RIVER.

The Sluggish Volga Is Three Times as Long as the Rhine.

In Russia the rivers are large and sluggish, owing to their great length and slight fall. The Volga is the longest river in Europe. It is 2,300 miles in length—that is, three times as long as the Rhine—yet its total fall is only a little over 800 feet.

The Russian fondly speaks and sings of it as "Matushka Volga," or "Little Mother Volga," in gratitude, no doubt, for the bounteous supply of fish, caviar and game, as well as comforts and pleasures afforded by this historic stream, which plays so important a part in the economic life of the nation.

The products of Asia and Europe are carried on its waters; the two thousand odd river steamers are always busy, and the huge rafts, consisting often of thousands of logs, being floated or pulled down the stream, represent a small portion of the riches of Russia's inexhaustible forest lands.—New York Telegram.

Where Women Swim Best.

"The Korean women are the best swimmers in the world," said a life guard. "The Korean pearl diving is in their hands. They swim—they don't boat—they swim out to the pearl fisheries of Quelpart, lugging baskets with them. After this swim of half an hour they dive down fifty feet and fetch up queer one shelled pearl oysters as big as babies. They dive till their baskets are full—the baskets are corked to keep them afloat—and after three or four hours' work they swim back home with their catch. The big one shelled oysters are valuable as pearl mines and as food too. A half dozen Koreans will sit down to an oyster as gayly as you or I sit down to a broiled lobster."

SOMETHING ABOUT

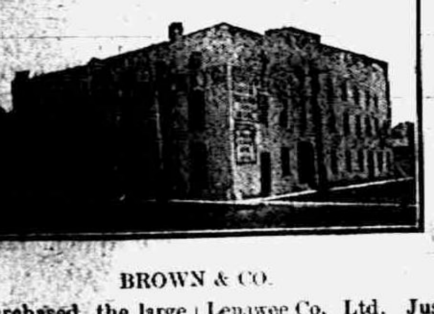
Tecumseh Business Houses Who are Asking for Your Trade

BROWN & CO.

Twenty-six years ago Edson C. Brown began buying wool for L. Frensdorf & Son of Hudson and each year has taken in thousands of dollars worth for that firm. He started in the junk business in the building now occupied by Elroy Zimmerman and from then has been our "Junky".

In 1898 Brown & Co. was organized and they added coal and feed to the junk, wool and fur business. They bought the old skating rink and the firm has had it packed full ever since.

Seven years ago George Hines of Onsted became one of the firm and in 1911 they took in J. F. Rector as partner. They then purchased the large Conkling property corner of Chicago and Pearl streets and now have all three floors of the big building full of stock with coal sheds and other storage buildings on the same lot as well as the building they occupied. Beside buying wool so extensively they are the principal fur buyers in this part of the country.



BROWN & CO.

With Mr. Rector's connection with the firm they added an implement department and he has worked up a fine business in this line. This last winter they enlarged their office and within a few weeks have installed W. C. VanAntwerp, the well known harness maker, here with a good harness-making equipment and a full stock of harnesses. So now when in need of hand-made harnesses the "Old Reliable" can fit you out.

Brown & Co. will buy your grain, wool, fur etc and aim to give their patrons their money's worth in their line.

MOORE BROS.

It was in 1900 that Capt. E. D. Chilson and his son-in-law Harry Moore bought out O. A. Conklin's coal business then located just north of the D. T. & I. depot. In a few months the firm moved their office into the Dewey block and later they bought the armory property. Robert Moore purchased Mr. Chilson's interest in 1905 and they have since carried on a splendid business.

In the early part of 1914 they purchased the old Central Hotel property across from their building where they have a large stock of lumber, shingles, etc—Everything in the line of building material. The old hotel and livery barn have been converted in lumber storage buildings and many feet of sheds put up for the same purpose.

Besides the coal and lumber business, this firm deals in agricultural implements, grain seeds, wagons and buy hay and wool. Every year they ship from this point some 10 car loads of wool and the hay business Harry Moore cares for exclusively. He has two balers busy constantly and ships somewhere around 200 carloads each season. He also has charge of all business outside and R. S. Moore looks after the office and yards. They have just remodeled their building and now have a very convenient, well light office across the front. Extending back to Monument square and along the east side of their building are large coal sheds and they would be pleased to show you over their concern. See them before you place your order for next winter's coal and they will treat you right.

LENAWEE LUMBER CO.

The only planing mill in the village is that of the Lenawee Lumber & Supply Co. and was built in 1892 on the site of the old mill which burned that year. Temple, McClure & Co. known far and near, owned the premises then but sold some ten years ago to the Lenawee Co. Ltd. Just five years ago Fred M. Mulvaney and son Maynard came here from Bellevue, Mich., and bought out the firm, styling the present concern The Lenawee Lumber and Supply Co. Mr. Mulvaney has been in the lumber business since 1880 so is some judge of good lumber. As is also Maynard as he he has been brought up in the business having had charge frequently when his father would be away. At the mill they are putting out all kinds of mill work, window, door and porch screens and window and door frames.

LAND FIGHTING NOT CLEAN.

The Naval Captain Preferred His Battles on the Open Sea.

When Vera Cruz was besieged in the Mexican war Captain Robert E. Lee, afterward the commander in chief of the Confederate army, was ordered to throw up breastworks to defend a battery manned by the jackies of a man-of-war. Lee put the tars into the trenches and soon had the dirt flying, but the sailors did not labor cheerfully. They resented having to shovel dirt, and their captain remonstrated openly with Lee.

"My men," he said, "do not want mud banks to hide behind; just let them get out and at the enemy."

But Lee would not listen, and the tars sweated away at the shoveling. Presently the Mexicans opened fire at the very point thus protected, and the sailors were glad to seek the shelter of the despised dirt. The ship's captain felt that he owed Lee an apology and made a handsome one.

"Well, Captain Lee," he stammered, "I reckon you were right. I suppose the dirt did save some of my boys from being killed or wounded, but you know we sailors have no use for dirt banks on shipboard. All we want is a clear deck and an open sea. The fact is, captain, I don't like this land fighting, anyway. It isn't clean."—Youth's Companion.

WHAT IS ELECTRICITY?

It Seems to Be an Effect Produced by Energy on Matter.

It is a curious fact that although evidence of electricity in a primitive way was observed as long ago as the sixth century B. C. and its manifestation has become one of the greatest factors in our modern civilization, no one knows just what it is.

At different times it has been thought to be a form of matter, a thin, weightless fluid, a kind of force, a variety of motion and a disturbance in the ether—which is supposed to fill all space, including pores in most solid metals. Electricity is not something created by man. He has simply discovered ways of turning its manifestations to practical account.

From the time that Thales observed, centuries before the Christian era, that amber, after being rubbed by silk, had the property of attracting light bodies like bits of paper, discoveries of electric phenomena were made from time to time, but they were detached from a realization of the great possibilities brought to light in recent years.

Electricity becomes evident when rendered active by some molecular disturbance, such as friction, rupture or chemical action. Scientists today regard it as neither energy nor matter, but, like heat, light and sound, it is an effect produced by energy on matter.

It has been discovered that electricity is a self existent property, by which we are everywhere surrounded, and human as well as inanimate bodies can be charged with it. From this we can understand that many more remarkable discoveries of its application will be made.—Rocky Mountain News.

ARCTIC FROST BITES.

And the Popular Error That Rubbing With Snow Helps Them.

The idea that when your face or any other part of your body begins to freeze you must thaw it out with snow is declared to be a superstition by Vilhjalmur Stefansson Few things could be more absurd, he says, and yet this is a superstition that has been carried with many an arctic explorer through long experience in the north. Tales are told of how even the application of snow failed to relieve the freezing, and these are taken as indications of the severity of the case instead of proof that, as a matter of fact, the snow only assists the freezing process. Any high school pupil, Stefansson says, could tell us offhand what would happen if liquid air were applied to a man's cheek or nose. Of course the part would freeze instantly Snow has the same though less rapid effect.

The whole secret of dealing with frost bites of the face in arctic travel, he says, is to keep the hands warm and to run the warm hand over the face every few minutes to see if any part of it is frozen. Usually, also, one can keep oneself fairly well informed about the condition of one's face by wrinkling it and "making faces." If a spot of skin or cheek the size of a twenty-five cent piece becomes stiff one can always detect it by making a grimace. Then all one has to do is to take one's warm hand out of one's mitten and press it to the frozen spot for a moment until the whiteness and stiffness are gone.—Indianapolis News.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

IMPORTERS PLAN TO TEST BRITAIN

Sincerity of Commerce Tie-up to Be Tried Out.

TO LEAVE ENGLAND NO CAUSE

American Houses With Goods Held in Neutral Ports Will Prepare Bills of Lading for Non-contraband in Advance of Sailings to Halt Prize Court Actions.

Washington, June 26.—After a conference today between Secretary Lansing and representatives of the great importing firms of New York city and other cities a plan is being formulated to test the sincerity of Great Britain's protestations that she has no disposition unnecessarily to injure American commerce.

The plan is to station a general agent of the importers in England who will get and present in advance of all sailings duplicate bills of lading certified to and unobjectionable in every respect so as to leave no shadow of excuse for prize court proceedings against vessels from neutral ports to the United States or vice versa.

This proposition will be a complete counter to the intention of Great Britain, as stated by Lord Crewe, hereafter to send vessels immediately to prize courts and abandon diplomacy as a means of settlement.

The action of the importers, it is explained at the state department, has become imperative because the existing scheme of getting special permits from Great Britain bids fair to be revoked altogether by the British admiralty.

Marshall Field & Co. in Move.

The effect of the protest to be filed will be largely enhanced by the people who are behind it. Some of these are Marshall Field & Co., Kaiser & Co., Butler Brothers, Theodore Bock & Co. and importers generally from the big cities. Statistics at the department show that the unobjectionable goods which are held up from the American trade consist of toys, printing paper, clocks, scientific apparatus, aniline dyes, gloves and in fact nearly all of the noncontraband product of the German empire. The most innocent materials coming straight from Scandinavian ports are generally "suspected" by Great Britain as of German origin, and vessels are seized accordingly.

DRY CITY HAS STOCK OF LIQUOR AT LOCKUP

Suitcase Consignment Received by Sheriff and Prosecutor.

Lapeer, Mich., June 26.—Glasses tinkled in local option Lapeer when Henry Wert, commonly known as "Dutch" Wert of the Marshall house, was arrested and a suitcase with twenty-two pint bottles and a gallon jug of whiskey were taken from him.

Wert came from Capac, which is Lapeer's oasis. While en route the Lapeer sheriff and prosecuting attorney were supplied with the tip that landed him in their arms at the station. He had the goods on him.

Lapeer jail is now like a saloon. Wert declares he procured the goods for his personal use. The general belief, however, is that the goods were for men higher up. It is said Lapeer's mayor has a detective at Capac to tip off any attempt to break through the entanglement and trenches of the local option bailiwick.

DOCTOR OPERATES ON SELF

Performs Surgical Feat to Save Own Life After Auto Mishap.

Escanaba, Mich., June 26.—When Dr. John Gross of this city left the hospital a story of how he performed an operation on himself to save his own life became known.

Dr. Gross, four weeks ago, was thrown from his automobile and sustained an abdominal wound from the broken windshield. The injury was such that, to prevent a fatal termination, an immediate operation was necessary. Dr. Gross performed it on the spot and succeeded in driving to the hospital whence he has just been discharged as cured. The story was kept secret at his request.

GYPSUM MINES ARE RAPPED

State Inspector Says Dangerous Conditions Prevail.

Lansing, Mich., June 26.—Thomas Kanary, state coal mine inspector of the Michigan labor department, after an inspection of the gypsum mines in Kent county, reported:

"Some of the mines are in an unwholesome and hazardous condition and the workmen are endangered by the absence of safeguards." Under the existing statutes, gypsum mines are not subject to the same supervision as the coal mines. Mr. Kanary suggests that the law be changed.

Get Rid of Your Rheumatism

Now is the time to get rid of your rheumatism. You can do it if you apply Chamberlains Liniment. W. A. Lockhart, Homer City, N. Y., writes, "Last spring I suffered from rheumatism with terrible pains in my arms and shoulders. I got a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and the first application relieved me. By using one bottle of it I was entirely cured." For sale by all dealers. advt

SAVED HER ARM

Most people in Michigan will be interested in the case of Mrs. A. P. Brown of Dryden, N. Y., whose husband says: "My wife burned her arm so the muscles projected like a shelf. The arm was so stiff she could not straighten it. Physicians failing to heal the arm, wished to operate. We refused and treated it with Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. She can use the arm extensively—Balsam of Myrrh saved the arm. adv

Indigestions and Constipation.

"About five years ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets after suffering from indigestion and constipation for years without finding anything to relieve me. Chamberlain's Tablets helped me at once and by using them for several weeks I was cured of the complaint," writes Mrs. E. McMullen, Phelps, N. Y. For sale by all dealers. advt

VALVE-IN-HEAD SIXES
Buick
EXCLUSIVELY MOTOR CARS

Announcement

The public wants Buick Sixes—so many of them that we shall build nothing else in 1916

Pioneer Builders of Valve-in-Head Motor Cars

Regardless of the car you buy or the price you pay, nowhere can you get greater value.

More enduring than chrome vanadium steel, more wonderful than the finest workmanship, is the idea that can dominate an industry.

In this day, when more Buicks are being built than ever before, it is interesting to remember that the distinguishing characteristic of the Buick, the Valve-in-Head Motor, has existed as an idea for twenty-five years and has been built into Buick cars for thirteen years.

From 1903 to 1907 the Buick Valve-in-Head was a two cylinder engine. From 1908 to 1914 four cylinders dominated the field and the Buick Valve-in-Head Four dominated other types. The Buick Valve-in-Head Six was first put on the market in 1913. Fours were also continued—but the Valve-in-Head Six had stirred the imagination of the car-buying public. The demand from the start outpaced the production.

The demand has become so overwhelming that now—for 1916—the Four gives way to Sixes. Two chassis, both Sixes, with roadster, touring car, coupe, sedan bodies. The Six has been made standard because in the Six the Valve-in-Head idea has its greatest opportunity for service.

Also since the first appearance of the Buick Six there has risen an insistent demand for smaller Buick Sixes.

The Six is a natural, logical, efficient form for the Valve-in-Head type. Never before has the Valve-in-Head idea had such adequate materialization.

This year the Buick factory is arranged for Sixes exclusively. The production will be large. Demand necessitates a steady stream of Buick trains leaving the factory during the season.

And the Power, Economy, Dependability and Comfort of 1916 Buick Sixes justify the demand more than ever. Study the specifications and you'll see why.

SAN-JAK

is the greatest rectifier for the blood and skin yet known. Greasy skin with pimples, blotches, eruptions or scrofula easily cleared away. Its use leaves the blood and skin as pure as the lillies. SAN-JAK for the stomach, nerves and blood is the best the world ever saw. SAN-JAK prevents the excessive flow of poison of fluid into the blood from the super renal glands near the kidneys, causing the arteries to harden in the years past 50. This preventative keeps the arteries soft and flexible, giving flexibility to the muscles as in youth.

You can feel well and active at any age from 60 to 90 years. Man should die from old age, not from diseased tissue. Mothers and daughters can avoid many dangerous operations by the use of this wonderful medicine. The use of SAN-JAK for pain in the back and abdomen greatly lessens the danger of appendicitis. $1.00 per bottle. Get SAN-JAK at

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

CHAPTER II.

"This is our ranch."

BEFORE Berea could reply a man's voice called, "Hello, there!" and a tall fellow stepped up to her with confident mien.

Norcross awkwardly shrank away. This was her cowboy lover, of course. It was impossible that so attractive a girl should be unattached, and the knowledge produced in him a faint but very definite pang of envy and regret.

The happy girl, even in the excitement of meeting her lover, did not forget the stranger. She gave him her hand in parting, and again he thrilled to its amazing power. It was small, but it was like a steel clamp. "Stop in on your way to Meeker's," she said, as a kindly man would have done. "You pass our gate. My father is Joseph McFarlane, the forest supervisor. Good night."

"Good night," he returned with sincere liking.

The hotel was hardly larger than the log shanty of a railway grading camp, but the meat was edible, and just outside the door roared Bear creek, which came down directly from Dome mountain, and the young easterner went to sleep beneath its singing that night. He should have dreamed of the happy mountain girl, but he did not. On the contrary, he imagined himself back at college in the midst of innumerable freshmen yelling: "Bill McCoy! Bill McCoy!"

He woke a little bewildered by his strange surroundings, and when he became aware of the cheap bed, the flimsy washstand, the ugly wall paper and thought how far he was from home and friends he not only sighed, he shivered. The room was chill, the pitcher of water cold almost to the freezing point, and his joints were stiff and painful from his ride. What folly to come so far into the wilderness at this time!

As the eastern youth crawled from his bed and looked from the window he was still further disheartened. In the foreground stood a half dozen frame buildings, graceless and cheap, without tree or shrub to give shadow or charm of line—all was bare, bleak, sere. But under his window the stream was singing its glorious mountain song, and away to the west rose the aspiring peaks from which it came. Romance brooded in that shadow, and on the lower foothills the frost touched foliage glowed like a mosaic of jewels.

Dressing hurriedly he went down to the small barroom, whose litter of duffle bags, guns, saddles and camp utensils gave evidence of the presence of many hunters and fishermen. The slovenly landlord was poring over a newspaper, while a discouraged half grown youth was sludging the floor with a mop. But a cheerful clamor from an open door at the back of the hall told that breakfast was on.

Venturing over the threshold, Norcross found himself seated at table with some five or six men in corduroy jackets and laced boots, who were, in fact, merchants and professional men from Denver and Pueblo out for fish and such game as the law allowed, and all in holiday mood. They joked the waiter girls and joshed one another in noisy good fellowship, ignoring the slim youth in English riding suit, who came in with an air of mingled melancholy and timidity and took a seat at the lower corner of the long table.

As he looked about the room the tourist's eye was attracted by four young fellows seated at a small table to his right. They wore rough shirts of an olive-green shade and their faces were wind scorched, but their voices held a pleasant tone, and something in the manner of the landlady toward them made them noticeable. Norcross later asked her who they were.

"They're forestry boys."

"Forestry boys?"

"Yes. The supervisor's office is here, and these boys are his help."

This information added to Norcross' interest and cheered him a little. He knew something of the United States forest service and had been told that many of the rangers were college men. He resolved to make their acquaintance. "If I'm to stay here they will help me endure the exile," he said.

After breakfast he went forth to find the postoffice, expecting a letter of instructions from Meeker. He found nothing of the sort, and this quite disconcerted him.

"The stage is gone," the postmistress told him, "and you can't get up till day after tomorrow. You might reach Meeker by using the government phone, however."

"Where will I find the government phone?"

"Down in the supervisor's office. They're very accommodating. They'll let you use it if you tell them who you want to reach."

It was impossible to miss the forestry building for the reason that a handsome flag fluttered above it. The door being open, Norcross perceived from the threshold a young clerk at work on a typewriter, while in a corner close by the window another and older man was working intently on a map.

"Is this the office of the forest supervisor?" asked the youth.

The man at the machine looked up and pleasantly answered: "It is, but the supervisor is not in yet. Is there anything I can do for you?"

"It may be you can. I am on my way to Meeker's mill for a little outing. Perhaps you could tell me where Meeker's mill is and how I can best get there."

The man at the map meditated. "It's not far, some eighteen or twenty miles, but it's over a pretty rough trail."

"What kind of a place is it?"

"Very charming. You'll like it. Real mountain country."

This officer was a plain featured man of about thirty-five, with keen and clear eyes. His voice, though strongly nasal, possessed a note of manly sincerity. As he studied his visitor he smiled.

"You look brand new. Haven't had time to season check, have you?"

"No. I'm a stranger in a strange land."

"Out for your health?"

"Yes. My name is Norcross. I'm just getting over a severe illness, and I'm up here to lay around and fish and recuperate—if I can."

"You can—you will. You can't help it," the other assured him. "Join one of our surveying crews for a week and I'll mellow that suit of yours and make a real mountaineer of you. I see you wear a Sigma Chi pin. What was your school?"

"I am a 'Son of Eli.' Last year's class."

The other man displayed his fob. "I'm ten classes ahead of you. My name is Nash. I'm what they call an 'expert.' I'm up here doing some estimating and surveying for a big ditch they're putting in. I was rather in hopes you had come to join our ranks. We sons of Eli are holding the conservation fort these days, and we need help."

"My knowledge of your work is rather vague," admitted Norcross. "My father is in the lumber business, but his point of view isn't exactly yours."

"He slays 'em, does he?"

"He did. He helped devastate Michigan."

"After me the deluge! I know the kind. Why not make yourself a sort of vicarious atonement?"

Norcross smiled. "I had not thought of that. It would help some, wouldn't it?"

"It certainly would. There's no great money in the work, but it's about the most enlightened of all the governmental bureaus."

Norcross was strongly drawn to this forester, whose tone was that of a highly trained specialist. "I rode up on the stage yesterday with Miss Berrie McFarlane."

"The supervisor's daughter?"

"She seemed a fine western type."

"She's not a type; she's an individual. She hasn't her like anywhere I've gone. She cuts a wide swath up here. Being an only child, she's both son and daughter to McFarlane. She knows more about forestry than her father. In fact, half the time he depends on her judgment."

Norcross was interested, but did not want to take up valuable time. He said, "Will you let me use your telephone to Meeker's?"

"Very sorry, but our line is out of order. You'll have to wait a day or so, or use the mails. You're too late for today's stage, but it's only a short ride across."

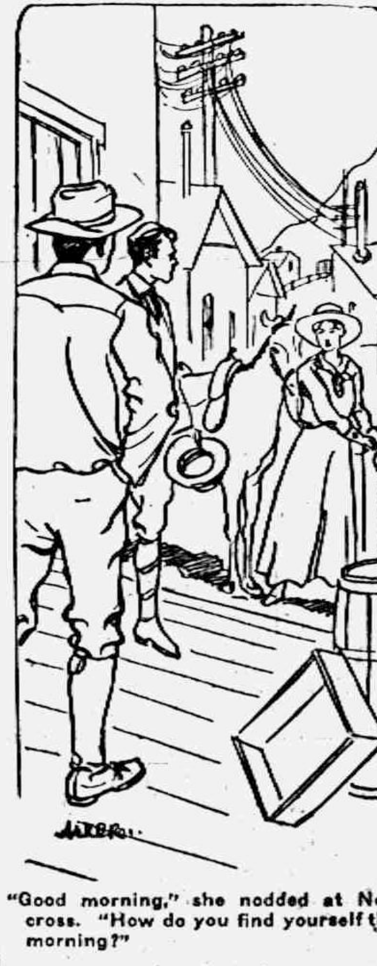
As they were talking a girl came galloping up to the hitching post and slid from her horse. It was Berea McFarlane. "Good morning, Emery," she called to the surveyor. "Good morning," she nodded at Norcross. "How do you find yourself this morning?"

"Homesick," he replied smilingly.

"Why so?"

"I'm disappointed in the town."

Berrie looked round at the forlorn shops, the irregular sidewalks, the grassless yards. "It isn't very pretty, that's a fact, but you can always forget it by just looking up at the high country. When you going up to the mill?"



"Good morning," she nodded at Norcross. "How do you find yourself this morning?"

"I don't know. I haven't had any word from Meeker, and I can't reach him by telephone."

"I know. The line is short circuited somewhere. But they've sent a man out. He may close it any minute."

"Where's the supervisor?" asked Nash.

"He's gone over to Moore's cutting. How are you getting on with those plats?"

"Very well. I'll have 'em all in shape by Saturday."

"Come in and make yourself at home," said the girl to Norcross. "You'll find the papers two or three days old," she smiled. "We never know about anything here till other people have forgotten it."

Norcross followed her into the office, curious to know more about her. She was so changed from his previous conception of her that he was puzzled. She had the directness and the brevity of phrase of a business man as she opened letters and discussed their contents with the men.

"Truly she is different," thought Norcross, "and yet she lost something by reason of the display of her proficiency as a clerk. I wish she would leave business to some one else," he inwardly grumbled as he rose to go.

She looked up from her desk. "Come in again later. We may be able to reach the mill."

He thanked her and went back to his hotel, where he overhauled his outfit and wrote some letters. His disgust of the town was lessened by the presence of that handsome girl, and the hope that he might see her at luncheon made him impatient of the clock.

She did not appear in the dining room, and when Norcross inquired of Nash whether she took her meals at the hotel or not the expert replied: "No; she goes home. The ranch is only a few miles down the valley. Occasionally we invite her, but she don't think much of the cooking."

One of the young surveyors put in a word: "I shouldn't think she would. I'd ride ten miles any time to eat one of Mrs. McFarlane's dinners."

"Yes," agreed Nash, with a reflective look in his eyes. "She's a mighty fine girl, and I join the boys in wishing her better luck than marrying Cliff Belden."

"Is it settled that way?" asked Norcross.

"Yes. The supervisor warned us all, but even he never has any good words for Belden. He's a surly cuss and violently opposed to the service. His brother is one of the proprietors of the Meeker mill, and they have all tried to bulldoze Landon, our ranger over there. By the way, you'll like Landon. He's a Harvard man and a good ranger. His shack is only a half mile from Meeker's house. It's a pretty well known fact that Alec Belden is part proprietor of a saloon over there that worries the supervisor worse than anything. Cliff swears he's not connected with it, but he's more or less sympathetic with the crowd."

Norcross, already deeply interested in the present and future of a girl whom he had met for the first time only the day before, was quite ready to give up his trip to Meeker.

Early on the second morning he went to the postoffice—which was also the telephone station—to get a letter or message from Meeker. He found neither. But as he was standing in the door undecided about taking the stage Berea came into town riding a fine bay pony and leading a blaze faced buckskin behind her.

Her face shone cordially as she called out, "Well, how do you stack up this morning?"

"Tiptop," he answered, in an attempt to match her cheery greeting.

"Do you like our town better?"

"Not a bit! But the hills are magnificent."

"Anybody turned up from the mill?"

"No, I haven't heard a word from there. The telephone is still out of commission."

"They can't locate the break. Uncle Joe sent word by the stage driver asking us to keep an eye out for you and send you over. I've come to take you over myself."

"That's mighty good of you, but it's a good deal to ask."

"I want to see Uncle Joe on business, anyhow, and you'll like the ride better than the journey by stage."

Leaving the horses standing with their bridle reins hanging on the ground, she led the way to the office.

"When father comes in tell him where I've gone and send Mr. Norcross' packs by the first wagon."

"You'd better take my bay," said Berea. "Old Paintface there is little notional."

Norcross approached his mount with a caution which indicated that he had at least been instructed in range horse psychology, and as he gathered his reins together to mount, Berrie remarked:

"I hope you're saddle wise."

"I had a few lessons in a riding school," he replied modestly.

Young Downing approached the girl with a low voiced protest. "You oughtn't to ride old Paint. He nearly pitched the supervisor the other day."

"I'm not worried," she said and swung to her saddle.

The ugly beast made off in a tearing sidewise rush, but she smilingly called back, "All set." And Norcross followed her in high admiration.

Eventually she brought her broncho to subjection, and they trotted off together along the wagon road quite comfortably. By this time the youth had forgotten his depression, his homesickness of the morning. The valley was again enchanted ground.

After shacking along between some rather sorry fields of grain for a mile or two Berea swung into a side trail "I want you to meet my mother," she said.

The grassy road led to a long, one story, half log, half slab house which stood on the bank of a small, swift, willow bordered stream.

"This is our ranch," she explained "All the meadow in sight belongs to us."

The young easterner looked about in astonishment. Not a tree bigger than his thumb gave shade. The gate of the cattle corral stood but a few feet from the kitchen door, and rusty beef bones, bleaching skulls and scraps of sun dried hides littered the ground or hung upon the fence. Exteriorly the low cabin made a drab, depressing picture, but as he alighted, upon Berea's invitation, and entered the house he was met by a sweet faced, brown haired little woman, in a neat gown, whose bearing was not in the least awkward or embarrassed.

"This is Mr. Norcross, the tourist I told you about," explained Berrie.

Mrs. McFarlane extended her small hand with friendly impulse. "I'm very glad to meet you, sir. Are you going to spend some time at the mill?"

"I don't know. I have a letter to Mr. Meeker from a friend of mine who hunted with him last year, a Mr Sutler."

"Mr. Sutler! Oh, we know him very well. Won't you sit down?"

The interior of the house was not only well kept, but possessed many evidences of refinement. A [illegible] piano stood against the [illegible], books and magazines [illegible] littered the table, and Norcross, feeling the force of Nash's half expressed criticism [illegible], listened intently to Mrs. McFarlane's apologies for the condition of the farm yard.

"Well," said Berea sharply, "if we're to reach Uncle Joe's for dinner we'd better be scratching the hills." And to her mother she added, "I'll pull in about dark."

The mother offered no objection to her daughter's plan, and the young people rode off together directly toward the high peaks to the east.

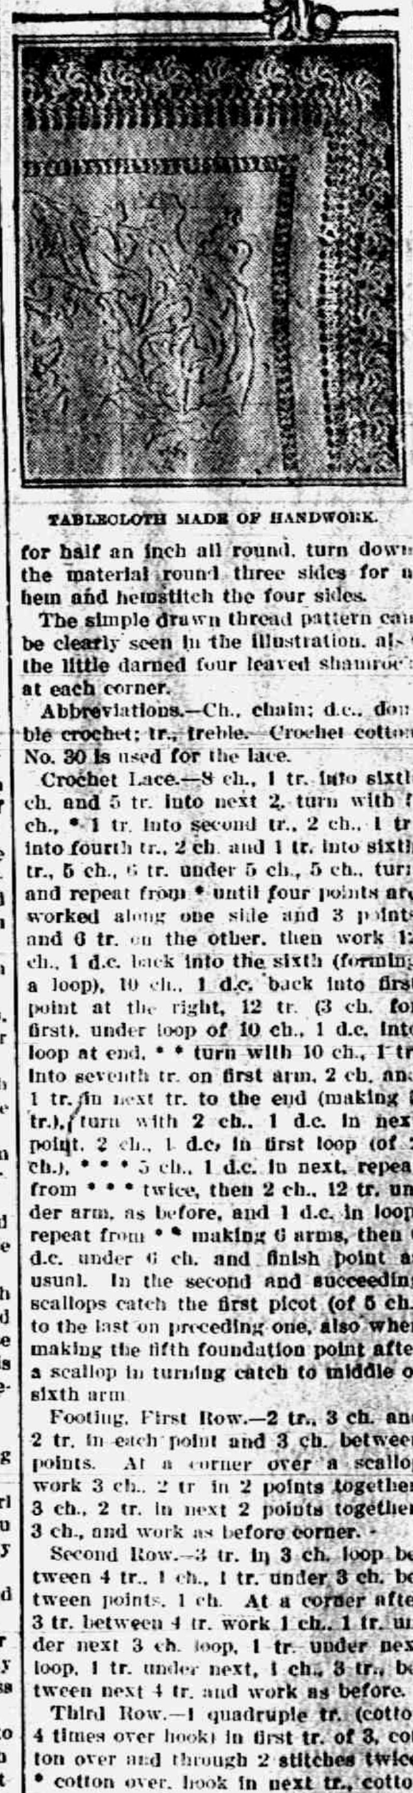
LACE AND EMBROIDERY.

Directions For Making Corner of a Table Spread.

Embroidery.—Most of the leaves are outlined in buttonhole stitch, others have one side worked in buttonhole stitch and the other side in chain, snail trail or stem stitches. The veins, scrolls and stems are done in stem stitch and the fillings of the leaves in honeycomb, herringbone, braid or buttonhole stitch, the latter in one or two rows. Work the small leaves on the scrolls and stems in satin, buttonhole or herringbone stitch and turnovers in buttonhole stitch. The flowers are treated in the same way as the large leaves and their sepals worked in satin stitch.

Drawnwork.—For the band of drawnwork leave one and three-quarters inches of linen and draw out threads for half an inch all round, turn down the material round three sides for a hem and hemstitch the four sides.



TABLECLOTH MADE OF HANDWORK.

The simple drawn thread pattern can be clearly seen in the illustration, also the little darned four leaved shamrock at each corner.

Scientific Farming

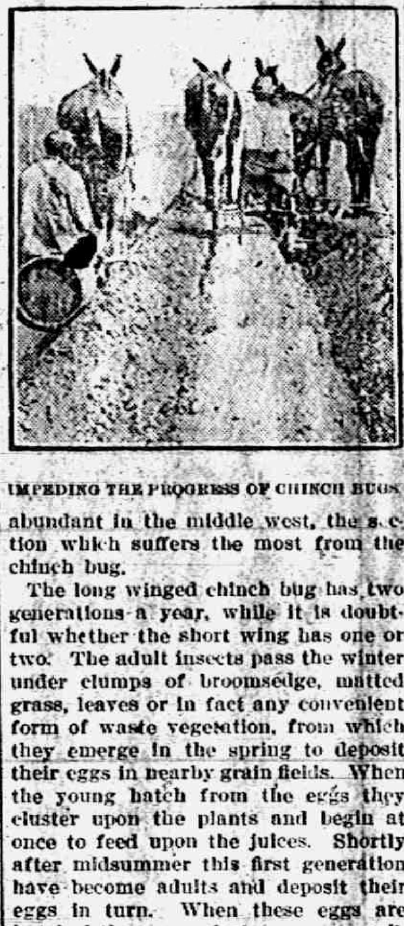
FIGHTING THE CHINCH BUG.

Checking an Advance of Bugs In Wheat or Corn Field.

[Prepared by the United States department of agriculture.]

The seriousness of the devastations of the chinch bug varies greatly from year to year, chiefly on account of weather conditions. In some years the inroads made upon the wheat and corn crops have been very serious. If the fight against the pest is started late in winter or very early spring the burning of waste vegetation is recommended by the United States department of agriculture as the most satisfactory control. If the elimination of the chinch bug is delayed until harvest time some form of barrier is practical. It is said indeed that if it were not for an occasional season of heavy rains at the right time the chinch bug would make it altogether unprofitable to raise grain year after [illegible] same areas. Drenching rains during the hatching season always prove fatal to the young, and such wet periods are sufficiently frequent to keep the numbers of the pests within bounds.

The two forms of the chinch bug are known respectively as the long wing and the short wing. The short winged form occurs along the seacoast and inland along the lower lakes to northern Illinois. The long winged form is found all over the country east of the Rocky mountains and is especially abundant in the middle west, the section which suffers the most from the chinch bug.



IMPEDING THE PROGRESS OF CHINCH BUGS

The long winged chinch bug has two generations a year, while it is doubtful whether the short wing has one or two. The adult insects pass the winter under clumps of broomsedge, matted grass, leaves or in fact any convenient form of waste vegetation, from which they emerge in the spring to deposit their eggs in nearby grain fields. When the young hatch from the eggs they cluster upon the plants and begin at once to feed upon the juices. Shortly after midsummer this first generation have become adults and deposit their eggs in turn. When these eggs are hatched the young fasten on corn, millet, Kaffir and similar crops.

To control the pest, therefore, the department of agriculture recommends in the first place the cleaning up of all fence rows and roadsides and the burning during winter of grass and rubbish about the farm. This not only destroys large numbers of the bugs, but deprives them of shelter through the winter, so that where the work is thoroughly done comparatively few will survive to the breeding season. In the fall or spring green or wet grass will shelter a certain proportion of the bugs from the fire, so it is important that the burning be done in the early winter.

Where this precaution has been neglected or where the negligence of a neighbor has exposed a farmer to loss through no fault of his own, there may be about midsummer a great migration of the bugs from the wheat to the corn field. This presents another favorable opportunity to destroy the pests. Various kinds of barriers are in use to turn the invading army aside. One of the most satisfactory of these is said to be the coal tar line supplemented with post holes. The bugs will not cross the coal tar and, moving along the line of the barrier, fall or are crowded by other bugs into the post holes, where they can be killed at will. As the bugs mass along the line of coal tar they present an appearance not unlike a reddish brown stream running into the post holes. This method has been found thoroughly practical. It is important, however, especially in dusty weather, to keep the coal tar line fresh, for as soon as it is covered with dirt the bugs can pass over it without difficulty. If coal tar is not available petroleum or road oil may be substituted.

Another method is to plow a furrow around the field to be protected with a side so steep that the bugs cannot crawl out of it. In the case of showery weather, when the sides of the furrow cannot be kept loose and dry, the bottom can be cleaned out with a shovel, making the sides more perpendicular and the bottom smoother. The bugs will then follow along the bottom instead of trying to climb out of the furrow, and if holes are dug at intervals of thirty or forty feet the pests will fall into them and can then be killed by kerosene. The coal tar line is probably preferable to the furrow except in cases of exceptionally dry, windy weather.

In a Braid.

A youthful bride had undertaken to keep house. She went to the municipal markets of course. One day the man at the vegetable stall displayed, for her admiration, a bunch of fine asparagus, "picked not three hours ago," he said.

The new housekeeper gazed upon the asparagus with unaffected amazement. "Does it grow like that?" she asked. "I always supposed the cook braided the ends of it."—New York Post.

POISON FOR WEEDS.

An Arsenic Spray Used With Success In Hawaii.

Officials of the department of agriculture are greatly interested in reports received from Hawaii to the effect that one of the big sugar companies has adopted as a regular field practice the system of destroying weeds by use of an arsenic poison spray instead of by hoeing.

Experts who have conducted experiments on Hawaii sugar lands estimate that by the spraying method a saving can be made in labor of $15 to $30 per acre per annum.

The latest developments along this line in Hawaii are discussed in a letter received from Professor H. P. Agee, director of the experiment station staff of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' association. Before going to Hawaii Professor Agee co-operated with the department in experiments on Louisiana sugar land.

The value of this method in Hawaii is very great because of the fact that, like most tropical regions, the islands are subject to torrential rains. The less the surface of sugar and other lands is disturbed by cultivation the less chance there is that heavy rains will wash off the top soil or immediately beat it into compact form.

A few years ago the department of agriculture issued a bulletin dealing with the weed factor in the cultivation of corn, following a series of experiments extending over several years, which apparently established the principle that it is the removal of the weeds rather than the cultivation proper that contributes most of the production of the corn crop. A series of 125 experiments were conducted, covering many states. On some plots the most approved methods of cultivation were employed, while on other plots there was no cultivation whatever, the weeds being eliminated by surface scraping with a hoe.

A general average of all these experiments showed that the plots that were simply weeded produced 95.1 per cent as much fodder and 99.108 per cent as much grain as those that were subjected to the most approved methods of cultivation.

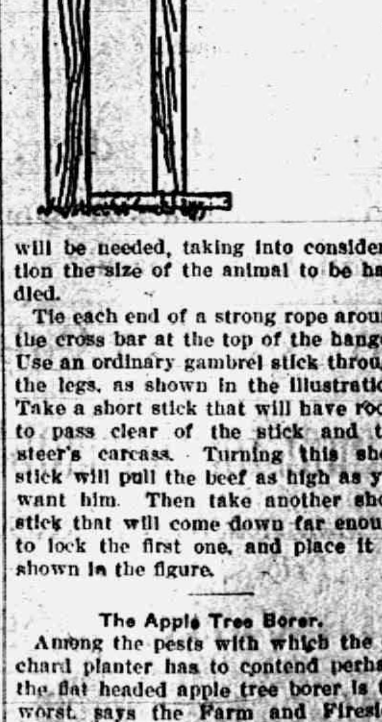
The arsenic spray method will be given a trial on corn land in Louisiana this year by experts of the office of farm management in co-operation with local authorities with a view to determining whether it is not available for use in that region, where climatic conditions to some extent approach those in Hawaii.

In Hawaii the spray is applied to the weeds with great care, since if it touches the leaves on the cane they are immediately destroyed. When carefully applied, however, either by a hand spray or by a spray consisting of an oil barrel attached to a stone sled especially constructed for the purpose and pulled by one mule there is no danger to the cane.

Frequently it is necessary to follow the sled spray with a hand spray in order to kill the few weeds that are not reached. The results of the spraying method have been so satisfactory that experiments are being connected with a view to improving the somewhat crude implements now in use.

To Swing a Beef.

Swinging a heavy steer to dress him is not child's play. By using the accompanying device, which is easily made, it can be done fairly well and without the usual straining and lifting. Make the rack as high as you think will be needed, taking into consideration the size of the animal to be handled.



Tie each end of a strong rope around the cross bar at the top of the hanger. Use an ordinary gambrel stick through the legs, as shown in the illustration. Take a short stick that will have room to pass clear of the stick and the steer's carcass. Turning this short stick will pull the beef as high as you want him. Then take another short stick that will come down far enough to lock the first one, and place it as shown in the figure.

The Apple Tree Borer.

Among the pests with which the orchard planter has to contend perhaps the flat headed apple tree borer is the worst, says the Farm and Fireside. The female deposits the eggs at the beginning of hot weather on the bark of young fruit trees near the ground. Most of the damage is done during the summer months. The later broods remain in the trees all winter and emerge the following spring. The borer completes its life round in one year. The eggs are about as large as the head of a pin and are covered by a hard shell. When first hatched the larva can hardly be seen with the naked eye.

But in spite of its small size it begins at once to injure the tree. Burrowing into the bark it tunnels its way entirely around the sapwood of the tree, thus girdling and finally killing it.

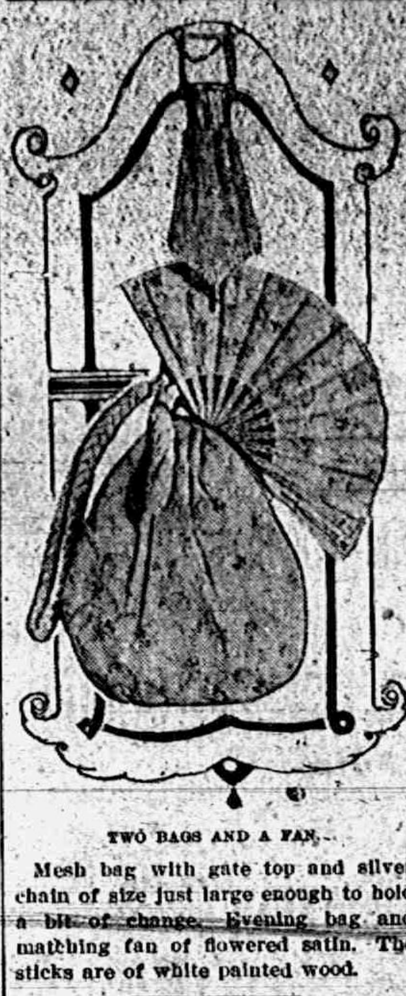
SUMMER ACCESSORIES.

The Fan With Bag Is Another Mid-Victorian Resurrection.



TWO BAGS AND A FAN.

Mesh bag with gate top and silver chain of size just large enough to hold a bit of change. Evening bag and matching fan of flowered satin. The sticks are of white painted wood.

PAINT AND PAINT BRUSH.

Now Is the Time When Bright Sunlight Shows All the Dingy Places.

Paint and paint brush should be as close friends of the housewife as are needle and thread. Perhaps it is the unconscious psychology exercised on women by good paint advertising or perhaps it is because they are skillful at it that they enjoy odd bits of painting about the house. The can of "ready mixed" covers a multitude of sins of commission from heels, hands, knocks, scrapings and rough treatment generally.

There is the baby buggy of wicker, stained and dirty from long use. A small can of stain and a couple of coats of black on the springs and wheels will make it withstand the still harder test of spring showers. Then, baby's iron crib looks as though it has incipient measles where baby has dented off the enamel with the stock of its toy gun. Two coats, or, better, three, of white paint and enamel will cover up the blisters and make the crib as sanitary and pleasing as when new.

On close inspection the gas stove and its pipes appear rustily dingy and down-in-the-mouth, as it were. Ah, just the thing! A small can of special stove paint in black will make the stove gleam happily again and remove its unkempt air. Perhaps, too, the radiators are spotted and shineless. It is only the work of a half hour to paint them with special silver or gold radiator paint.

The kitchen is an important field for the use of paint brush and paint. Frequently unsightly plumbing can, as suggested, be made attractive by the various lacquer paints. The pantry shelves need never be hard to clean if they are treated to one or two coats of white enamel. Table drawers also can be painted, which will prevent them from absorbing grease and getting so dirty. The legs and front of the ordinary kitchen table will look better and stay cleaner longer if given a coat of paint harmonizing with the other colors in the room. Wooden salt boxes, strips on which to hang utensils, the space between shelves in many closets, can all be made brighter and more sanitary by a liberal use of paint.

Under the head of paint must be included the great variety of stains combined with varnish or various other wood finishes. These are particularly useful in "touching up" floors, woodwork, certain pieces of furniture, and in staining soiled wicker and basket work. Perhaps it is a favorite rocker which has been kicked and knocked until the finish is spoiled. It is not very difficult to touch it up or to refinish it entirely, first sandpapering it to remove the old varnish and then handling it as if it were an entirely new piece. Taborets, small tables, stools, all these can be made to wear longer and appear like new if treated to the magic of the paint brush.

All woods with exposed pores absorb moisture and grease. Water enters the pores, causes them to swell and thus become disfigured. The more impervious the wood surface can be made the easier it is to keep it clean and the longer the wood will last. Paint, varnish and stain, whose base should always be the best linseed oil, fill the pores of the wood, coating and rendering it impervious. And paint is not hard to clean. It is the open, untreated woodwork which looks dingy, absorbs grease and is hard to care for.

Polishing Silver.

An excellent silver polishing cloth can be made in the following way: Buy an ounce of jeweler's rouge, mix with a little water, rub into a piece of chamois skin and dry.

Cleaning Raincoats.

To clean raincoats sponge them with a mixture of alcohol and ether, to which a tablespoonful of ammonia to a pint of liquid has been added.

Terminology.

His Ad. Answered.

A man stopped at a newspaper office on his way to the theater and placed an advertisement for a boy. Half an hour later one fell from the gallery into his lap.

COLOR AND MOISTURE.

There Is a Good Reason Why Vegetation Is Mostly Green.

Doubtless many have wondered why the vegetation of the earth is mostly green. That is, not what makes it green, but why it is that color instead of blue or red or purple.

Moisture, it has been found, will be collected by the green foliage in proper quantities while foliage of other colors will not be properly nourished by the dews and moisture from earth and atmosphere.

A rather curious experiment proves this.

Paint a piece of glass yellow, another green and one red and one black and place all these painted pieces of glass out in the open air over night during a summer or autumn night.

When examined early the following morning it will be found that the yellow piece will be very wet and the green piece only fairly moist, while the red and black pieces will be dry.

This is proof that yellow foliage would collect too much dampness, and the red and black would gather none. Green, which collects the medium amount of moisture, seems to be the color best adapted to the conditions existing throughout the earth.

Yellow foliage has been known to damp off and decay under the same conditions that makes green foliage thrive.

A few yellow leaved plants are grown under considerable difficulty under ordinary weather conditions.—New York American.

A RECORD PRESCRIPTION.

After It Was Bought and Paid For It Lost Its Charm.

The largest amount ever officially recorded as the purchase price of a prescription is £5,000 ($25,000), paid by the British parliament to a Mrs. Stevens to reveal the ingredients of her cure for "gravel and stone in the bladder and kidneys." Parliament voted this amount to satisfy the demands of the British public; also because Mrs. Stevens would not take a penny less for her secret.

The ingredients as revealed by Mrs. Stevens were as follows: "Eggshells, snails (shells and all), hips and haws, ash keys, swine cress and various other vegetables all burned to a cinder, and the ash mixed with camomile flowers and fennel and other vegetables."

Curiously enough, when this high priced prescription was made public it immediately lost its potency—and its popularity. New cases failed to respond to its magic, and cases which had been cured while its mysteries were still unrevealed promptly developed new symptoms. At the end of a year it was practically forgotten. But its price record still stands; also the record of one instance in which a British parliament failed to get its money's worth.—Los Angeles Times.

Snuff Spoons.

All the world is familiar with snuffboxes, but snuff spoons are pretty little refinements of which this generation has hardly heard. Very probably they came into use about two years after Sir George Rooke's expedition to Vigo bay in 1702, when he captured half a ton of tobacco and snuff from the Spanish galleons, and snuff thus became a common article in England. One of the characters in a comedy published at Oxford in 1704, entitled "An Act at Oxford," by Thomas Baker, says, "But I carry sweet snuff for the ladies," to which Arabella replies: "A spoon too. That's very gallant, for to see some people run their fat fingers into a box is as nauseous as eating without a fork." In the forties and fifties of the last century snuff spoons were still in use on the Scottish border. They were of bone and of a size to go into the snuffbox. People fed their noses, it was said, as naturally as they carried soup to their mouths.—London Mail.

What Could He Do?

"I hate to be contradicted," she said.

"Then I won't contradict you," he returned.

"You don't love me," she asserted.

"I don't," he admitted.

"You are a hateful thing!" she cried.

"I am," he replied.

"I believe you are trying to tease me," she said.

"I am," he conceded.

"And you do not love me."

"I don't."

For a moment she was silent.

"Well," she said at last, "I do hate a man who's weak enough to be led by a woman."—Houston Post.

Optimist and Pessimist.

In a contest in the Woman's Home Companion the first prize for the definition of pessimist went to Miss D. McKelvey of Colorado, who wrote: "A pessimist is a man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing." The first prize for the definition of optimist went to Mrs. L. K. Carter of Pennsylvania. Her definition follows: "An optimist is one who thinks the high cost of living is worth the price."

Discussion Suspended.

"What became of that good roads movement that seemed to be going so strong out this way?"

"It sort o' died out. The mud got so deep that we couldn't do the traveling necessary to attend the meetings."—Washington Star.

Curiosities of Smell.

No substance that refuses to dissolve in water has an odor. It is the actual substance itself, floating in particles in the air, that appeals to the nose and not simply a vibration of the air, as in the case of light and sound. The damper a thing is the more powerful the odor it gives off. A pleasant proof of the fact can be had by walking in a garden after rain or in the evening when the dew is falling. There is no end to the curiosities of smell. It is, for instance, the vapor of a liquid that smells and not the liquid in the mass itself. If eau de cologne be poured into the nostrils the nose refuses to recognize any odor there at all.—London Family Herald.

Mr. Brown is driving his binder by the fence on his way to the barn after finishing cutting his wheat.

Brown calls out; "Hello, White! What'er you so down in the mouth about?"

White replies; "Guess you'd feel blue if your field of wheat was dead ripe and 80 acres to cut like I have got."

"Why" says Brown, "What's the matter with your binder?"

Some knotter parts broke" says White, "Been waiting four days for the repairs and got to wait three more for a man to fix it. By the way your boy told me you had a break-down night before last. How'd you get yours fixed so quick?"

"Oh" says Brown, "That's easy. Mine is a DEERING and I bought it of Temple of Tecumseh, phoned in and he had a man out here by eight o'clock yesterday morning. We were cutting wheat again by noon. If you had bought your new binder of Temple like I advised you, you would'nt be in this fix. Well so long, I must get to the barn before the storm gets here."

SOMETHING ABOUT

Tecumseh Business Houses Who are Asking for Your Trade

big line of lumber and material with much California redwood, Douglas fir, etc., also wire fencing.

Last year they added the coal business to their other activitiesr They put up an elevator just north of the mill adjoining their side track on the N. Y. central. This building is 30x120 and 30 ft. high, The big shovels are run by an electric motor which also runs the machines in the mill.

For a year or more they have been doing general contracting and now are keeping two gangs of men busy, just having started a new house this week with one gang and the other busy on another job. Naturally they are in a position to give you the right figure on this line.

L. E. TEMPLE & OC.

TECUMSEH CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

Only last winter was organized among 150 of the prominent farmers of this vicinity the Tecumseh Co-operative Association with officers as follows:

President—Dr. C. A. Waldron.
Vice President—Fred Ives.
Secretary—John E. Murphy.
Treasurer—Thos. Murphy.
Manager—C. D. Beebe.
Directors—C. A. Waldron, Frad Ives, J. E. Murphy. Thos. Murphy, C. H. Bramble, Chas. Evans, H. B. Eaton.

Their first move was to purchase the implement and coal business of C. A. Slayton & Son and their large building warehouses which have been occupied by the Slaytons for the past 50 years. The new association opened for business here Feb. 8, last and each day has seen its increase in business.

The building was remodeled upstairs and down. An office occupies the north end of the show room and in the south end is one of their latest acquisition, the harness business of Fred Davis which was addded only a couple of weeks ago. Here Mr. Davis is carrying on his trade and will wait upon you quickly.

On the second floor is the big Co-operative Hall nicely redecorated and occupied when not in use by the association by the Tecumseh Grange. Here is also a commodations directors room and a ladies rest room. The remainder of the 2nd story is used for a buggy show room.

The association now deals in implements, feed, grain, produce, building material, coal wood, buggies and, as up-to-the-minute and one step ahead of the rest, the Grant "6" auto.

Another feature which they have recently added and which is being well qatronized is the shipping of cream.

As the stability of the association is proven more stockholders are coming in until now more than 150 are holding stock and the stock in trade has been doubled. Under the efficient management of channing D. Beebe the popularity of the concern is assured.

L. E. TEMPLE & CO.

Fifty eight years ago, June, 1859. S. W. Temple located in Tecumseh as a contractor and building. Seeing the necessity of putting in a retail lumber business, he put in a good stock, purchased the old Methodist church and converted it into a planning mill. It stood on the corner where Richard Mead's home is located. This frame mill burned in 1884 and the next year he built a large brick mill further north on Pearl street. This is now used as a ware house by L. E. Temple & Co. In '87 the wholesaling of sash and doors was started in addition to the large retail business making one of the largest enterprises in this part of the state.

For some time he had been selling coal in addition to the other business. In 1893 he sold the lumber business and soon started a grocery store in conjunction with the coal business. Wagons were put on the road, selling groceries and buying butter and eggs through all the surrounding country, under the management of his son L. E. Temple who had by this time grown into the business. After some ten years farm machinery, buggies, harnesses building material were added to the other lines. In 1910 Leon was admitted as a partner, the firms name being S. W. & L E Temple. After the death of the senior partner in 1912, the business was carried on under the title of L. E, Temple & Co

They handle an extensive line of farm machines and farm supplies of all kinds as well as lumber, building material, coal and wood For nearly 60 years a Temple has been in business on the same site

ALUMNI

TECUMSEH HIGH SCHOOL
1857—1915

Friday June 25

The second reunion of the reconstructed Alumni of Tecumseh High School, was held Friday June 25, with nearly 300 in attendance.

The day was a beautiful one and the program was exceptionally good, and was as follows:

With the exception of the response by A O Howard, who was unable to be present, Gen'l F. B Wood was called upon who made just a few remarks, giving place to Prof. Eugene Wilson who also spoke briefly and interestingly.

MUSICALE

In charge of Mrs. R. S. Moore. Mrs. F. B. Wood, Mrs. Royal Dawolf, Accompanists.

Piano Duet. Les Sylphes, Bachmann—Mrs C. H Williamson, '97, Tecumseh, Miss Genevieve Halladay, '01, Tecumseh

Soprano, The Heart's Highway, Fearis—Miss Bonnie Brown, '11, Tecumseh.

Mezzo Soprano Solo, Come, for 'Tis June, Foster—Mrs. R. T. Mead, '99 Tecumseh

TOASTS

Toast Master, Mr Don H. C, Bowen, '90 Washington C. H., Ohio.

Welcome to the Class of 1915—Dr. L. G. North, '70, Tecumseh, Response—Miss Irene Conklin. '15, Tecumseh.

Old Maids—Miss Lucy Train, '65. Tecumseh.

Soprano solo, Roses in June, German—Mrs. F. S. Moore, '99, Tecumseh, violin obligato by Mr. Duaine Service

Experiences with Unpolished Gems—Miss Jane M. Harris, '07, Tecumseh

Hearth Stones—Prof. Adelbert P Mills, '02, Ithaca, N. Y,

Tenor Solo—Mr. Royal DeWolfe, 89, Detroit.

The musical numbers were all fine and were most heartily encored and each one responded in a very happy manner

The hall and tables were beautifully decorated, great bunches of oxeyed daises ornamenting the tables and bunches of purple vetch were used in profusion about the hall, orange festoons on the walls completed the color scheme.

The banquet was served by twenty young boys who are to be highly commended for their very fine serving.

At the business meeting several names were added to the Association and it was voted that the Board of Education grant diplomas to the class of '65

A resolution was passed that the Board be requested to print a list of the Alumni once in three years, the Association to correct the list so far as possible.

The chairman of the Nominating Committee then read a list of officers as nominated and they were elected as follows:

Pres—Mrs Chas Williamson
1st Vice—Mrs R. S. Moore
2nd Vice—Russell McNiel.
Sec.—Earle Rector
Treas,—Frank Snell.
Advisory Board Mrs Geo. Sanford and Miss Alice Wimple.

There were 84 couple at the dancing party held in Witherell hall in the evening.

Every Alumnus present thinking this a charming complement to the days pleasure.

The Ladies Orchestra from Toledo furnished the music, and as he merry crowd "trippled the light fantastic toe in the giddy mazes of the dance" dull care who laid aside.

Dainty refreshments were sevred with Mrs Mattis as caterer.

Looked Bad For Papa.

William's uncle was a very tall, fine looking man, while his father was very small. William admired his uncle and wished to grow up like him. One day he said to his mother:

"Mama, how did uncle grow so big and tall?"

His mother said. "Well, when uncle was a small boy he was always a very good boy and tried to do what was right at all times, so God let him grow up big and tall."

William thought this over seriously for a few minutes, then said, "Mama, what kind of a boy was papa?"—Pittsburgh Post.

COMFORTING WORDS

Many a Tecumseh Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed—to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. The following advice of one who has suffered will prove comforting words to hundreds of Tecumseh readers.

A. C. Aylesworth, W. Chicago, St., Tecumseh says: "About four years ago I had an acute attack of lumbago and my kidneys were disordered. I at length heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store, I began using. In a short time I was relieved I have had no return attack of the trouble. I hope other kidney sufferers will read my statement and be led to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills the same that Mr. Aylesworth had. Foster-Milburn Co. Props. Buffalo, N. Y. advt

PACKING FOR A JOURNEY.

Here is a Scheme That May or May Not Be of Help.

Jerome K. Jerome recalled with reverence a habit of his methodical uncle, who was a great traveler and who, before packing for a journey, always "made a list." This was the system which he followed, gathered from his uncle's own lips:

Take a piece of paper and put down on it everything you can possibly require. Then go over it and see that it contains nothing you can possibly do without.

Imagine yourself in bed. What have you got on? Very well; put it down, together with a change. You get up. What do you do? Wash yourself. What do you wash yourself with? Soap. Put down soap. Go on till you have finished. Then take your clothes. Begin at your feet. What do you wear on your feet? Boots, shoes, socks. Put them down. Work up till you get to your head. What do you want besides clothes? Put down everything.

This is the plan the old gentleman always pursued. The list made, he would go over it carefully to see that he had forgotten nothing. Then he would go over it again and strike out everything it was possible to dispense with. Then he would lose the list.

Turner's Little Afterthought.

An English critic's reference to Turner's fine picture "The Wreck Buoy" reminds a faithful newspaper reader of a curious anecdote in connection with it. When Turner first sent this picture to the Royal academy it was hung among several brilliantly colored pictures. On varnishing day Turner found the effect of his dull gray rendering of a stormy sea altogether spoiled by its bright surroundings. Without a moment's hesitation he painted in the lighted buoy in the foreground, and its dab of crimson light showed so brilliantly in its gloomy setting that Turner's picture became the prominent one, and its rivals on each side were cast into the shade. It is curious, if true, that the most noticeable feature of the picture should have been an afterthought.

ANCIENT ROMAN THEATERS.

Augustus Made the Women Sit Apart In the Highest Places.

When Rome was in her glory and the theater most popular distinctions between spectators long remained unknown. When distinctions were made the best seats were not assigned to the priests, for the drama had no such religious significance for the Romans as it had had for the Greeks, but were set apart for the more aristocratic portion of the community.

The orchestra was by law set apart for the senators. Later, perhaps after 67 B. C., the first fourteen rows back of the orchestra were, by the law of Roscius Otho, reserved at Rome for the knights, says Art and Archaeology. Similar arrangements obtained in Roman theaters outside of Rome, though in a provincial town like Pompeii as many as fourteen rows of seats can hardly have been necessary for the knights.

Augustus regulated the whole matter afresh. He confirmed the special privileges already granted to senators and to knights. He relegated the lowest classes to the highest seats and made the women sit apart, likewise in the uppermost places. It is possible that he was the sponsor also for the more exact regulations laid down concerning places of honor for magistrates, priests, etc.

The seats of highest honor were those on the tribunalia. Here the editor and the emperor sat on the right side. On the other tribunal the vestal virgins had their places, and with them the empress.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality

Why The Paige Has Swept The Country

IN THE SATURDAY EVENING POST of January 3rd, we first introduced the Paige "Six-46" to the American public. In that advertisement we said.

"It is our conviction that history has repeated itself and the Paige Company has again set the standard of value in the moderate priced field

"Henceforth, "Six" prices and "Six" values will be judged from a viewpoint of Paige achievement

This was the prediction that we made when we introduced the Paige "Six-46"

This was the statement which, we believe, has been absolutely realized in six short mouths.

The success of this remarkable car has far exceeded every expectation that we had for it.

We knew that we were building right

We knew that no better material or sounder principles of construction could go into any car at any price

We knew that—feature for feature—this car marked a distinct epoch in automobile manufacturing

But, with all of our confidence, we could not forsee the tidal wave of demand which has been created in such an amazingly short time.

From every section of the country—from the large cities, small towns and farm districts—there comes a constantly increasing demand upon the factory for "More Sixes—More Paiges"

Dealers have doubled, trebled and quadrupled their allotments in order to keep pace with their orders.

Every night finds the Paige factory working on double shifts—every day finds our shipping platforms taxed to their utmost capacity with more "Sixes" bound for every section of the nation.

In the very middle of our production season it has been necessary to consider plans for increasing the present huge factory

Now, these plans are under way. Ground will be broken immediately, and equipment installed to double the capacity of the Paige plant and produce 150 cars per day.

These are merely a few sidelights on the success of this great Paige "Six-46." If you would know why this car has attained such immediate recognition, we ask you to consider the following facts.

The Paige Marks a New Era

Up to the present time, motor car competition has been confined within three distinct "price classes"—represented by low, medium and high-priced automobiles.

All cars have been judged in comparison with other cars of the same "price class" Manufacturers have been quite content to maintain consistent prominence in their various "price" divisions, and the Public has learned to estimate automobile values by this method of class comparison.

But one, epoch making development has been on the way. One car—three years in the making—has appeared upon the horizon.

And, in less than six months, this car—the Paige "Six-46"—has completely shattered all the standards of "Price Class" and established itself in an absolute unique and individual position.

Because the "Six-46" is a full HUNDRED POINT motor car, we contend that—IRRESPECTIVE OF PRICE—this car offers as much essential value as any automobile made in this or any other country.

Because this car embodies—in full measure—all that a man could desire in ANY car, we affirm that it fixes, at $1395, the topmost price that you should pay for the utmost in motoring.

In appearance the Paige "Six-46" is not only the most beautiful car, but the most distinctive and individual-looking car offered in the American market this year.

Its long, sweeping stream-lines are adapted from the very latest European designs.

Without being in the least bit "freakish," the Paige Six, is "smart" in every detail.

Its character is unmistakable. Wherever you see a Paige Six, on the city street, on the country road or parked at the curb, you recognize it instantly.

A distinctive feature of Paige design is the astonishing combination of beauty with unsurpassed comfort. While a light Six, it is a big Six.

It is designed to seat its seven adult passengers with ample room and luxurious motoring comfort for each and every one of them.

No motor car—not excepting the most expensive cars made in this country or abroad—can offer more motoring luxury than the Paige Six offers. In all essential details it has reached the highest achievement of motor car design and manufacture.

And withal, Paige Design has achieved Paige Economy. The "Six-46" is an economical car. That means more than the low price—$1395. It means low tire bills, low gasoline bills, low repair bills and small depreciation.

The tremendous power and extraordinary flexibility of the motor in this record-breaking "Six-46" have been a potent factor in its nation-wide success

Without shifting from high gear the "Six-46" throttles down to a slow walking pace and then "picks up" immediately to the speed of the wind. It is virtually throttle-controlled.

Paige cars have always been noted for their ease of control. Smooth gears—quick acting brakes—and a responsive steering wheel enable a women to drive this car as readily as an electric. This means not only motoring-luxury, but the vital factor of safety.

Check Up The Field

Point for point—feature for feature—the "Six-46" offers in essential value all that you can find in any car—regardless of price.

There is nothing better than the best. You can only hope to get out of a motor car precisely what the manufacturer puts into it.

Nowhere can you lay your finger on one single weakness—one single compromise—in the construction or equipment of this amazing motor car.

No matter how much you may be prepared to pay, you can't buy a better combination of motor car essentials than you will find in the Paige "Six-46."

If this car sold for $5000 we couldn't employ better principles of construction than we deliver for $1395.

Furthermore, the most discriminating motor car buyers in the country have recognized this fact. Men and women who can readily afford to buy any car have selected the Paige—not because of its price, but because of its QUALITY

They have selected the Paige because it is a FULL HUNDRED POINT motor car.

"The year-ahead car"—that is what they are calling the "Six-46" But—as a matter of fact—this slogan is quite inadequate

The Paige has, indeed, created an entirely new Era. In appearance alone it has set the vogue for 1916 design, and will, undoubtedly, be the most widely copied car at next year's automobile shows.

The Paige "Six-46" is a tried and proven success. Once again, Paige has "shown the way".

SUSPECT CONFESSES IN DYNAMITING PLOT

William Lefler Admits Plan to Destroy Munitions Factories.

DETROIT, MICH.—After the police had grilled him for hours without result, William Lefler, watchman at the Tate Electric plant, Ford City, confessed to Crown Attorney J. H. Rodd of Windsor that he had conspired with two other Detroit men to blow up Windsor factories and public buildings.

The confession, as related by the police, is as follows: "I have been employed with Albert Kaltschmidt, who was manager of the Tate plant in Ford City, for four years. When the war started the plot to blow up factories making supplies and ammunition was first introduced to me by a man who offered me $200 if I would handle the dynamite at the Tate plant.

"Three months ago the man commenced to smuggle dynamite over in his automobile at Walkerville. This was stored in the vault of the Tate factory. Another man named Schmidt was to bring over the fuses and time clocks, and I was to supply the suitcases. I bought two of these in Detroit and took them over to Walkerville without any questions being asked by the customs officers.

"The details of the plot were discussed in the office of this man in the Kresge building, Grand Circus park, Detroit. The only part he took in the plot was to furnish me with $25 on account, and smuggle the explosive over from Detroit."

KENT CHARGES TO BE AIRED

DRY CITY HAS STOCK OF LIQUOR AT LOCKUP

Suitcase Consignment Received by Sheriff and Proeecutor.

LAPEER, MICH. — Glasses tinkled in local option Lapeer when Henry M. Wert, commonly known as "Dutch" Wert of the Marshall house, was arrested and a suitcase with twenty-two pint bottles and a gallon jug of whiskey were taken from him.

Wert came from Capac, which is Lapeer's oasis. While en route the Lapeer sheriff and prosecuting attorney were supplied with the tip that landed him in their arms at the station. He had the goods on him.

Lapeer jail is now like a saloon. Wert declares he procured the goods for his personal use. The general belief, however, is that the goods were for men higher up. It is said Lapeer's mayor has a detective at Capac to tip off any attempt to break through the entanglement and trenches of the local option bailiwick.

PEOS TO TEST PENSION LAW

Teachers Federation Head Takes Issue With Fellows Ruling.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — The Michigan Federation of Teachers' clubs will contest the finding of Attorney General Fellows that the teachers' retirement law, passed by the last legislature is unconstitutional, Mrs. Lou I. Sigler, president of the federation, announces.

"I think when such lawyers as Senator Verdier and Representative Flowers, who had charge of the bill for us in the legislature, pass favorably on its constitutionality it must be all right," she said. "We shall do nothing about the matter just now, but after school opens in the fall, some teacher will be called upon to contribute to the pension fund. She will refuse to pay and then the matter will be taken to the courts."

VERDUN PERILED BY NEW DRIVE

Germans Battle Desperately to Cut Way Through Allies' Lines.

FIGHT WITH HAND GRENADES

Paris Official Statement Tells of Close Fighting in the "Labyrinth"—Cattaro Is Bombarded by Italian Airmen—Latins Take Gorizia, Unofficial Report—Turk Envoy Asks Passports.

PARIS — The Germans, in fighting furiously at sgaBtelle and in the trenches of Calonne, are seeking to approach the strongly fortified town of Verdun, according to Lieutenant Colonel Rousset, the military critic. He believes they are seeking to gain control of the railroad from Chalons to Saint Menehould. While they are aiming at Verdun from two directions, the critic believes the efforts of their army will prove futile.

Hand Grenades Used.

A terrific battle, in which both combatants restored to the use of hand grenades, was fought by the French and Germans in the vicinity of Quennevieres, and near the recently captured German positions called "the Labyrinth," according to the official statement issued by the French war department. The report adds that a German surprise attack on Arracourt, near the Lorraine border failed, and that twenty bombs were dropped by French aviators on the Douai and neighboring railway stations.

Italian Airmen Shell Cattari.

ROME, ITALY.—Italian aeroplanes bombarded the Austrian fortified seaport of Cattaro Sunday, according to Scutari advices. Bombs are reported to have seriously damaged the fortifications and the docks.

Cattaro is the most southern port of the Austrian province of Dalmatia and lies near the Montenegrin border. Its harbor and gulf form one of the strongest fortified centers on the Adriatic.

Gorizia Captured, Is Report.

ROME. — Gorizia, which has been one of the principal objectives of the Italians in their march on Trieste ever since the war between Italy and Austria began, has been captured by the forces under General Cadorna, it was reported unofficially here.

Turk Envoy Asks Passports.

Co-incident with this rumor, it was said the Turkish ambassador here has asked for his passports, and will depart from Rome shortly. Neither of these reports was confirmed officially. It was denied officially, however, that Italy shortly would send warships to participate in the operations in the Dardanelles.

NAVAL EFFICIENCY IS ASSURED BY DANIELS

Steps Are Taken to Create a General Staff.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Steps just taken by Secretary Daniels creates in the United States navy a general staff comparative in most essentials to the admiralty systems of Great Britain, Germany and other first class powers. This plan of reorganization is regarded as the most important step yet taken by the United States naval authorities to establish the navy on a modern basis.

By order of Mr. Daniels there is established in the navy, what he describes as the "secretary's advisory council."

With the establishment of this council, which is composed exclusively of officers created by congress, the council of aides passes out of existence. The councils of aides was improvised during the Taft administration it never having been recognized by congress.

In addition to the establishment of the council, Secretary Daniels consolidates in the office of chief of operations, a post created by the last naval act, all the work heretofore divided under three heads relating to operations, material and personnel of the fleets. Admiral Benson, chief of operations, is charged with the duty of operating the fleet, keeping it in a state of preparedness and acting as an adviser to the secretary. He is also designated a member of the secretary's council.

Yaquis Raid Mining Town.

GUAYMAS, MEXICO — Dispatches received here by messenger from the interior say that 200 Yaqui Indians raided the mining town of Sausa, 100 miles inland from Guaymas, assembled the 300 inhabitants and stripped everyone naked, then, while a detail guarded the gathering, others looted the town, packing everything transportable on a pack train. When the raiders departed they took four young girls.

Women Dope Fiends Lead Men.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — There are five drug users among women to one among men, according to a report issued from the Kalamazoo state hospital. This fact has been brought out since the enactment of the Harrison law. Nearly every patient sent to the hospital for treatment is recovering, the doctors say.

May Drop Petoskey Hotel Probe.

LANSING, MICH. — Future action on the part of the state as to the burning of the big Arlington hotel at Petoskey will depend upon a conference between Fire Marshal Winship and his chief deputy, Samuel Robinson, today. The indications are that the investigations already started will be dropped.

GENERAL HUERTA

HUERTA ARRESTED BY U. S.

Held on Bond With General Orozco, Charged With Revolt Plot.

EL PASO, TEXAS — General Huerta and General Orozco were formally served with warrants, charging them with conspiracy against the United States neutrality laws. Their bonds were fixed at $15,000 and $7,500 respectively, which they furnished, and on which they gained their liberty.

United States officials learned that quantities of ammunition had been arriving here lately for mysterious consignees, and believe it was to have been used by Huerta and his adherents.

LANSING IS NAMED AS SUCCESSOR TO BRYAN

Counsellor Accepts Post as State Department Head.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Robert Lansing, secretary of state ad interim since the resignation of William Jennings Bryan, has been definitely selected by President Wilson for the permanent post, and has accepted. Formal announcement was at the White House at 5 p. m.

Mr. Lansing, who is a son-in-law of former Secretary of State John W. Foster, became counselor of the state department upon the retirement of John Bassett Moore, and has been openly regarded as President Wilson's mainstay on questions of international law in all the difficult diplomatic negotiations which have been thrust upon the United States by the European war. It is a matter of common remark in Washington that he has commanded the respect and admiration of the foreign chancellories here to a marked degree.

Mr. Lansing's home is in Watertown, N. Y., and he is just past fifty years old. Since 1889 he has practiced law and began his first diplomatic work for the United States in the Bering sea arbitration. Soon afterward he became counsel for the United States Bering sea claims commission and following that was solicitor for the Alaskan boundary tribunal. In 1909 he became counsel in the North Atlantic coast fisheries at The Hague.

His last work before becoming counselor for the state department was as agent for the United States in the Anglo-American claims arbitration.

BRYAN DENIES DUMBA STORY

Never Stated Lusitania Note Was Not to Be Taken Seriously.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Former Secretary of State Bryan issued a statement denying that he had given the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, Dr. Dumba, the impression that the first Lusitania note was not to be taken seriously.

Reports that Ambassador Dumba had received from his talks with Mr. Bryan an erroneous impression of the meaning and force of the president's note have been current here for some time. According to the former secretary the reports to which he takes exception in his statement have been appearing in the "jingo press" and that portion of the press which is "endeavoring to force this country into war." Mr. Bryan's statement was issued just as he was about to depart for San Francisco.

HALICZ IS TAKEN BY KAISER'S MEN

Vienna Reports Russ Are Retreating From Dniester.

TEUTONS MAKE 15-MILE GAIN

Vienna Claims Over 14,000 Prisoners Taken Since June 21—Austrians and Germans Continue Sweep Through Galicia—Also Moving Toward Warsaw—Petrograd Silent.

BERLIN — The town of Halicz in Galicia, on the Dniester river, has been occupied by German troops, according to the announcement given out by German military headquarters. Besides the occupation of Halicz the official statement announces that the River Dniester has been crossed by the Germans along the entire front.

PETROGRAD — Officers of the Russian general staff now state that they have satisfactorily achieved the regrouping of their forces, necessitated by the German Galician campaign, and that they stand ready effectively to oppose a further advance of the Austro-German forces in Galicia or in southern Russia.

LONDON — The following official Austrian statement was received here by way of Copenhagen:

"The Russian artillery has been considerably reinforced and is violently attacking on the Bukowina front."

LONDON — The Teutonic armies, momentarily checked in their sweep through Galicia after the fall of Lemberg last week, have resumed their advance and are driving the Russians before them along the entire front, according to the official statement from Vienna.

The retreat of the czar's army began early in the morning and continued all day, says Vienna, both along the front to the southeast of Lemberg, along the Dniester and north of the Galician capital, where the Germans have penetrated the Russian lines in their drive toward the fortress of Ivangorod, one of the southern defenses of Warsaw.

Berlin and Vienna reported more vital success in both these movements than has been experienced since the capture of Lemberg, while Petrograd, confining its official report to the operations up to last Thursday, ignores these movements and gives only details of the temporary checking of the Teuton advances last week.

Capture Russ Position.

In the movement toward Ivangorod and Warsaw Berlin reports a considerable gain and the capture of a Russian position north of Rawa Ruska, while Vienna says the Russians are falling back north of Rawa Ruska and Zolkiew.

Following the severe defeat inflicted on the Russians Friday near Halicz, on the Dniester front, the Austrian troops have gained fifteen miles, pursuing the Russians from the Halicz district north to Brehorow, which is near Rohatyn. In the course of this attack the Teutonic troops, according to both Berlin and Vienna reports, stormed the heights of Bukaozowce and captured them from the Russians.

14,274 Russ Captured.

Vienna claims a total of 174 officers, 14,100 men and 26 machine guns captured from the Russians between June 21 and 25.

LOOTING OF CITY IS CHARGED

Officials of Nashville, Tenn., Indicted —$200,000 Involved.

NASHVILLE, TENN. — Indictments were returned against City Commissioner Lyle Andrews, City Controller Miles Burns, and Assistant City Treasurer J. B. West, charging larceny of public books and records and receiving stolen property.

It is charged in a bill filed for a city receivership that the city has been looted of between $100,000 and $200,000 in street contracts.

Train Runs Wild; Two Killed.

GRAVETTE, ARK. — Two men were killed in a collision between a passenger train and a string of forty box cars running wild on the Kansas City Southern railway near here. The dead men were riding in one of the box cars. The crew of the passenger train sa wthe approaching cars, stopped their train and fled.

Two British Steamers Sunk.

LONDON, ENG. — Two British steamers—the Indrani, of 3,640 tons, and the Lucina—have been torpedoed and sink by German submarines. The Indrania was attacked at a point southwest of Tuskar, Ireland. The crew was saved.

Expect Important Naval Operations.

ROME, ITALY — The government has issued a decree imposing restrictions on shipping in the Adriatic sea and it is generally expected that important naval operations are to take place.

Sought to Beautify Rice.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Chop suey is likely to be served without rice in local Chinese restaurants. For the second time in a week City Sealer Fred G. Barnard refused to let the Chinese have rice delivered, alleging that the grain was coated with glucose, and talcum powder to make it look whiter.

Samples were sent to Lansing for analysis, after 500 pounds had been confiscated.

Skyscraper for Wm. Alden Smith.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Plans have been announced by the directors of the Grand Rapids Savings bank for a thirteen story bank and office building to cost $400,000. The building will be the tallest in Grand Rapids. Senator William Alden Smith is president of the bank.

BEAUTIFUL EYES

A Case of Mistaken Identity.

By C. S. THOMPSON

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"Say, Mr. Van Norden, there's a girl been coming here the last two days"—

Young Van Norden looked up with boyish blue eyes, rather annoyed by the loud voice in the quiet of his private office. He was further struck by the man's ugliness—a florid cheek, with smallish, keen eyes and a square set jaw.

"I beg your pardon," said young Van Norden, pointing to a chair. "Your name?" he went on with emphasis.

"Me? Oh, it's all right, Mr. Van Norden," answered the caller, placing his derby hat on the floor. "I'm from the central office. Murdock's my name. This girl—she's been looking for you, as I get it. Missed you both days. So I take it she'll be on hand this afternoon."

"Well, what of it, Mr. Murdock?"

"If I ain't mistaken, Mr. Van Norden, she's coming for money. Just hear what she has to say. She'll tell a sob story if I have my guess. We'll be waiting outside, in case you happen to need us."

Mr. Van Norden let his caller out by way of the front office—a room with a blackboard on which a boy was chalking up stock quotations.

He returned to his private office, where about an hour later he found himself staring down into a pair of beautiful dark eyes, very soft and feminine. Her cheeks were pale, but without powder Her gown had simple yet pleasing lines, with a satisfying harmony of color, a shade of tan with trimmings of fine white lace.

"I beg your pardon," he said when the office boy had gone. "But I didn't get the name."

"Miss Summerton," she answered, holding aside a small hand bag.

"Miss Summerton," he went on when she had become seated "The boy said you wished to see me on a personal matter, I believe."

"I'm coming on rather an odd mission," she began with a touch of color "I want to interest you, Mr. Van Norden, in a case of charity."

"What is odd about it?"

"Well, nothing—that is, excepting the fact that he once traded with your firm."

"Who is the man?"

"His name is Wentworth—James Wentworth."

"Wentworth," he said, wheeling in his chair so that he faced the other way. "Yes, father once did business with a man named Wentworth—a James Wentworth. A tall, handsome man with black hair. A regular athlete, if I'm not mistaken. Always in the top of fashion."

"He isn't anything like that now," she answered slowly. "He's an old man with snow white hair, and altogether he's quite a pathetic figure."

He caught a tremulous note.

"Did Mr. Wentworth send you?" he asked.

He turned around not too suddenly, yet in time to see her withdrawing her handkerchief from her cheeks.

"No; he didn't send me," she answered, staring at him.

"Yet you come for him," he said almost harshly.

"Yes; I come to you. The truth is Mr. Wentworth is dying in poverty. He may live a week, maybe not that long. Three days ago he expressed a wish—a simple wish that he might see the green fields again. Mr. Van Norden, I didn't know but you might have the money. It would only be a loan."

"Will $100 be enough?" he asked.

"Yes, indeed," she quickly answered.

"I'm glad to be able to do it for you, Miss Summerton," he said.

She seemed to be avoiding his gaze.

"Miss Summerton," he said, seeing the color in her cheeks, "not that it makes any difference, tell me how did you come to know of Mr. Wentworth and of his dealings with our firm?"

"I know his daughter very well," she answered, squarely facing him.

The telephone rang.

He took up the receiver.

"Miss Summerton," he said the next moment, putting down the telephone and getting up, "it seems that I have an urgent caller outside. Would you mind waiting—just a moment? There was something else I wished to say, just a word."

She followed him to an inner room, the door of which he opened for her.

Then he softly closed the door and, taking out a cigarette, struck a light and went idly smoking to the front office, where he stood facing his caller His caller was the ugly man of square jaw and florid cheek, who was nervously holding his derby hat.

"She in there?" asked the central office man.

"I let her out by the side hall," said young Van Norden, indicating the door.

"No; you didn't, did you?"

"Look here, Murdock," spoke up young Van Norden, "that girl isn't a crook."

"That being the case," came the sneering answer, "why didn't you call us in?"

"I thought I'd save her the annoyance of a third degree examination."

"You gave her a check?"

"Yes."

"She told you a sob tale?"

"A rather pathetic story, yes."

"Say, Mr. Van Norden, pardon my saying it, but you've done a fine trick. Why, say, that girl's a well known crook."

Murdock went on staring at him, at first with a pitying smile: then he threw down on the desk a police photograph, with a card which read:

Martha Benjamin, swindler, aged twenty-four, height five feet four inches, of American parentage, large brownish eyes, very fine teeth, never more than plainly dressed. Her game usually played in the financial district—

"The eyes," said young Van Norden nervously. "I can see a difference in the eyes."

"Let me see: you say she went down by the back elevators?"

"I simply said she went out by this side hall door."

Young Van Norden went as far as the front office and stood a moment, with a sense of unrest, listening to the staccato writing of a market ticker. He then returned, lit another cigarette, and after he had smoked awhile he went to the inner room.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Summerton," he said. "I didn't mean to be quite so long."

He found himself gazing into her [illegible]—eyes of wondrous beauty.

"Mr. Van Norden," she said, without spirit, "I couldn't help but hear just now. The transom was wide open."

"Yes, I wanted you to hear," he said, facing her.

"Mr. Van Norden," she said, "I couldn't bring myself to tell you before. But there seems to be no help for it. My name isn't Summerton. I'm Mr. Wentworth's daughter."

He stood staring at her suddenly, with hardness in his eyes; then after a while he gave himself up to a sense of relief.

"My dear girl," he said, "I can hardly believe that any one of Mr. Wentworth's family should come to us. The last we heard of him, some fifteen years ago, he accused my father of being a crook, a thief"—

He came to a sudden stop

"Just a moment, if you please," he went on, going to the front office.

"Tommy," said he to the boy at the door, "have Mr. Murdock come right up, and don't wait to knock."

He turned to the girl.

"Perhaps you aren't familiar with the details of their quarrel?" he said, seating himself again. "The trouble was over a notification. Mr. Wentworth said he gave orders to sell. My father said not. Later on it developed Mr. Wentworth was in the right. The mistake was due to the reading of a telegram. My father immediately drew his check for the full amount, but the check came back. Mr. Wentworth said he wouldn't be an object of charity"—

"Yes, I know," she quickly answered. "But I thought if you were only half human, in a time like this"—

"My dear girl," he said, playing with his unlit cigarette, "when Mr. Wentworth returned my father's check, torn up, some fifteen years ago, this money was then put to his credit, and that amount, together with the interest at 6 per cent up to date, now makes in all, I believe, some $40,000."

"My father never spoke of this, Mr. Van Norden," she remarked, "you believe me, don't you, when I tell you I'm Mr. Wentworth's daughter?"

He found her eyes uplifting him again, and yet he purposely hid his feeling.

"I see—you still have your doubts," she said.

"There's only one thing I want to clear up," he answered uneasily. "Can't you wait—just a moment?"

He returned to the window, awaiting his man, and presently the office boy ushered him in without knocking.

Murdock looked first at the girl, then at young Van Norden, with a puzzled air.

"Beg your pardon, Mr. Van Norden," he began.

"No; it's all right," answered young Van Norden. "I want you to meet this young woman, whom you've been following here for two days."

Young Van Norden turned to her.

"Miss Summerton," he said to her, "Mr. Murdock is from the detective bureau at police headquarters. He has a photograph—a rather good likeness—I want him to show you."

Murdock slowly took out his police picture, handing it to the girl, at the same time regarding her with keen eyes.

"Mr. Murdock," said young Van Norden, speaking to him, "I called you in because, it may be, you'll be running into her more or less from now on. Miss Summerton has an account with us."

Young Van Norden then turned to the girl, who had made her examination of the photograph.

"Miss Summerton," he said, "Mr. Murdock is detailed in Wall street to scare off any crooks who may show a desire to operate below what he calls the dead line."

Murdock took the picture from the girl, saying: "You look something like her, don't you think? But you ain't as tall, and, as your friend here was saying, Miss Summerton, there's real beauty in your eyes."

"A clear case of mistaken identity," said the detective in the front office.

Young Van Norden smiled to himself and immediately returned to the girl.

"Mr. Van Norden," she began, now almost at the point of tears, "you believe me now?"

"My dear little girl," he said, unable to control his feeling any longer, "yes, indeed, I believe you But that isn't the point. Half an hour ago I gave you a check, which, I believe, you accepted. It's yours by right. Come, hadn't you better see what it says?"

She took out her check, unfolding it, and read, "Pay to the order of Mary Wentworth $40,000."

NAVAL GUN VIBRATION.

Conditions on a Warship When Heavy Firing Is In Progress.

The average civilian has a very vague idea as to the conditions inside a turret on a war vessel while heavy firing is going on.

The greatest force of the vibration from the firing of a gun is naturally just outside the muzzle, and that is outside the turret. So terrific is this vibration that if severe precautions were not taken the deck under the muzzle would be ripped to pieces, sheet iron doors would be wrenched from their hangings and skylights shattered. To guard against these effects the deck under the gun muzzle is re-enforced with steel plates about an inch thick and skylights are taken off and replaced with coverings of armor plate.

Of course a very considerable roar and jar are felt inside the turret. Men who are looking for the refinement of precaution recommend that gunners wear shoes with rubber cushioned soles and heels to lessen the jar on the deck.

The air vibration, due either to firing in one's own or some other turret, has caused many cases of gun deafness. To stuff the ears with cotton wool is, of course, the commonest expedient followed by men and officers alike. There is also what is called the Cheatham device, consisting of a mixture of clay and wool. It is very flexible, can be molded to any ear and still allows its wearer to hear orders.

Gun deafness may come immediately as a result of a ruptured ear drum or gradually owing to an injury to the auditory nerve.—London Answers.

His Proposal.

"Can you wash clothes?" asked the timid young lover.

"What's that?" asked the surprised maiden.

"Can you wash dishes?"

"Say, I thought this was a proposal of marriage? What do you run, anyway—a laundry or a restaurant?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Easier Employment.

"I understand," said the letter carrier, "that some of those ancients did all their writing on rocks and bricks."

"Yes," replied the professor.

"Well, these times have their disadvantages. But I'd rather be a letter carrier now than then."—Washington Star.

A Hustler.

First Boomer—You fellows have no gitup about you at all. Why don't you have photographs of your town taken, like we did? Are you ashamed of it? Rival Boomer—Naw; that ain't the reason at all. I want you to understand, young fellah, that our town don't stand still long enough to be photographed.—Terre Haute Express.

How Do You Do?

What is your normal attitude toward yourself? Much depends upon this. When you look at the great, wide world and then at yourself in your own little center of it, how does it impress you? That is to say, are you a constant source of surprise and wonderment to yourself, which causes you ever and anon to halt in your tracks, look back over the road you came and marvel that you were ever able to make it?

Or do you take yourself for granted and consider that it is the most natural thing in the world for you to be where you are and doing what you are?

Or have you been so excruciatingly busy trying to get somewhere that you have had no time to take these little mental invoices to discover just where you are and why and for how long?—Life.

Nelson and Villeneuve.

When Nelson fell at Trafalgar he was only forty-seven years old, and the French commander, Admiral de Villeneuve, was only forty-two. The latter was a brilliant sailor, who had already fought against Nelson, and he thoroughly realized what the English tactics were going to be on this occasion. Indeed, he held a meeting of the captains of the allied fleet and lucidly explained them. Nelson would not, he said, form line of battle parallel with the allied line. "He will seek to pierce our line, surround our rear and overpower with groups of his vessels as many of ours as he can cut off." Still, although prepared for this form of attack, Villeneuve failed to resist it, and he was taken prisoner, bitterly regretting that no shot had dealt him the same fate as Nelson.—London Chronicle.

How Words Change.

A century and a half ago "fun," a word of Irish origin, was considered "shockingly low." "Mob," too, was a word "no self respecting gentleman would use" till Pope boldly wrote "the mob of gentlemen who write with ease." Of "humbug" a writer in 1750 said: "I will venture to affirm that this 'humbug' is neither an English word nor a derivative from any other language. It is, indeed, a blackguard sound. It is a fine makeweight in conversation, and some great men deceive themselves so egregiously as to think they mean something by it."

SLAYTON—FINCH

A very pretty wedding took place on the afternoon of Monday June 28, at the home of Mr and Mrs. O. B. Finch, when their daughter Erva and James G. Slayton of Ridgeway, Penn. were united in marriage.

The young people mingled with the company greeting the guests as they arrived until the music of Love Song played by Miss Genevieve Halliday, announced the hour for the ceremony when they took their places under a bridal arch of ferns and ox-eyed daisies The Rev. W. A. Jackson of Hillsdale college pronounced the words that made these two husband and wife, using the ring service Marian Finch, a niece of the bride carrying the ring in the heart of a white lily. As a prelude to the ceremony Miss Alice Bradley sang "Constancy" in a very charming manner.

The bride was gowned in embroidered organdie with net lace and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lillies-of-the-valley.

The decorations of the home were in pink and white in the parlor and sitting room and green and white in the dining room, roses and daisies being used in profusion.

After congratulations a two course luncheon was served, Mrs. Floyd Bryan and Misses Florence Bryan, Lila VanValkenburg and Cline Scofield acting as waiters.

The newly weds left on the evening train for a short wedding trip, and will be at home to their friends in Ridgeway Penn., in the near future, where Mr. Slayton is general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

Among the out of town guests were the Misses Helen, Augusta and Cyrena and Louis and Wm. Slayton of Hillsdale, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Finch and Marian of Parksrsburg W. Va., Miss Leila Knapp, Blissfield, Mr. and Mrs. A. J Davis Pontiac, Mrs. S. Harvey, Hillsdale, Cline Scofield, Eugene Ofe, George F. Slayton, LosAngeles, Cal, Miss Leila and Milton Clark, Wooster O., Edna Garlinghouse, North Adams, Mr. and Mrs, W. S. Pullen, Ruth, Chas. and Thomas Pullen Hillsdale and Ray A. Wolffor, Grand Forks, North Dakota,

Mrs. Slayton attended our high school but owing to ill health was unable to finish with her class but later graduated from the Conservatory of music in Ypsilanti and has since taught in Mt. Pleasant Iowa and Redline and Thorsby Ala.

Mr. Slayton is a graduate of Hillsdale college and of the Y. M. C. A training school in Chicago. The best wishes of friends will go with the happy couple to their new home.

BARGAIN DAY

Wednesday was another typical June day and the merchants all report a good trade and are convinced that Bargain day will become quite an institution in Tecumseh. The matinee at the race track called out a good crowd and resulted as follows:

CLASS A PACING

4 Hazelwood, H. Hindes,	1-1-2-4-4	$3.50
1 McCann Boy, McCann,	3-3-3-2-2	2 50

Time. 1.20–1.21–1.22½–1.23½.

Attendance, 800.

The streets in the evening were packed and the band concert was most entertaining to all lovers of music.

The paper ballon ascensions were exceptionally fine, each one making a graceful ascent, several of them hiding behind the misty clouds and pearing out wherever a break occurred. The sudden storm that came up dispersed the crowd all to soon.

Cured of Indigestion

Mrs. Sadie P, Clawson, Indiana, Pa was bothered with indigestion "My stomach pained me night and day," she writes. "I would feel bloated and have heaeache and belching after eating. I also suffered from constipation. My daughter had used Chamberlain's Tablets and they did her so much good that she gave me a few doses of them and insisted upon me trying them. They helped me as nothing else has done." For sale by all dealers. advt

Don't Be a Tortoise.

The tortoise is a testudinate, terrestrial reptile. He is a half brother to the turtle, which so often gets into the soup. The tortoise's motto is "Take It Easy." Next to the sponge and the oyster, which require the hook to be moved at all, he is the slowest animal in the world. A Greek of the name of Aesop, who lived centuries ago, told of a race between the tortoise and the hare in which the tortoise got the trophy. The hare, according to Aesop, got so far in the lead that he took a nap, and, forgetting to wake up, the tortoise passed him. The truth of the matter is that by the time the tortoise had caught him the hare had died of old age. A tortoise lets the dear old world wag and waddles complacently on. You couldn't speed him up if you built a fire under him, for his shell is so thick that he wouldn't know he was being roasted. Because of his imperturbability and his utter deadness to impressions the tortoise lives to a great age. But, no matter how old or how big he grows, he never improves intellectually, and eventually he lands in a museum, to be viewed as a curiosity. Don't be a tortoise.—Maurice Switzer in Judge.

A Question of Numbers.

Herbert Spencer did not agree with the scientists who favored the metric system. He said it is artificial and unsatisfactory, ten being divisible by only two numbers—two and five—and in one case the result is fifths, which are practically useless in the everyday life of the people. The decimal system is similarly objectionable, he contended, because it has an imperfect fourth and a more imperfect third, both of which are desirable in ordinary transactions. He regarded twelve as one of the most [illegible] numbers, as it is easily divisible into groups of units for popular use.

WIT AND WISDOM

The annual picnic of the Wit and Wisdom club which was to be held on the lawn of the M. E. Parsonage, Tuesday afternoon was held in the parsonage owing to the rain that came in the earlier part of the day. There was a large attendance in spite of the threatening weather. Dr. and Mrs Maddox of Wasseon O, were the honorary guests of the occasion.

The bountious picnic supper was served each one responding to the call in true picnic style. A social hour completed a very pleasant evening.

MRS ALBERT SOUTHWORTH

Mrs. Antoinette Southworth passed away Tuesday evening June 29 1915 at the home of her daughter Miss Nettie Southworth on West Chicago St., after an illness of seven week, the result of a stroke of paralysis aged 83 yrs. 6 mo.

Sept. 12, 1848 she was united in marriage to Albert Southworth who passed May 24, 1886. After the death of her husband Mrs Southworth supervised the management of the farm for a number of years but later made her home in Adrian until she came to live with her daughter here.

Her funeral will be held from the home Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. G. W, Jennings officiating. Burial in Brookside cemetery.

MRS. MARY CLEMENS

Mrs. Mary Gallatin Clemens was born in Sparta, Livingston Co. New York, Aug. 20, 1838, and died in Garrett, Indiana, June 26, 1915. The family came to Tecumseh in 1856. Her home was in or near the village until last January she went to Garrett to live with a neice. She did not care for society and took no active part in the life of the village, always preferring a few warm friends to a large circle of acquaintances.

She was the last of her immediate family, being survived by her nieces. Mrs. S. O. Whitford of Garrett, Ind., Mrs. Mary Johnson of Cleveland, Ohio and Mrs. Albert Waring of Tecumseh.

The remains were brought in Monday evening and taken to the home of Albert Waring, from which place the funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon, Rev. G. W. Jennings officiating, burial was on the family lot in Brookside cemetery.

Room For Improvement.

A certain estimable old gentleman is at all times worth listening to, though occasionally his grammar is scarcely perfect. He was dining on one occasion with the local squire, when, much to the disgust of his worthy host, a trifling error on the old gentleman's part was pounced upon and loudly repeated by the son and heir of the house. There was a painful silence, broken at length by the host.

"My son," he remarked quietly to the young fellow, "there are times, I admit, when our old friend's speech is a little peculiar. At such times you might be of mutual assistance to each other."

"In what way, sir?" asked the son.

"Well," was the severe rejoinder, "you might give Mr. X. a lesson or two in grammar, in return for which I have no doubt he would assist you to patch up the holes in your manners."—London Tit-Bits.

The Plantagenets.

A flowering English shrub, the broom plant, is called in French "plantagenesta." From it the kingly family of Plantagenet took its name. It is said to have been first used as a badge by them because the Count of Anjou had himself scourged with its branches. The name was taken by Henry II., king of England, in 1154, he being the son of Geoffrey of Anjou, who wore in his helm a spray of the broom when he started for the Holy Land. The best known of the Plantagenets was Richard I., king of England, called "the Lion Heart."

Very Queer.

"My husband has been out late every evening this week, attending important club meetings."

"Yes, so has mine. They belong to the same club, you know."

"Why, how queer! My husband says he hasn't seen your husband in six months!"—Cleveland Leader.

STANDING TIMBER.

Rule by Which to Figure Out Its Contents In Board Feet.

The contents of trees in board feet is usually figured by Doyle's rule. This rule is to deduct four inches from the small diameter of the log for slab, squaring one quarter of the remainder and multiplying the results by the length of the log in feet. For example, to find the contents of a twelve foot log twenty-four inches in diameter (inside the bark) at the small end—24 inches minus 4 inches equal 20 inches; 20 inches by ¼ equal 5 inches; 5 by 5 by 12 equal 300 board feet.

Perhaps an easier way to get at the same result is to state the rule as follows: From a sixteen foot log deduct four inches for slab and square the remainder. For longer or shorter logs the contents would be proportioned to the length. In the above case it would be worked out thus: 24 minus 4 equals 20, 20 by 20 equals 400, for a sixteen foot log. But a twelve foot log is twelve-sixteenths or three-quarters as long as a sixteen foot log; therefore this log contains three-quarters of 400 board feet, or 300 board feet. If the log were twenty feet long it would contain one and one-quarter times 400 feet, or 500 feet.

A common way of estimating standing timber is to estimate the length and the top and bottom diameters and apply Doyle's rule, using the average of both diameters and the whole length of the tree.—Rural New Yorker.

AN EASY WAY TO END CATARRH FOREVER

Simple Home Treatment Destroys Germs of This Dangerous Disease.

The air is always full of catarrh germs thrown of by one person and absorbed by another and when your system fails to throw off such germs they find permanent lodgement in the nose, throat and head and multiply rapidly. You must kill these germs before you can cure catarrh.

The germs of catarrh can be best destroyed by inhaling the pure medicated air of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) This splendid and powerful combination of oil of Eucalyptus with other healing agents has a wonderful germicidal action. You breathe its air into your nose, throat and lungs by means of a small hard rubber inhaler which C. A. Wright & Son and other leading druggists here in Tecumseh, Mich., and vicinity supply with every treatment. This medicated air is certain death to the germs of Catarrh and drives them completely out of your system and when the germs are destroyed the catarrh with all its disagreeable symptoms will stop. As Hyomei is pleasant to breathe and is always sold by druggists everywhere with a positive guarantee of successful results or money back, surely no Catarrhal sufferer should go long before trying this sim- home remedy. adv

Time—Three o'clock in the afternoon.

Place—The line fence between Mr. Brown and Mr. White's wheat fields. Mr. White is leanding on the fence and looking at the heavy dark clouds in the west.

Mr. Brown is driving his binder by the fence on his way to the barn after finishing cutting his wheat.

Brown calls out; "Hello, White! What'er you so down in the mouth about?"

White replies; "Guess you'd feel blue if your field of wheat was dead ripe and 80 acres to cut like I have got."

"Why," says Brown, "What's the matter with your binder?"

Some knotter parts broke" says White, "Been waiting four days for the repairs and got to wait three more for a man to fix it. By the way your boy told me you had a break-down night before last. How'd you get yours fixed so quick?"

"Oh" says Brown, "That's easy. Mine is a DEERING and I bought it of Temple of Tecumseh, phoned in and he had a man out here by eight o'clock yesterday morning. We were cutting wheat again by noon. If you had bought your new binder of Temple like I advised you, you would'nt be in this fix. Well so long, I must get to the barn before the storm gets here."

We wish to call attention of the people of the various churches to pictures of "Creation" as shown in our town during the past week These pictures may be beautiful from an artistic standpoint, and perfectly proper from a moral standpoint, but from a religious and scientific standpoint they are not only misleading but positively inacurate. These pictures were produced several years ago by one "Pastor Russel" (so called). Eastern daily papers have styled him a religious hoax. He has several times lost in shady civil court cases. He is neither scholar nor scientist. These pictures are slyly foisted upon the motion picture public not by the local management or the city exchange, but by Russel as an advertising scheme

RECEPTION

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Waldron Honored Monday, June 28.

A very charming reception was that tendered Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Waldron at the M. E. church parlors on Monday evening.

The parlor was beautifully decorated with roses syringa and ox-eyed daisies. The floors were covered with rugs and many easy chairs, divans, sofa pillows etc, converted the room into a veritable drawing room.

There were about 130 guests present to honor the occasion. Rev. G W. Jennings in his most happy manner announced the program which was arranged by A. B. Harding. Piano solo, Miss Cecil Clark; welcome to the guests, Supt. E. D. Brown.

Dr. Maddox of Wasseon Ohio, a former Supt. of our Sunday school and a close friend of Wilfred who came especially for the occasion gave a very fine talk

A trio by the Misses McIntyre and Clark was followed by a talk on "The Teacher" by B Hurry an ex superintendant in which he spoke of the good work being done by Mr. Waldron. F. J. Temple another ex-superintendant a fine original poem in his own easy manner.

Mr. and Mrs Francis Stone played a charming selection on the piano and cornet and responded to an encore.

The Rev G. W. Jennings a very interesting talk after which Supt. E D. Brown in a very pleasing manner presented Mr. and Mrs. Waldron with two beautiful chairs for their new home. Mr. Waldron responded very feelingly, thanking his friends for their hearty good will both now and in times past, he paid special tribute to Dr. Maddox and voiced his pleasure on his presence at this time. At the close of the program punch and wafers were served by Mrs. Floyd Elliott and Miss Leila Jennings. With many good wishes and good nights the company dispersed to their homes well pleased with their happy meeting.

Eye Destroyed by Prank.

Princeton, Ind., June 26.—Otis Hill, twenty-five years old, suffered the loss of an eye as the result of an accident at Fort Branch. Hill, who was in an automobile, came upon a party of friends, who began throwing green apples at him. Lester Carithers, twelve years old, did not have any apples, so he unthoughtedly threw a stick, the end of which struck Hill in the eye, cutting the eyeball deeply and destroying the sight.

Long Rescue Effort Vain.

Joplin, Mo., June 26.—Rescue workers, after fourteen days of toil, dug their way into the "face" of the Longacre-Chapman mine at Neck City late Thursday afternoon, and on top of a pile of timbers found the bodies of Daniel Hardendorf and Reed Taylor. The two men apparently had been dead several days.

"Let Sword Decide," Says Franz Josef.

London, June 26.—The Daily Chronicle's Turin correspondent telegraphs: "The Stampa learns from Bucharest that Emperor Francis Joseph strongly opposes cessions to Roumania. 'Let things go their own way,' he declared, 'the sword will decide this question, as many others.'"

PEDS TO TEST PENSION LAW

Teachers Federation Head Takes Issue With Fellows Ruling.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 26.—The Michigan Federation of Teachers' clubs will contest the finding of Attorney General Fellows that the teachers' retirement law, passed by the last legislature is unconstitutional, Mrs. Lou I. Sigler, president of the federation, announces.

"I think when such lawyers as Senator Verdier and Representative Flowers, who had charge of the bill for us, in the legislature, pass favorably on its constitutionality it must be all right," she said. "We shall do nothing about the matter just now, but after school opens in the fall, some teacher will be called upon to contribute to the pension fund. She will refuse to pay and then the matter will be taken to the courts."

BUYS CITY LAND AT TAX SALE

Grand Rapids Lets Property Slip for $6.07 Dut on It.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 26.—A transaction, wherein the City of Grand Rapids sold at tax title sale land which the city itself owned, has been disclosed.

The board of education purchased the property which is now a part of the Lexington school site and $6.07 city and school taxes were unpaid on it.

COMFORTING WORDS

Many a Tecumseh Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed—to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. The following advice of one who has suffered will prove comforting words to hundreds of Tecumseh readers.

A. C. Aylesworth, W. Chicago, St., Tecumseh says: "About four years ago I had an acute attack of lumbago and my kidneys were disordered. I at length heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store, I began using. In a short time I was relieved. I have had no return attack of the trouble. I hope other kidney sufferers will read my statement and be led to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills the same that Mr. Aylesworth had. Foster-Milburn Co. Props. Buffalo, N. Y. advt

HANGED BY A GHOST.

Curious Story of a Murder and the Discovery of the Crime.

An old volume of the Quarterly Review mentions a crime discovered in a most extraordinary way in Australia in the year 1830, of which a public record is preserved and which figures with full details in the journals of that period.

The confidential steward of a wealthy settler near Sydney stated that his master had suddenly been called to England on important business and that during his absence the whole of his immense property would be in his exclusive care.

Some weeks after an acquaintance of the absentee settler riding through his grounds was astonished to perceive him sitting upon a stile. He strode forward to speak when the figure turned from him, with a look of intense sorrow, and walked to the edge of a pond, where it mysteriously disappeared.

On the morrow he brought a number of men to the water to drag it, and the body of the man supposed to be on his way to England was brought up. The steward was arrested, brought to trial and, frightened at the story of his master's ghost, confessed the crime, stating that he did the murder at the very stile on which his master's ghost had appeared. He was duly executed.—Case and Comment.

RUNNING UPSTAIRS.

Physical Energy It Expends Quoted In Horsepower.

To lift 550 pounds one foot in one second requires what is known as one horsepower. Similarly a horsepower is able to raise twice that weight one foot in twice the time, or one-half foot in just that time. Moreover, it can raise half 550 pounds one foot in half a second, or two feet in a second, and so on. Therefore when we lift one-fourth of that weight, 137½ pounds, four feet in one second, we are exerting a horsepower.

Accordingly, when a person who weighs 137½ pounds runs upstairs at the rate of four feet a second, he is exerting the equivalent of a horsepower. For a man weighing twice that much, 275 pounds, it would be necessary to climb at the rate of only two feet a second to exert a horsepower. It is possible to do much more.

As a matter of fact, a horse often exerts many times a horsepower. The average horse can draw a wagon up a hill where a ten horsepower engine with the same load would fail. A horse power does not represent the greatest momentary strength of the average horse, but is a measure of the power which he can exert continuously.—New York World.

HOLD INSURANCE MEN, HUGE GRAFT CHARGES

One Is Accused of Issuing Policies in $3,000,000 Risks.

Gary, Ind., June 26.—The activities of the "German Underwriters" and the "American Underwriters" were curtailed in the arrests of J. L. Lucas and Charles Russell of Chicago, promoters of the concerns, which the Gary police charge are fake fire insurance companies. Lucas and Russell are held without bail, pending the arrival of postal inspectors from Cincinnati, O. The federal authorities have been on the trail of Lucas for some time, it is said.

Records seized showed that Lucas had issued 1,100 policies, covering risks of about $3,000,000. They were written by reputable agencies in New York, Chicago and many small towns in Illinois, Indiana and southern states.

Letters demanding payment of fire losses and agents' commissions were among the effects seized. The policies issued by Lucas bore a picture of a building the size of the Chicago postoffice labeled, "Home Office, Gary, Ind." Lucas had an office room in the Ohio building here, but the police say he came here only at intervals to get his mail.

Lucas protested his innocence and says he has paid half a dozen claims. He asserts his company is a co-operative one.

SOME PERILS IN COURTSHIP

James Bales' Adventure Beats the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow."

Nashville, Ind., June 26.—James Bales of Elkinsville had a perilous adventure when he was riding a mule on his return trip from seeing his sweetheart.

When going along a patch in a wooded field he was attacked by a lynx, which sprang from a large oak tree, alighting on the back of the young man's mule. The mule began to run and Bales began striking at the lynx with his whip. Seeing this would do no good, he lay down on the mule and began kicking the lynx and finally succeeded in kicking the animal off. Bales says the animal was four feet long, with eyes like coals of fire, and its fur of dark brown color. The mule's back was badly lacerated.

Battle For Mexico City Raging.

Washington, June 26.—The Carranza forces under General Gonzales have been driven back from Mexico City, according to State Department advices from Vera Cruz. Just Tell of Poison Case.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — The marriage of Miss Helen Hamilton of this city and Herman Trum Jr. of Kansas City, Mo., member of this year's architectural engineering graduating class, has just been announced. It occurred in Windsor, Ont., Dec. 18, 1912. The announcement was a complete surprise.

Mrs. Trum, who was graduated in the civil engineering class of 1913, was the third woman ever to receive a degree from the University of Michigan engineering department.

Boy and Girl Are Arrested.

HOLLAND, MICH. — Victor W. Hamil, nineteen, and Miss Dorothy Barnard, sixteen, were arrested at Benton Harbor a few hours before they were to take the vaudeville parts in a carnival. Hamil was given a jail sentence for sixty days after pleading guilty to a charge of contributing to the girl's delinquency, and Miss Barnard's case was referred to the juvenile court at the request of her father.

FRENCH WIN AGAINST FOES' GAS AND FLAME

Germans Repulsed in Attacks on Meuse Heights.

Paris, June 26.—With fiery liquids and asphyxiating bombs, the Germans are violently attacking the French trenches on the Meuse heights near Calonne. The battle raged all day and at midnight the enemy reattacked in large force.

The first onslaught drove the French from a row of trenches they captured from the Teutons several days ago, the French troops were retiring in good order when their positions were sprayed with liquid flame. Immediately afterward a counter attack threw the enemy out of the works and they fled.

At midnight the attack was resumed by large bodies of enemy troops. The French lighted up the ground before their positions with illuminating bombs and search lights and turned a score of machine guns on the charging columns. The Germans were caught under a deadly cross fire and retreated with heavy losses.

An official communique from the war office reported that two German attacks along the Lorraine frontier were repulsed.

Austria to Take New Harvest.

London, June 26.—A Reuter dispatch from Zurich says: "The Austrian government announces its intention to sequestrate the entire crops of the new harvest, in addition to all the stocks of old grain in the monarchy, on Aug. 15, placing the whole in the hands of a special grain monopoly. The present system of bread tickets and similar measures will be retained."

Oldest Santa Fe Engineer Dies.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — John H. Eagy, who, when he retired last February, was the oldest engineer on the Santa Fe railroad, died here after a long illness from pneumonia. Eagy was seventy-three years old and probably the best known engineman west of Chicago.

GREAT LOSS OF CANADIANS

Western Ontario Troops Virtually Annihilated In France.

Toronto, Ont., June 26.—The first western Ontario battalion was all but annihilated in the action near La Basse, in northern France, on June 15 last, says a semi-official account received here.

Out of between 600 and 700 men the battalion lost in killed and wounded nearly 500, including twenty officers. Twelve of the officers were killed in this action, according to the account, leaving only three officers of the battalion unwounded.

ALLEN SUSPECT GOES TO JAIL

Joe Campbell, Handcuffed, Transferred From Penitentiary.

Joliet, Ill., June 26.—Joe Campbell, handcuffed and guarded by Deputy Warden Lawrence Ryan and Captain John Clarkson, was removed from the state penitentiary at Joliet to the Will county jail, where he will be held to await the action of the grand jury.

The trip was made in an automobile and was without incident.

Jury Holds Campbell In Prison Crime.

Joliet, Ill., June 26.—The man who slew and burned Mrs. Odette Allen in her bedroom within the walls of Joliet state prison last Sunday morning is not yet fully identified. After seven house of deliberation the coroner's jury recommended that "Chicken Joe" Campbell, negro trusty and valet of the Allen family, be held to the grand jury, but specified in its verdict that the inquiry should be rigorously prosecuted further.

Record Kansas Wheat Crop.

Topeka, Kas., June 26.—Condition of winter wheat, based on conditions Saturday, is given at 80.5 per cent, and if the estimate is borne out in the harvest, the Kansas wheat crop will be the second greatest in the history of the state.

Swiss Aviator Is Killed.

Berne, via Paris, June 25.—Two Swiss aviation officers fell 300 feet near Zurich. Lieutenant Lugrin, a well-known airman, was killed and Lieutenant von Kaenel was seriously injured.

Austrians Mass 200,000 at Triest.

Rome, June 26.—Two hundred thousand Austrian troops are concentrated around Trieste, according to the Giornale D'Italia, which cited refugees arriving at Ancona as its authority.

Be Sure You Get This Old Reliable Cough Medicine

Imitations always follow the trail of success. Hundreds of imitations have come and gone since FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND began, 40 years ago, to loosen the grip of coughs and colds.

Be sure you get the genuine
Foley's Honey and Tar Compound
And avoid the names that sound like it.

Here are three easy ways to tell the genuine. 1st—The name of "Foley's" 2nd—The yellow package, 3rd—The Beehive on the yellow package. You cannot get a substitute to do for you what FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND will do—for coughs, colds, croup, bronchial and lagrippe coughs, throat and lung trouble. Buy it of your druggist and be safe.

Prescriptions In English.

"If a medicinal substance has any effect except upon the imagination it will have that effect as much when written in English as in perfect Latin," says the New York Medical Journal. It says doctors still write their prescriptions in Latin only because their ancestors did so and perhaps because it impresses the patient, but the names of the drugs now used "look as formidable in English as in Latin." Therefore it urges physicians to write in English. Thus fewer mistakes will be made in putting up medicines.

VALVE-IN-HEAD SIXES Buick EXCLUSIVELY MOTOR CARS

Announcement

The public wants Buick Sixes --so many of them that we shall build nothing else in 1916

Pioneer Builders of Valve-in-Head Motor Cars

Regardless of the car you buy or the price you pay, nowhere can you get greater value.

More enduring than chrome vanadium steel, more wonderful than the finest workmanship, is the idea that can dominate an industry.

In this day, when more Buicks are being built than ever before, it is interesting to remember that the distinguishing characteristic of the Buick, the Valve-in-Head Motor, has existed as an idea for twenty-five years and has been built into Buick cars for thirteen years.

From 1903 to 1907 the Buick Valve-in-Head was a two cylinder engine. From 1908 to 1914 four cylinders dominated the field and the Buick Valve-in-Head Four dominated other types. The Buick Valve-in-Head Six was first put on the market in 1913. Fours were also continued—but the Valve-in-Head Six had stirred the imagination of the car-buying public. The demand from the start outpaced the production.

The demand has become so overwhelming that now—for 1916—the Four gives way to Sixes. Two chassis, both Sixes, with roadster, touring car, coupe, sedan bodies. The Six has been made standard because in the Six the Valve-in-Head idea has its greatest opportunity for service.

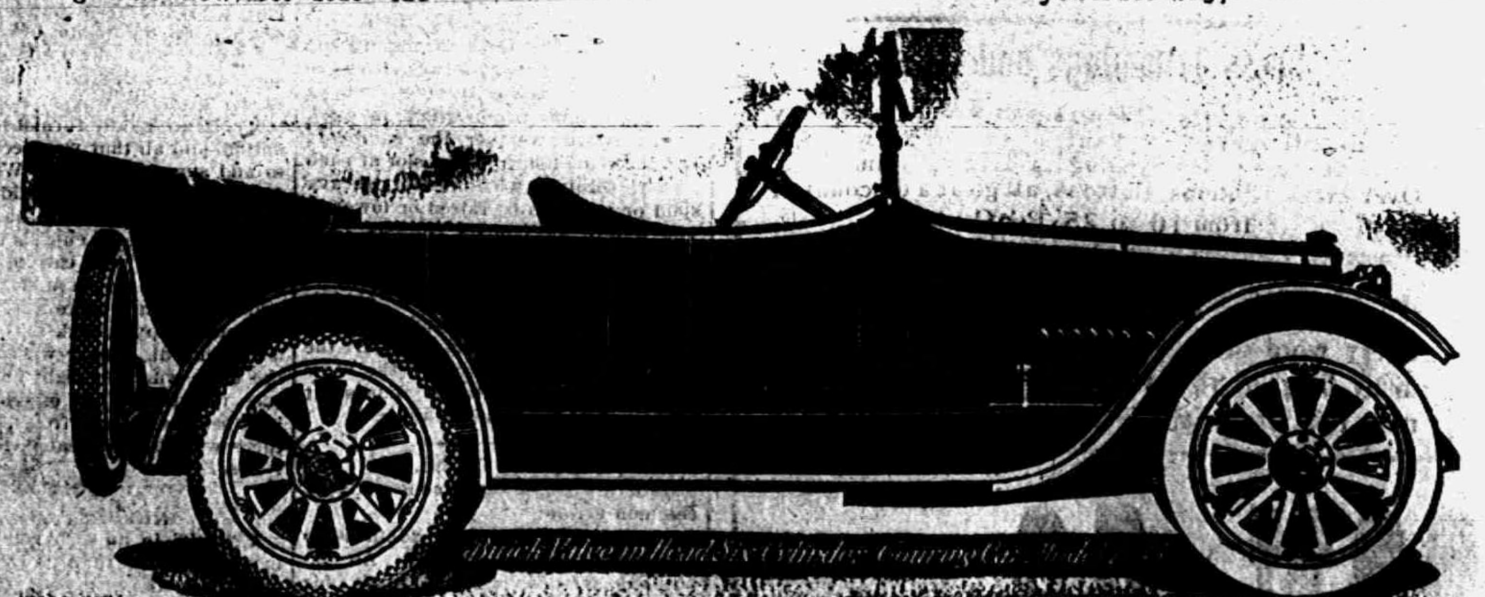
Also since the first appearance of the Buick Six there has risen an insistent demand for smaller Buick Sixes.

The Six is a natural, logical, efficient form for the Valve-in-Head type. Never before has the Valve-in-Head idea had such adequate materialization.

This year the Buick factory is arranged for Sixes exclusively. The production will be large. Demand necessitates a steady stream of Buick trains leaving the factory during the season.

And the Power, Economy, Dependability and Comfort of 1916 Buick Sixes justify the demand more than ever. Study the specifications and you'll see why.

1916 SIXES Exclusively



$985

HORSE POWER—Built regularly in 45 and 55 horse power. Six Cylinder Valve-in-Head motor with two six chassis. WHEEL BASE—115 and 130 inches. F. D. AVERY

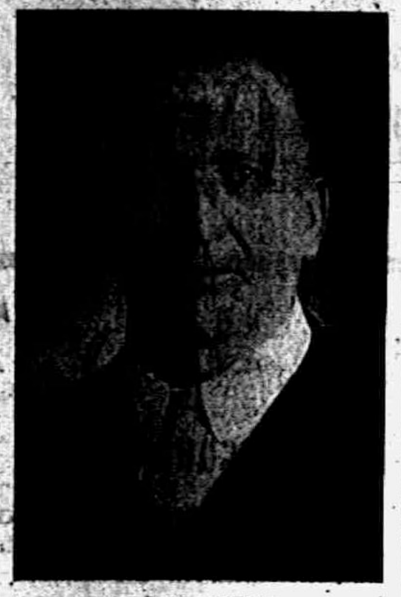
Frank D. Avery and family moved here from Onsted in 1887 and he took a position in C. A. Wright's drug store. For three years he worked there and then went into partnership with J. D. Ellis and bought out Will Anderson's grocery, taking possession Sept 16, 1890. So for nearly 25 years we have found "F. D." in the same store and not many days has he missed either.

Mr. Ellis withdrew from the firm in one year and Webster Anderson took his interest which firm was known as Avery & Co. until 1909 when Mr. Avery became sole possessor of the business.



F. D. AVERY

When Mr. Avery first went into the business a large line of crockery was carried but this was sold out and the firm devoted their attention to the grocery line exclusively. No one in town was specializing in fruit those years so a larger line was added and now more fruit is sold in this store than any other grocery in town. Four clerks are kept on the jump waiting on the large trade which Mr. Avery's fair dealing and energy have built up and you can find anything in staple and fancy groceries, baked goods fruit and vegetables at F D. Avery's.

C. M. GILBERT

In the fall of 1902 Chas. M. Gilbert of Munson, Mich., bought the old McClure grocery of John King, Frank Conrad, a brother-in-law was in the firm and from the first they had a good trade. After four years Mr. Conrad moved away and Mr. Gilbert owned the business alone. Two little daughters make very obliging clerks and it is a most inviting place to trade

Mr. Gilbert handles the Telfer coffee exclusively and also pays special attention to his line of baked goods. A general grocery stock with vegetables in season are displayed and we can assure you of courteous, fair treatment at C. M Gilbert.

"THE FERNDALE STORE"

"Ferndale" means quality so it was quality groceries that Fred Aldrich and son Wilson stocked with when they opened their grocery store in August, 1909, in the Service block They have handled the Ferndale goods exclusively and find that quality pays. They keep a fancy line of high grade goods with every thing one would expect to find in a city store and the fruit and vegetable line is splendidly shown in their show window where they keep the best display of any grocery window in town.

How the reporter's mouth did water when a cut watermelon was seen occupying the center of the stage, and in June

This large window was put in only last winter and has proved a big drawing card for Aldrich & Son, You will find the firm courteous salesman, more than glad to greet you and care for your wants

Where Shell Bracelets Come From.

Though Dacca has lost its trade in fine muslins, it is still the chief center of the manufacture of the shell bracelets everywhere worn among the Hindus. These are cut by women, using a very primitive saw, from what is popularly known as the chank shell of the East Indian seas, and into the sunk portion of the design colored lac is melted. Except the rare specimens with reversed opening, which have fetched as much as £70, chanks are not costly. But the shell is sacred to Vishnu, and the bangles and anklets made from it are frequently left on the body at burial. Thus these sankha are not entirely subject to fluctuations of taste, and the demand for them remains steady.—London Chronicle.

TECUMSEH'S THIRD BARGAIN DAY

In this issue of the Herald we present to our readers Tecumseh's third "Bargain Day" page. This page is full of bargains, goods advertised at a very low price and you will profit by making a trip to Tecumseh next Wednesday to take advantage of these bargains. Our business men want your trade and want to be better acquainted with you.

Every Wednesday during the summer will be Bargain Day in Tecumseh and the Herald will bring you a page of bargains. Watch for them. Sports will be arranged for each Wednesday. This week, running races, sack race, boys bicycle races, all on Main street to start at 2 p. m. At 3:30 at Base Ball park the fast Tecumseh Independent team will play the Tecumseh Masonic team. This is sure to be a fast game.

In the evening a band concert on the four corners of the town from 7 to 9 o'clock. Come in and enjoy the day with us.

We know that these days are busy days for the farmer, but, if you can't make a call on us during the day run in for the evening, the stores will all be open and the merchants will welcome you whether you buy or not.

FAMILY GATHERING.

Mrs. M. Smeltzer and her sister Miss Clara Bangs entertained a family gathering Wednesday, June 30, at their home in honor of their cousins from Iowa. The descendants of four of the seven sons of Rev. Joseph Bangs who settled in Tecumseh in an early day and was one of the first Methodist ministers to preach here, were at this reunion.

Covers were laid for 25 for dinner and 29 for supper. Telegrams and cards of regret were received from Grand Rapids and Eaton Rapids relatives who were descendants of two other sons of Rev. Bangs.

All had a very pleasant time. Mr. Coller was called and photographed the group.

The out-of-town guests were Messrs. and Mesdames Augustus Cowley and Fred Taylor of Hudson; Mr. and Mrs. Alanson Bangs, Adrian; Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Russell, Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bangs, Oil City, Pa.; Mrs. L. W. Hartman and Miss Anna Bangs, Belle Plain, Iowa; Mrs. S W. McClure, Erie, Pa.

THOUGHT HE HAD CHRONIC DYSPEPSIA

But Now Eats Corned Beef. Cabbage, Pork, Onions and Mince Pie For Dinner and Never Feels a Pain.

Do you belong to the "No thank you" society of the dinner table where the mere sight of certain foods makes you feel that pain you know would be yours if you ever ate them?

What a weak, easily upset stomach really needs is not a digestive aid but stomach strengthener. Any reliable physician will tell you it's dangerous to continually dose the pepsin digestors and the like His own prescription will act on the stomach instead No physician ever wrote a better stomach prescription than that embodied in the famous MI-O-NA Stomach Tablets that C. A. Wright & Son and most every other druggist in this vicinity sells with the positive guarantee that they must put a complete and lasting end to stomach misery or money back. Mi-o-na strengthens the walls and muscular fibres of the stomach and induces prompt normal working of your own stomach machinery. It gives relief in ten minutes to all the common and uncomfortable symptoms of sour rising, gas, belching, burning, bloating, shooting pains, etc, and in a few weeks, will put the stomach in such a clear and perfectly healthy condition that it can digest a typical New England boiled dinner without the slightest effort or distres. adv

The Chief Problem Overcome.

"I've taken the most important step toward building a fashionable apartment house."

"Let the contract, have you?"

"No. I've selected a fancy name for the building."—Judge.

First to Strike Oil.

The first man to "strike oil" in the United States was E. L. Drake, a conductor on the New Haven railroad. Employed at Oil Creek, Pa., to drill a well for oil, he accomplished his task on Aug. 27, 1859, and his well went down into history as the first ever drilled for oil in this country.—New York American.

Reformed.

"Pa, Jimmy Green, the toughest fighter in our gang, has reformed. He says it's wrong to fight."

"Do you believe him?"

"I would but for one thing."

"What's that?"

"He never talked that way until he broke his arm."—Detroit Free Press.

Their Five Heavens.

According to the Ptolemaic system of astronomy, there were five heavens, or firmaments, the last of which was the seat of the "pure elemental fire," and the seat of deity. This fifth or highest heaven was called the empyrean, from the Greek "en-fui," which means "in fire."

Seeking the Lost.

"What is the poet gabbling about?"

"His lost Lenore."

"He'd better put an ad in the lost column. By the way, what is a lenore?"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Poor Friends.

When one loses one's reputation it is never necessary to advertise it in the want columns. One's friends will advertise it for one as widely as possible.—Florida Times-Union.

Safety First.

"Do you believe in being perfectly frank with your friends?"

"Only with those that are smaller than I am."—Houston Post.

It is no small commendation to manage a little well. He is a good wagoner that can turn in a little room.—Bishop Hall.

Gift of the Gods.

A meat packer's wagon rattled over the cobblestones down First avenue. Overhead roared an elevated train, and in the sunshine on the curb sat five boys shooting craps.

Suddenly one of them darted out into the street, swung himself up on the passing wagon, seized a ham and jumped off—into the arms of a "white wing."

This agent of the city, after appropriating the ham, gave the boy a vigorous shaking and flung him toward the sidewalk.

Immediately all five boys vanished into the earth.

The "white wing" looked down the street and the wagon had disappeared as completely as the boys, with the driver quite unconscious of any unusual stir.

He looked in every direction; then, doubtless thanking the gods for their gift, he wrapped the ham in a newspaper and he too disappeared down a side street.—New York Post.

A Novel Craft.

In the harbor of Port Weller, the Ontario entrance of the Welland ship canal, says the Engineering News, the surveying staff uses a flat bottomed boat that can lift itself clear of the water. It is a drill boat or sounding scow, of catamaran model, built particularly for the work of finding the elevation of the rock that underlies the bottom of the river. In order to have a steady platform on which to work during rough weather the surveyors had the scow made with a slot at each corner, through which a very heavy spud or post can be raised or lowered. The lifting mechanism consists of a wheel on top of each post, over which a wire cable passes from the side of the scow to an individual engine. When the scow heaves and sways in the water too much workmen start the four engines, and presently the scow is standing firm, with its four stout legs on the bottom of the river.

Slipshod English.

Here are some specimens of very common errors:

Admit for confess. To admit is to concede something affirmed. An unaccused offender cannot admit his guilt.

Adopt. "He adopted a disguise." One may adopt a child or an opinion, but a disguise is assumed.

Aggravate for irritate. "He aggravated me by his insolence." To aggravate is to augment the disagreeableness of something already disagreeable or the badness of something bad. But a person cannot be aggravated, even if disagreeable or bad.

All of. "He gave all of his property." The words are contradictory. An entire thing cannot be of itself. Omit the preposition.

At for by. "She was shocked at his conduct." This very common solecism is without excuse.—Exchange.

NEW WEATHER INFORMATION

The relative humidity in the middle of the day will hereafter be included in the weather reports furnished daily by the Weather Bureau to the newspapers. At present observations of the relative humidity are taken at 8 o'clock in the morning and 8 o'clock in the evening, but at these times the temperature is likely to be much lower and the relative humidity much higher than in the middle of the day. An extra observation of the relative humidity will therefore be taken probably at 2 p. m.

This additional information is expected to be not only of general interest to the public at large, but of practical value in certain branches of manufacturing. The humidity of the atmosphere plays, for example, an important part in cotton spinning, and in many textile mills it is necessary to increase it by artificial means. An observation of the relative humidity at 2 p. m. will indicate much more accurately actual working conditions than figures obtained at the beginning or end of the day.

Snow Ice Cream.

Snow ice cream—what a joy it used to be to the child heart! Mother used to make it when she had been importuned to "dis let us have one more cupful, mom." The youth of today, perhaps, does not need that joy, with everything so handy for buying "store" ice cream. But never can such makeshift take away the memory of the earlier dish. It was so easy to make too. Nature kindly furnished the foundation, and all that was necessary was to add sugar and milk. When a new fall of snow came the children watched anxiously until it became deep enough to scoop up cupfuls of the crystals. Then it was carried to mother and milk poured in and more snow added, and then more milk poured in and more snow added, until there was a full cupful. Sugar was added until the taste was just right and the mixture was placed out of doors until it had become a half frozen mass, and there was the ice cream!—Indianapolis News.

Nicked Arteries.

A "nick" in an artery is sometimes more dangerous than its complete severing, for the coats of arteries are formed of muscular tissue, which contracts, and a slight cut at once expands into a round or oval hole, through which the hemorrhage continues unless the artery be tied. When an artery is completely severed the cut ends tend to turn in and close the tube. In the case of a small artery this closing [illegible] ance. In the case of a larger artery the surgeon ties it at once and closes it. The New York Medical Journal reports two cases at Lincoln hospital in which hemorrhage broke out over and over again for several weeks in arteries that had only just been nicked and that were finally healed by being tied [illegible] had been severed.

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland.

CHAPTER III.

A Forester's Secret.

THE trail, hardly more than a wood road, grew wilder and lonelier as they climbed. Cattle fed on the hillsides in scattered bands like elk. Here and there a small cabin stood on the bank of a stream, but for the most part the trail mounted the high slopes in perfect solitude.

The girl talked easily and leisurely, reading the brands of the ranchers, revealing the number of cattle they owned, quite as a young farmer would have done. She seemed not to be embarrassed in the slightest degree by the fact that she was guiding a strange man over a lonely road and gave no outward sign of special interest in him till she suddenly turned to ask, "What kind of a slicker—I mean a raincoat—did you bring?"

He looked blank. "I don't believe I brought any. I've a leather shooting jacket, however."

She shrugged her shoulders and looked up at the sky. "We're in for a storm. You'd ought 'o have a slicker, no fancy 'raincoat,' but a real old fashioned cow puncher's oilskin. They make a business of shedding rain."

She rode on for a few minutes in silence, as if disgusted with his folly, but she was really worrying about him. "Poor chap!" she said to herself. "He can't stand a chill. I ought to have thought of his slicker myself. He's helpless as a baby."

They were climbing fast now, winding upward along the bank of a stream, and the sky had grown suddenly gray, and the woodland path was dark and chill. The mountains were not less beautiful, but they were decidedly less amiable, and the youth shivered, casting an apprehensive eye at the thickening clouds.

Berea perceived something of his dismay and, drawing rein, dismounted. Behind her saddle was a tightly rolled bundle which, being untied and shaken out, proved to be a horseman's rainproof oilskin coat. "Put this on!" she commanded.

"Oh, no," he protested. "I can't take your coat."

"Yes you can! You must! Don't you worry about me. I'm used to weather. Put this on over your jacket and all. You'll need it. Rain won't hurt me, but it will just about finish you!"

The worst of this lay in its truth, and Norcross lost all his pride of sex for the moment. A wetting would not dim this girl's splendid color nor reduce her vitality one degree, while to him it might be a death warrant. "You could throw me over my own horse," he admitted in a kind of bitter admiration and slipped the coat on, shivering with cold as he did so.

"You think me a poor excuse for a trailer, don't you?" he said ruefully as the thunder began to roll.

"You've got to be all made over new," she replied tolerantly. "Stay here a year and you'll be able to stand anything."

Remounting, she again led the way with cheery cry. The rain came dashing down in fitful, misty streams, but she merely pulled the rim of her sombrero closer over her eyes and rode steadily on, while he followed, plunged in gloom as cold and gray as the storm.

"These mountain showers don't last long," the girl called back, her face shining like a rose. "We'll get the sun in a few minutes."

And so it turned out. In less than an hour they rode into the warm light again, and in spite of himself Norcross returned her smile, though he said: "I feel like a selfish fool. You are soaked."

"I never take cold," she returned. "I'm used to all kinds of weather. Don't you bother about me."

Topping a low divide, the youth caught a glimpse of the range to the southeast, which took his breath. "Isn't that superb?" he exclaimed. "It's like the shining roof of the world!"

"Yes, that's the Continental divide," she confirmed casually, but the lyrical note which he struck again reached her heart. The men she knew had so few words for the beautiful in life. She wondered whether this man's illness had given him this refinement or whether it was native to his kind.

"I'm glad he took my coat," was her thought.

She pushed on down the slope, riding hard, but it was nearly 2 o'clock when they drew up at Meeker's house, which was a long, low, stone structure built along the north side of the road. The place was distinguished not merely by its masonry, but also by its picket fence, which had once been whitewashed. Farm wagons of various degrees of decay stood by the gate, and in the barnyard plows and harrows—deeply buried by the weeds—were rusting forlornly away. A little farther up the stream the tall pipe of a sawmill rose above the firs.

A pack of dogs of all sizes and signs came clamoring to the fence, followed by a big, slovenly dressed, red bearded man of sixty or thereabouts.

"Hello, Uncle Joe!" called the girl in offhand boyish fashion. "How are you today?"

"Howdy, girl," answered Meeker gravely. "What brings you up here this time?"

Meeker's face lightened. "I reckon you're Mr. Norcross? I'm glad to see ye. Light off and make yourself to home. Turn your horses into the corral. The boys will feed 'em."

Without ceremony Meeker led his guests directly into the dining room, a long and rather narrow room, where in a woman and six or seven roughly dressed young men were sitting at a rudely appointed table.

"Earth and seas!" exclaimed Mrs. Meeker. "Here's Berrie, and I'll bet that's Sutler's friend, our boarder."

"Hist along there, boys, and give the company a chance," she commanded sharply. "Our dinner's turrible late today."

The boys—they were in reality full grown cubs of eighteen or twenty—did as they were bid with much noise chaffing Berrie with blunt humor.

Meeker read Sutler's letter, which Norcross had handed him, and, after deliberation, remarked: "All right, we'll do the best we can for you, Mr. Norcross, but we haven't any fancy accommodations."

"He don't expect any," replied Berrie. "What he needs is a little roughing it."

"There's plinty of that to be had," said one of the herders, who sat below the salt. "'Tis the soft life I'm nadin'."

One of the lads, Frank Meeker, a dark, intense youth of about twenty, was Berea's full cousin. The others were merely hired hands, but they all eyed the new comer with disfavor. The fact that Berrie had brought him and that she seemed interested in him added to the effect of the smart riding suit which he wore. "I'd like to roll him in the creek," muttered one of them to his neighbor.

This dislike Berrie perceived in some degree, and to Frank she privately said: "Now, you fellows have got to treat Mr. Norcross right. He's been very sick."

Frank maliciously grinned. "Oh, we'll treat him right. We won't do a thing to him!"

"Now, Frank," she warned, "if you try any of your tricks on him you'll hear from me."

"Why all this worry on your part?" he asked keenly. "How long since you found him?"

The girl herself did not understand the vital and almost painful interest which this young man had roused in her. He was both child and poet to her, and as she watched him trying to make friends with the men, her indignation rose against their clownish offishness.

"I don't feel right in leaving you here," she said at last, "but I must be ridin'." And while Meeker ordered her horse brought out she walked to the gate with Norcross at her side.

"I'm tremendously obliged to you," he said, and his voice was vibrant. "You have been most kind. How can I repay you?"

"Oh, that's all right," she replied, in true western fashion. "I wanted to see the folks up here, anyhow. This is no jaunt at all for me." And, looking at her powerful figure and feeling the traplike grip of her cinch hand, he knew she spoke the truth.

And so she rode away, leaving her ward to adjust himself to his new and strange surroundings as best he could, and with her going the whole valley darkened for the convalescent.

It was soon apparent to the eastern observer that the entire male population for thirty miles around not only knew McFarlane's girl, but that every unmarried man—and some who were both husbands and fathers—kept a deeply interested eye upon her daily motion, and certain shameless ones openly boasted among their fellows of their intention to win her favor, while the shy ones reveled in secret exultation over every chance meeting with her. She was the topic of every lumber camp and the shining lure of every dance to which the ranch hands often rode over long and lonely trails.

Part of this intense interest was due, naturally, to the scarcity of desirable women, but a larger part was called out by Berea's frank freedom of manner. Her ready camaraderie was taken for carelessness, and the candid grip of her hand was often misunderstood, and yet most of the men respected her, and some feared her. After her avowed choice of Clifford Belden they all kept aloof, for he was hot tempered and formidably swift to avenge an insult.

At the end of a week Norcross found himself restless and discontented with the Meekers. He was tired of fishing, tired of the old man's endless arguments and tired of the vulgar cow hands. The men around the mill did not interest him, and their Saturday night spree at the saloon disgusted him. The one person who piqued his curiosity was Landon, the ranger, who was stationed not far away and who could be seen occasionally riding by on a handsome black horse. There was something in his bearing, in his neat and serviceable drab uniform, which attracted the convalescent, and on Sunday morning he decided to venture a call, although Frank Meeker had said the ranger was a "grouch."

His cabin, a neat log structure, stood just above the road on a huge natural terrace of grassy bowlders, and the flag which fluttered from a tall staff before it could be seen for several miles, the bright sign of federal control, the symbol of law and order, just as the saloon and the mill were signs of lawless vice and destructive greed. Around the door flowers bloomed and kittens played.

The cabin's interior pleased Wayland almost as much as the garden. It was built of pine logs neatly matched and hewed on one side.

The ranger, spurred and belted, with his cuffs turned back, was pounding the typewriter when Wayland appeared at the open door, but he rose with grave courtesy. "Come in," he said, and his voice had a pleasant inflection.

"I'm interrupting."

"Nothing serious; just a letter. There's no hurry. I'm always glad of an excuse to rest from this job." He was at once keenly interested in his visitor, for he perceived in him the gentleman and, of course, the alien.

Wayland, with something of the feeling of a civilian reporting to an officer, explained his presence in the neighborhood.

"I've heard of you," responded the ranger, "and I've been hoping you'd look in on me. The supervisor's daughter has just written me to look after you. She said you were not very well."

Again Wayland protested that he was not a consumptive, only a student who needed mountain air, but he added, "It is very kind of Miss McFarlane to think of me."

"Oh, she thinks of everybody!" the young fellow declared. "She's one of the most unselfish creatures in the world."

Something in the music of this speech, and something in the look of the ranger's eyes, caused Wayland to wonder if here were not still another of Berrie's subjects. He became certain of it as the young officer went on, with pleasing frankness, and it was not long before he had conveyed to Wayland his cause for sadness. "She's engaged to a man that is not her equal. In a certain sense no man is her equal, but Belden is a pretty hard type, and I believe, although I can't prove it, that he is part owner of the saloon over there."

"How does that saloon happen to be here?"

"It's on patented land—a so called 'placer claim'—experts have reported against it. McFarlane has protested against it, but nothing is done. The mill is also on deeded land, and together they are a plague spot. I'm their enemy, and they know it, and they've threatened to burn me out. Of course they won't do that, but they're ready to play any kind of trick on me."

"I can well believe that, for I am getting my share of practical jokes at Meeker's."

"They're not a bad lot over there—only just rowdy. I suppose they're initiating you," said Landon.

"I didn't come out here to be a cowboy," responded Norcross, "but Frank Meeker seems to be anxious to show me all the good old cowboy courtesies. On Monday he slipped a burr under my horse's saddle, and I came near to having my neck broken. Then he or some one else concealed a frog in my bed and fouled my hair brushes. In fact, I go to sleep each night in expectation of some new attack, but the air and the riding are doing me a great deal of good, and so I stay."

Thereafter Wayland spent nearly every day with the ranger, either in his cabin or riding the trail, and during these hours confidence grew until at last Landon confessed that his unrest arose from his rejection by Berrie.

"She was not to blame. She's so kind and free with every one I thought I had a chance. I was conceited enough to feel sorry for the other fellows, and now I can't even feel sorry for myself. I'm just dazed and hanging to the ropes. She was mighty gentle about it. You know how sunny her face is. Well, she just got grave and kind o' faint voiced and said— Oh, you know what she said! She let me know there was another man. I didn't ask her who, and when I found out I lost my grip entirely. At first I though I'd resign and get out of the country, but I couldn't do it. I can't yet. The chance of seeing her—of hearing from her once in awhile—she never writes except on business for her father, but—you'll laugh—I can't see her signature without a tremor." He smiled, but his eyes were desperately sad. "Oh, I'm crazy! I admit it. I didn't know such a thing could happen to me, but it has."

As Wayland listened to this outpouring he wondered at the intensity of the forester's passion. He marveled, too, at Berrie's choice, for there was something fine and high in Landon's worship. A college man with a mining engineer's training, he should go high in the service. "He made the mistake of being too precipitate as a lover," concluded Wayland. "His forthright courtship repelled her."

CHAPTER IV.

A Warning.

MEANWHILE his own troubles increased. Frank's dislike had grown to an impish vindictiveness, and if the old man Meeker had any knowledge of his son's deviltries he gave no sign.

"I don't know why I stay," Wayland wrote to Berea. "I'm disgusted with the men up here—they're all tiresome except Landon—but I hate to slink away, and, besides, the country is glorious. I'd like to come down and see you this week. May I do so? Please send word that I may."

She did not reply, and, wondering whether she had received his letter or not, he mounted his horse one beautiful morning and rode away up the trail with a sense of elation, of eager joy, with intent to call upon her at the ranch as he went by.

Hardly had he vanished among the pines when Clifford Belden rode in from his ranch on flat creek and called at Meeker's for his mail.

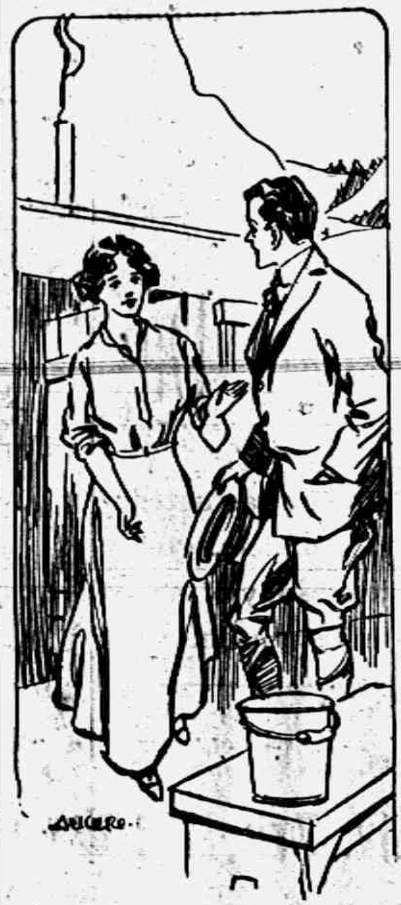
Frank Meeker was in the office, and as he both feared and disliked this big contemptuous young cattleman he set to work to make him jealous.

"You want to watch this one lung boarder of ours," he warned, with a grin. "He's been writing to Berrie, and he's just gone down to see her. His highfalutin ways and his fine white hands have put her on the slant."

"I'm not worrying," retorted Belden.

"You'd better be. I was down there the other day, and it 'peared like she couldn't talk of anything else but Mr. Norcross, Mr. Norcross, till I was sick of his name."

An hour later Belden left the mill and set off up the trail behind Norcross, his face fallen into stern lines. Frank writhed in delight. "There goes Cliff, hot under the collar, chasing Norcross. If he finds out that Berrie is interested in him he'll just about wring that dude's neck."



"I've been wondering about you," she said.

Meanwhile Wayland was riding through the pass with lightening heart, his thought dwelling on the girl at the end of his journey.

As he reached the McFarlane ranch it seemed deserted of men, but a faint column of smoke rising from the roof of the kitchen gave evidence of a cook, and at his knock Berrie came to the door with a boyish word of frank surprise and pleasure. She was dressed in a blue and white calico gown, with the collar turned in and the sleeves rolled up, but she seemed quite unembarrassed, and her pleasure in his coming quite repaid him for his long and tiresome ride.

"I've been wondering about you," she said. "I'm mighty glad to see you. How do you stand it?"

"You got my letter?"

"I did, and I was going to write and tell you to come down, but I've had some special work to do at the office."

She took the horse's rein from him, and together they started toward the stables.

Spiral Nebulae.

It is now an established fact that the majority of the nebulae known to astronomers are spiral nebulae. Their study is very important, and in particular a knowledge of their spectra is capable of furnishing valuable information. The study of the spectra of nebulae is rendered very difficult by the small intrinsic brightness they possess. Nevertheless, some careful experiments made by Slipher on the nebula in Andromeda render it probable that the nebula has a radial velocity of about 186 miles a second, a result which is distinctly greater than the figures formerly obtained for other nebulae. If this nebula in Andromeda approaches the solar system with this velocity—11,160 miles a minute—it suggests that the new star which appeared near its nucleus in 1885 had been a dark star which was encountered.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Polish Peasant Girls.

Polish women have been known to fight on the battlefield and die in the cause of their country. And what seemed harder to some they have given up all their worldly goods in the same cause. Many have been exiled, but never has there been a murmur heard from these brave women, who are capable of any sacrifice. The Polish women have ever been noted for their physical charms, their hands and feet being, from an artistic point of view, absolutely perfect. In the field at harvest time far more women are to be seen than men, and the effect of their different colored dress makes an attractive picture. The skirts of their dresses are generally pinned up, leaving bright petticoats exposed to view.—London Express.

Train Times.

A passenger recently entered a railroad depot to take the 2:15 p. m. train. The clock in the waiting room was several minutes faster than the one in the office, and the passenger asked the porter which clock was correct. After scanning the clocks carefully the porter, with much satisfaction to himself, replied:

"It don't make any difference which is right. The train goes at 2:15 anyhow."—Everybody's.

Woman's World

Suffragist Worker From Denmark Visits America.

HELENE BERG.

The first words Helene Berg said when she was asked about the reasons for her coming to this country were: "I am really here on account of the war, and I hope America will not get into it too. It will only make it harder for all the other neutral nations if she does. You cannot help those who are already dead. You would only add your dead to ours in Europe. We 'little peoples' turn our eyes over here to this big country and are glad that one nation is at peace. No one here knows what war is. Europe is a madhouse. There will be an untold value in having one nation out of war when peace is declared."

Helene Berg is an academician, a graduate of the University of Copenhagen, social worker, lecturer and leader in the effort to better the condition of the abnormal child. For many years she has been eager to see what America is doing for its children—its defectives, delinquents, illegitimates, its helpless and its handicapped—and now that there is a lull in what she can achieve in her own land because of the war she has chosen this time to come here.

Also in another sense she has reached a stopping place in her life work since the long fight of women for the ballot has been successfully terminated in Denmark. In May the Danish diet passed a resolution conferring full suffrage upon women. There remained only a final ratification of the act, but this was felt to be a mere formality.

Helene Berg was also a leader in the woman's congress which undertook to remedy the position of the unmarried mothers of Denmark. The Danish law, when it is finally passed, will give the illegitimate child the right of inheritance from its father and the use of his name.

"Cora" Crochet Lace.

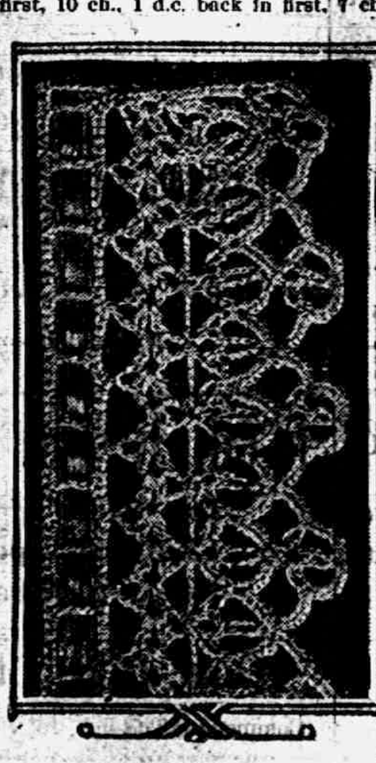
This pattern, which measures two inches across, is suitable for trimming dainty underwear. Crochet cotton No. 30 is a good thread to use for it, and narrow ribbon may be run through the footing holes as a finish.

Insertion.—6 ch., join to form a ring, * 2 tr., 2 ch and 2 tr. into ring; turn with 5 ch. and repeat from * (putting a group into 2 ch.) for the length desired.

First Row.—* 5 ch., 1 d.c. into loop of 5 ch. at side, 7 ch., 1 d.c. back in first, 10 ch., 1 d.c. back in first, 7 ch.,



1 d.c. back in first and 1 d.c. into same loop, repeat from * all along.

Second Row.—5 ch., 1 d.c. under each loop of chain except between trefoils, when the chain must be omitted.

Working Under Difficulties.

For fourteen years I have not had a day's real health. I have wakened sick and gone to bed weary, and I have done my work unflinchingly. And the battle goes on—ill or well, is a trifle, so as it goes. I was made for a contest and the powers have so willed that my battlefield should be this dingy and inglorious one of bed and the physic bottle.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

TENT CATERPILLAR CONTROL.

Depredations Are Widespread—Effective Measures Described.

[Prepared by the United States department of agriculture.]

A very familiar sight in the spring is the unsightly nests or tents of the tent caterpillar, found in trees or bushes along the roadways, streams, fences, in neglected orchards and elsewhere.

These gregarious caterpillars construct the tents for their protection, and these, at first small, are gradually enlarged often to a foot or more in height and diameter, the size varying with the number of individuals in the colony.

Species of the tent caterpillar are found quite generally over the entire United States. The moths deposit their eggs by early midsummer, or earlier in the south. By fall the embryonic larva is practically full grown within the eggs, where it remains until the following spring. With the coming of a warm spell the larvae escape by gnawing through their eggshells often before there is foliage out for food, and under these circumstances they may feed upon the glutinous covering of the egg mass.

The tent caterpillar feeds principally on wild cherry and apple trees, but will attack many other plants, and where such trees can be removed without disadvantage this should be done, thus lessening its food supply.

During the dormant period of trees, when the leaves are off, the egg masses are fairly conspicuous, and with a little practice may be readily found; it is then that they should be cut off and burned. Trees infested with larvae during the early part of the year, or these in the immediate vicinity, are perhaps more likely to be chosen by the parent moth for the deposition of her eggs, and such trees at least should be searched if it is not practicable to extend the work to the orchard as a whole. This work may be combined with pruning to good advantage, and a lookout should be kept not only for the eggs of this insect, but for the eggs and cocoons of other injurious species, which pass the winter on the trees.

LARGE NEST OF LARVAE OF TENT CATERPILLAR IN CROTCH OF WILD CHERRY TREE.

When two egg masses are deposited close together, the resulting caterpillars may form a common nest. These nests are gradually enlarged and soon furnish ample protection. If the caterpillars are destroyed as soon as the small nests are detected, this will prevent further defoliation of the trees, and the rule should be adopted to destroy them promptly as soon as discovered. In this work either of two practices may be adopted, namely, destruction by hand or with a torch.

When in convenient reach, the nests may be torn out with a brush, with gloved hand, or otherwise, and the larvae crushed on the ground, care being taken to destroy any caterpillars which may have remained on the tree.

The use of a torch to burn out the nests will often be found convenient, especially when these occur in the higher parts of trees. An asbestos torch, such as is advertised by seedsmen, will be satisfactory, or one may be made simply by tying rags to the end of a pole. The asbestos or rags are saturated with kerosene and lighted and the caterpillars as far as possible cremated. Some caterpillars, however, are likely to escape, falling from the nest upon the application of the torch. In using the torch great care is necessary that no important injury be done the tree; it should not be used in burning out nests except in the smaller branches and twigs, the killing of which would be of no special importance. Nests in the larger limbs should be destroyed by hand, as the use of the torch may kill the bark, resulting in permanent injury.

Tent caterpillars are readily destroyed by arsenicals sprayed on the foliage of trees infested by them. Any of the arsenical insecticides may be used.

On stone fruits, such as cherry, peach and plum, arsenicals are likely to cause injury to foliage and must be used with caution if at all. On such trees the arsenate of lead is preferable, as it is less injurious to foliage and on all trees sticks much better. In spraying for the tent caterpillar only, applications should be made while the caterpillars are yet small, as these succumb more quickly to poisons than those more nearly full grown, and prompt treatment stops further defoliation of the trees.

Tracing It Back.

"Inquirer" says: "I am making a collection of the best examples of modern slang. What does 'double cross' mean?"

Glad to oblige you. The slang you mention is modern, but the source is classical.

Caesar crossed the Rubicon. Then he recrossed it. This is called "double crossing the Rube."

Shortly afterward the fighting began.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WORK TEAMS AND WEATHER.

"If it rains for several days you do not stay in the house or in bed all the time, do you?

"Certainly not; you have work to do. But if you had to stay in it would be bad for you.

"It's just the same with the work teams. They need exercise in order to begin, when the weather clears, properly fitted.

"A pasture is the best place for them if it is not actually raining, and exercise in box stalls or under a covered shed in the barnyard will be almost as good. Let them stretch their legs."—Farm and Fireside.

OREGON FARMERS TO FILL GAP

Ancient Custom of Growing Tares (Vetch) For Seed to Be Renewed.

[Prepared by Oregon Agricultural college.]

Vetch growing is carried on in several parts of the United States, especially in the southern portions, but little of the crops is ever harvested for seed, in consequence of which most seed is purchased in the open markets for the southern use. Most of the purchased seed is grown in northwestern Europe, Germany and Russia being the principal producers. Exportation from these sources has been cut off almost entirely, and in case the war does not end in time for the fall shipments it is predicted that there will be a great shortage of vetch seed for the southern plantings.

Oregon farmers will try to bridge this big gap between supply and demand by growing larger crops of vetch this season and harvesting most of it for seed. The practice hitherto has been merely to grow seed for home use and partly to supply the demand for seed from southern California. But now that the European supply is likely to be cut off for one year or more and the Panama canal has been opened to traffic seed growing will become more of an industry with farmers of western Oregon.

To Eradicate Garlic.

Garlic is a bad pest on any farm, but is exceptionally so on a dairy farm because of the strong flavor it gives to the milk, says Farm and Fireside. A temporary expedient is to keep the cows off the infested pasture at least four hours before milking. This will greatly reduce the bad flavor. Then if the milk stands at least four hours the flavor may disappear altogether. Here is the best means of eradicating garlic altogether:

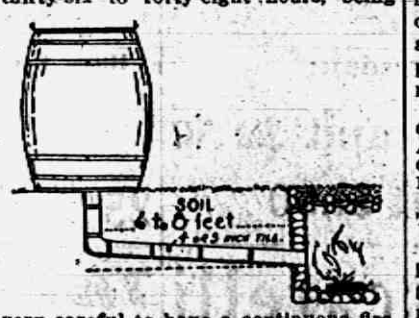
First.—Pour kerosene on the plant from an ordinary kerosene can. Do this before the garlic heads out. Soak the plants thoroughly.

Second.—Carbolic acid applied in the same way is also effective.

Third.—Dig the garlic out with a mattock. With practice you can take out a plant at every stroke, including the bulbs that have not yet sprouted. Destroy all the plants and bulbs removed.

"Cold Smoke" Smokehouse.

In smoking summer sausage be very careful not to get the temperature above 70 degrees F. In other words, the sausage should be smoked with cold smoke. If you have a low smokehouse it is better to make a smokehouse for cold smoke, as shown. The sausage should be smoked for from thirty-six to forty-eight hours, being very careful to have a continuous fire. A large piece of wood with a big knot in it will smoke all night.



The sausage should be kept in a cool, well ventilated place. A little mold will improve the sausage, but if it spreads all over the skin it is harmful, because it gives a moldy flavor. If it begins to get too moldy rub off the mold with a cloth dipped in a mixture of salt and lard.

This sausage is eaten cold. A good way to keep it is to pack it in oats, as they will absorb the moisture, but it ought to be well wrapped in cheesecloth if packed in oats.—Minnesota Bulletin.

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN.

Set main crop celery plants now; also cabbage plants.

Soapsuds will kill plant lice. So will tobacco extract, kerosene emulsion or whale oil soap.

Meat is expensive. Beans are a good substitute.

Keep the weeds all out of the beets. Now is their time to put in some good licks.

Cultivate the homely toad. He lives entirely upon insects and is always hungry.

The greatest mistake in a garden is crowding, which makes everything grow small and spindling.

Wood ashes are good fertilizers, but not for strawberries and potatoes. They do best in a slightly acid soil and the ashes neutralize the acidity. Ashes are excellent for tomatoes, peas and a general line of garden crops.

Provide the tomatoes with a support of some kind—trellis or stakes.

Make two sowings of peas of an early wrinkled variety for a late crop.

Too Generous.

"Do you like Miss Prattle?"

"Yes, she's so generous. Never keeps anything to herself and is always ready to give away even her best friend."—London Tit-Bits.

Literally.

"There are many methods of punishing naughty children."

"Yes, but spanking takes the palm."—London Punch.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Beef production on little farms is just as feasible as on large places. This feature may be made highly profitable every year, and the more live stock is maintained on a farm the better the land will be.

To succeed with beef animals the farmer must know how to feed economically. He must also bring the cattle forward quickly to a finished state. A two-year-old steer weighing 1,300 pounds should represent a total expense not exceeding $60. With system and skill in raising feed and handling the live stock the cost need not be above $50, and this allows a profit of from $50 to $60. There is a still higher rate of profit in bringing the animals to 1,000 pounds at twelve or fourteen months.

A farm of forty acres will provide for twenty to twenty-five head of live stock, which may approximately include six cows, six beef animals, seven or eight head of young stock and a pair of mares, with their colts. For larger or smaller places the figures must be changed. On a farm of this kind a silo is absolutely necessary, and not more than ten acres should be given up to pasture. This ought to be in two fields. A good ration for fattening cattle when they are between 1,000 and 1,200 pounds is as follows:

A GOOD BEEF STEER.

	Pounds.
Corn silage	25
Clover or alfalfa hay	10
Shelled corn	10
Cottonseed meal	5
Roots	5
Total	55

There may be some variation according to available feed and the size and appetite of the animal. Here is another illustration:

	Pounds.
Corn silage	30
Clover or alfalfa	10
Shelled corn	5
Cottonseed meal	5
Bran and shorts	5
Total	55

Cottonseed meal is the cheapest nitrogenous feed available. Pound for pound, cottonseed meal contains three times the per cent of protein contained in wheat, wheat bran, wheat middlings, vetch hay, alfalfa hay, soybean hay or clover hay, and four times the quantity of fat found in any of these foodstuffs.

Comparing the cost of digestible protein in a pound of cottonseed meal with that in other feeds, and assuming the average delivered cost of cottonseed meal to be $24 per ton, the feeder gets two to five times as much protein for his money from cottonseed meal as from other feeds. When available it pays to use cottonseed hulls or sorghum hay, either in beef or milk rations, cutting down on other feeds. A suitable daily ration for a cow of 1,200 pounds giving four or five gallons of milk is as follows:

	Pounds.
Corn silage	30
Alfalfa or clover	10
Cottonseed or linseed meal	3
Bran and ground grain	7
Total	50

Straw, cornstalks and sugar beet pulp will work into this ration with good results. If cottonseed hulls and meal cannot be bought in the local markets any cottonseed oil mill or dealer will supply these products. The meal is generally marketed in sacks of 100 pounds. The usual carload consists of 300 to 400 of these sacks. The hulls can be bought in 100 pound bales or sacks, or can be bought cheaper loose in bulk. A carload varies from twelve to twenty tons. If desired these products may be shipped in the same car by putting the sacked meal on top of the loose hulls.

A farmer who intends to get the best possible results in handling a small beef herd and dairy should raise calves instead of buying either feeders or young cows.

Silage in Summer.

The dairyman who still has silage on hand for use during the summer should consider himself fortunate. There may be many of our readers who are having their first experience in feeding silage. These should bear in mind the fact that exposed silage spoils very quickly in the warm weather. Spoiled silage is not good for any kind of stock, and special precaution should be taken in handling silage during the summer time to prevent spoiling. During the winter time as small a quantity as an inch of silage may be removed daily from the surface without having any spoiling take place. In the summer time a much thicker layer must be removed. For this reason a silo specially designed for summer use should be smaller in diameter than a winter silo for feeding the same number of cattle. Where silage is left over and is being fed during warm weather the use of a tarpaulin on the surface of the silage will save some spoiling. Silage can be fed from one-half of the silo at a time. The purpose of the tarpaulin is to exclude the air from the surface as fully as possible.

A Difficult Wife.

An Englishman thus described the wife of his bosom in his will:

"Heaven seems to have sent her into the world solely to drive me out of it. The strength of Samson, the genius of Homer, the prudence of Augustine, the skill of Pyrrhus, the patience of Job, the philosophy of Socrates, the subtlety of Hannibal, the vigilance of Hermogenes, would not suffice to subdue the perversity of her character."

TO THE LADY OF THE HOUSE

Have you heard of the woman who was always fighting dirt? A caller four her sweeping the front steps looking the picture of despare, when asked the trouble she replied,

"It's cobwebs in the attic, and dust upon the stair,
It's footprints in the kitchen, and it's dust, dust everywhere.
From morn till late at night I wash and scrub and dust,
And still the harder that I work, the more I find I must."

He tried to comfort her but could not, she went on to say, "If I only had one of those Power Washing Machines sold by Temple, how easy my work would be! I would have the washing on the line by 9, I could use hot scalding water and would not have to boil the clothes, I would not have to do more than ten minutes rubbing and then only on the men's overalls. I would never have to turn the wringer by hand again. Why, I would rather have one of those Power Washers like Temple sells than a Piano."

"I need not feel the baby is going to get caught in the gears because they are all covered and none on the top of the machine at all."

"Some of the neighbors say they are expensive, why they save enough doctor bills to pay for themselves."

"I heard Temple was going to sell them Wednesday, $2.50 to $5 00 cheaper than regular price. If John would only buy one."

ARE YOU IN DEBT?

The Debt Habit is one of the greatest dangers of our time—yes, of any time. Is it growing upon you? Once you paid your bills every week—then every month—and now? There is only one way to get out of this debt habit, Take a small portion of your income and deposit it regularly—just as you get it—in a Savings Account at The Lilley State Bank. By this method you will build a sinking fund. It is the only way!

SMALL SUMS DEPOSITED IN THIS BANK RECEIVE THE SAME RATES OF INTEREST AS LARGE ONES.

There was a special session of Tipton Grange held in their hall at Tipton June 25. There was a good attendance, Worthy Master Mohr being in the chair. Tipton grange has been invited to exhibit at the coming county fair at Adrian and the object of this special meeting was to discuss ways and means. After some discussion it was moved and seconded that Worthy Master Mohr be appointed chairman of a committee, the other members to be appointed by himself, to take charge of the matter. The motion was carried unanimously. The matter of a juvenile grange was brought up and referred for future discussion. After the close of the business session, ice cream and cake were served, and happy social hour was enjoyed by all.

England's Army Rifle.

Quite a number of people believe that cartridges are served out to the soldiers separated from one another. Cartridges are, however, usually given out fastened together in clips of five. The modern rifle used by the British army is known as a magazine rifle and holds two clips or ten cartridges in the magazine itself as well as an extra cartridge above the magazine, eleven rounds in all.

When the cartridge clip is forced into the magazine the fastening is removed, so that each cartridge when it reaches the magazine is separate from the others.

The magazine of the army rifle is nothing more than a detachable box containing a spring. This spring forces up one cartridge at a time into its position ready for firing. As a rule the ten cartridges in the magazine are only used in great emergency, as when the order for rapid firing is given to stop an enemy's charge. In the ordinary way the magazine, with its ten cartridges, is shut off from the rest of the rifle by means of a metal slide called the "cut off."—London Standard.

Anneke Van Winkle's Wit

A Story of an Old Dutch Town.

By F. A. MITCHEL

The city of Schenectady, N. Y., until the latter part of the nineteenth century was a sleepy Dutch village.

In the early days, when the Indians used to come into Schenectady to dispose of their pelts in exchange for various articles, the principal of which was firewater, there lived in the town a young man named Hieleger Van Tromp. He was in love with Anneke Van Winkle, a fine specimen of a Dutch girl, who, when wearing all the petticoats she possessed, looked very much like a humming top.

Some twenty miles from Schenectady the remains of a historical mansion that was occupied by Sir William Johnson, prominent in colonial times, still stand. A fur trader named Martin Smith lived in that region and made frequent trips to Schenectady in the way of business. On one of his trips he caught sight of Anneke Van Winkle and fell violently in love with her. A neighbor of Hieleger's told him that he had better look out for his sweetheart, for the Englishman was then at her house begging her to go back with him to the Long house, as the residence of Sir William Johnson was called.

This is the only recorded case of Hieleger showing any animation. He got up from his chair, dropping his pipe, which was shattered, and triangulated to Anneke's house. Smith saw him coming, his eyes afire, and with discretion withdrew. Hieleger chased him out of the town, and when the former returned his shirt was bloody.

It was supposed that the Dutchman had given the Englishman nothing more than a good trouncing until a man came in from Johnson's to learn what had become of Smith, for he had come to Schenectady for a day only, and though a week had passed he had not returned. The fact that when Hieleger had come back from chasing his would be rival blood was on his clothing was proof to the Dutchmen that he had killed Smith. A search was made for the body, but it was not found. But this had little weight, for it was supposed that the murderer had buried it.

Hieleger was tried and convicted. The fact that Smith had disappeared after having been chased, that blood was on the shirt of the man who had chased him, was quite enough for those who tried Van Tromp without wasting words over any possible explanation. The Dutchman of that period was not imaginative or ingenious. What was before his eyes he saw; of what might be behind his back he took no note. That Hieleger had killed the man who sought to take his sweetheart from him they did not doubt. Some were inclined to leniency on account of the provocation, but these were overruled by the wise heads who declared that murder was murder and that was all there was about it. So Hieleger was condemned to be hanged one month from the day on which he was convicted.

Anneke received the verdict stolidly. At least she appeared to do so, though her face was so fat that it is not probable any change of expression could appear in her lineaments. Nevertheless she loved Hieleger, and her love for him had been much enhanced on seeing him chase away the man who had thrust his attention upon her. She went to her home, sat down in the living room and, taking up her knitting, began to think, for Anneke could never think unless her fingers were working the needles.

It would be a mistake to suppose that because Anneke's face was as round as an apple and her little eyes were set above a pair of exuberant cheeks she had no power of thought. She had a considerable thinking apparatus—that is, for those times in the stupid Dutch town in which she lived. And she was not so slow in her thoughts as one would suppose. While she was knitting a pair of stockings she thought out a plan by which she might possibly save her lover from the gallows. It was not a plan that would work in any other age or among any other people, but for them it was admirably adapted, for the Schenectady burgher was a man accustomed to moving in a single plane. Out of that plane he at once became befogged and could not move at all.

There was in those days one church in which all the people of Schenectady worshiped. In its steeple was a clock that furnished them the time. The sun might rise and set irregularly, but the clock went right on just the same. Indeed, it would have been treason to doubt its accuracy, for it was the only calendar in the town. By the hour it marked all things were decided. If a man promised to pay a sum of money in thirty days the expiration of the period was not marked by the fact that the sun had risen and set thirty times, but that the hour hand of the clock had noted the passage of thirty days.

The people in Schenectady were used in those days to getting up at 6 in the morning. One morning a large number of persons awaking at their usual time were surprised that they remained awake an hour before the clock struck 6. But they were slow in comparing notes, and even if they had done so they would not have suspected that there was anything wrong with the clock. They would have attributed the fact that so many of them had lain awake an hour in the morning to coincidence.

The next morning when the people awoke they discovered that the clock instead of registering 6 or 5, as it had done the morning before, registered 4. This circumstance created a greater disturbance in the village than anything that had ever occurred there since the great Indian massacre. It was evident that the clock had lost considerable time, for two days before the sun had risen at 6 and now when the clock struck that hour the sun was high in the heavens.

Had the clock been a few minutes too slow or too fast, even had the burghers known it, they would not have wondered. As it was they did not know what to make of it. So great was their faith in their timepiece that instead of thinking it wrong they laid the blame on the sun, though many of them preferred to believe that the devil had got into the belfry and had interfered with the mechanism. A committee of three was appointed to sit up and watch the hands to see when the change took place. The dial was lighted by a full moon, and they could see it distinctly. By 10 o'clock they had drunk so much schnapps that they saw a marvelous sight. The hands spun round like the spokes of a rapidly revolving wagon wheel, first forward and then backward, stopping at 0. This settled the matter. The devil was at work in the belfry.

When twelve days had passed the burghers began to notice that each morning the clock was getting nearer their rising hour, though now it seemed to be gaining instead of losing, and before four weeks had passed it had come right again. Then they concluded that the devil had tired of fooling with it and had let it alone, for it went on steadily for twenty-four days after it had commenced its antics.

Meanwhile the date of Hieleger Van Tromp's execution approached. The morning of the execution Anneke Van Winkle went to the judge of the court and said:

"Your worship, I have a confession to make."

"What is it, Anneke?" asked the judge.

"It is in connection with the hanging of Hieleger Van Tromp. What day was he sentenced to be hanged?"

"Friday; that is today."

"This is not Friday, your worship; it is Saturday."

"What is the matter with you, Anneke? Has the loss of your lover made you mad?"

"No, your worship. I say it is Saturday, because we have lost a day. Every night for twenty-four days I have climbed to the belfry of the church and turned the hands of the clock back an hour."

"Did you do that, Anneke?"

"Yes."

The judge began to puzzle his brain over the question as to whether a day had been lost or not by the setting back of the clock. But, not reaching any conclusion, he sent word to the sheriff not to execute the prisoner until further orders. Then he called in the most prominent citizens and stated the case to them, asking their opinion whether, Anneke having set back the hands of the clock twenty-four hours, the day on which Hieleger Van Tromp was to be executed had passed.

The question struck those to whom it was propounded as the most difficult they had ever been called upon to solve. After an hour's babel, during which some maintained one side and some another and frequent shifting from one side to the other, it was decided that the matter was too important to be decided in a hurry, and they all adjourned to a place where they could procure schnapps and tobacco.

When the hour of noon came—the time the hanging had been ordered—the debate was still going on and had extended to every person in the village. Never had there been such excitement in the sleepy old town since the day of the great Indian fight in 1690. A man would be of one opinion, while his wife took the opposite view. They quarreled. Fathers and sons, mothers and daughters contended, and before nightfall all the lovers in town were estranged.

The next morning, there being doubt whether the day was Saturday or Sunday, the trouble broke out afresh. Some called on the domine to hold service; others declared that the church should not be opened. This caused a riot at the door of the sanctuary, those trying to get in being attacked by those trying to keep the church shut.

During the afternoon a man was seen crossing the Mohawk river in a boat. It was agreed that this person, who doubtless came from the Long house, be asked whether the day was Saturday or Sunday. When he came near enough for the people to distinguish his features he was seen to be Martin Smith, the "murdered" man.

Every man and woman and child, being more interested in the date than the legal aspects involved in Smith's return, met him with the question, "What day is this?" He was so startled that he could not tell them till he had examined memoranda he had in his pocket; then he declared that it was Saturday.

The question of the hanging was settled not only by the return of the supposed victim, but from the fact that the day set for the execution had passed. The people were beside themselves with joy that they had not hung Hieleger and took Anneke, whose wit had saved him, on their shoulders and carried her to the jail, where her lover was set free, and they insisted that a wedding service be performed immediately.

So the domine was called, and the pair were married.

Frederick's War on Coffee.

In a manifesto issued by Frederick the Great in 1779 the mighty monarch deplored "the increased consumption of coffee by my subjects and the amount of money that goes out of the country in consequence. Everybody is using coffee. This must no longer be. My subjects must drink beer. His majesty was brought up on beer, and so were his ancestors. Innumerable battles have been fought and won by soldiers nourished on beer, and the king does not believe that coffee drinking soldiers can be depended upon to endure hardships or to conquer his enemies should another war occur." Coffee roasting was made a government monopoly, and a prohibitive price was charged for the berry. "Coffee smellers" were appointed all over Prussia to check illicit roasting. Coffee was therefore ousted from popular favor.

Throwing Dirty Water.

An English legal periodical recently published an inquiry sent to it by a lawyer as to the origin of a queer belief encountered by him—that it is no offense to throw water on a person, provided the water be dirty. A client of his, summoned for assault, had assured him that he had a sufficient defense, because he had taken the precaution of putting a handful of dirt in the water before throwing it. Another correspondent suggested as the solution the ancient practice, before the days of drains and sewers, of throwing waste water into the street. When this practice was prevalent doubtless the fact that the water was dirty instead of clean was a circumstance tending to show that the wetting of the unfortunate passerby was a misadventure rather than by design.

Bridal Chamber Silver.

Few places of equal extent in mother earth ever produced as much wealth in ore as the famous "bridal chamber" in the Lake Valley silver mines in southern New Mexico. It yielded over $3,000,000, the silver ore being found twenty feet underground and was taken from a space no larger than a good sized room. One piece of ore weighed 81,000 pounds and returned smelter values of over $82,000. In another nearby shaft fifty feet in depth $116,000 worth of ore of the same character was hoisted with a hand windlass in eight hours.—Argonaut.

GEORGE'S BAD SPELL.

Washington Never Could Learn to Write Some Words Correctly.

Whoever heard that the great George Washington never could learn to spell correctly?

You see, it happened this way. When George was quite a young boy he came across a copy of an English book called, the "Young Man's Companion," written in a "plain and easy style," as the title stated, which taught one how to write letters, wills, deeds, to survey, to navigate, to build houses, to make ink and cider, how to doctor the sick and how to conduct oneself in society, "all without the aid of a tutor."

Washington studied this book from cover to cover and from it acquired two qualities that clung to him through life. His handwriting, easy, flowing and legible, was modeled from the engraved "copy" sheet, and certain forms of spelling were learned that he never could correct.

To the end of his life Washington wrote lie, lye; liar, lyar; ceiling, cieling; oil, oyl, and blue, blew, as in his boyhood he had learned to do from this old book. Struggle as he did in trying to spell as the others of his day did, he never could be sure of certain words.—St. Louis Republic.

STREAKED WALLS.

Cold Surfaces Always Catch More Dust Than Hot Ones.

The reason that lath and plaster walls become streaked is explained by John Aitken, in Nature, as due to the tendency of hot air to deposit its dust on cold surfaces, and the colder the surface the weaker the power of resistance. So where the laths protect the plaster from the cold outside the plaster receives less deposit of dust than where it is between the laths.

Wherever a hot steam or water pipe comes through a wall a vertical streak of dust may be seen above it, due to the hot air driving the dust against the cold wall. Rooms that are heated by open grates are much less dusty than those heated by radiators because in the former the furniture is heated principally by radiation, and, being warmer than the air, it repels the particles of dust instead of catching them, while in the latter the air heats the furniture and in so doing deposits its dust on it.

Rooms lighted by electricity keep clean longer than those heated by gas simply because the light is almost cold.

Mr. Aitken sums it up as follows: "Any surface hotter than the air keeps free from dust."

Swallowed and Climbed.

A woman newly rich was invited to an aristocratic dinner party. During the course of fowl and salad this woman noticed with dismay a fat, furry caterpillar on her topmost leaf of lettuce. Glancing up, she met her aristocratic hostess' eye. The hostess, too, had seen the caterpillar. Her gaze implored the guest to save the dinner from catastrophe. The guest gave her hostess a reassuring smile. Then she doubled a lettuce leaf around the caterpillar and swallowed it calmly. The look of awe and gratitude that her hostess gave her was an assurance that her footing in society was at last firmly established.

"Did you think," said Mrs. Newlyrich to her daughter afterward, "that I'd lose a chance of establishing the family socially for a little thing like a caterpillar?"

Diplomacy.

"Baron," the banker Veitelsberger is in the parlor with a note for $5,000."

"But I haven't any money."

"Yes, sir. He says that then you must propose to his oldest daughter today. He's brought her too."—Munich Meggendorfer Blaetter.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Girl's Efforts Free Lover.

OWOSSO, MICH. — Sentenced to Ionia reformatory three years ago for the attempted murder of Agnes Ribnikai, Martin Halik gave up as lost both his liberty and his sweetheart, whom he shot when she spurned his attentions.

After he was paroled, a few days ago, through the persistent efforts of the girl, he found her waiting for him at the prison. They had been sweethearts in Bohemia but after coming to this country became estranged. The shooting occurred after Halik had tried in vain to effect a reconciliation.

The girl went before the state pardon board to plead for Halik's liberty. She told the authorities she loved him and would marry him the moment he obtained his freedom.

Ypsi Mason Falls Dead.

YPSILANTI, MICH. — While Laverne Dillion, thirty years old, proprietor of the news stand at the interurban station here, was acting as one of the officers in an initiation ceremony at the Masonic temple he dropped dead of heart disease.

He was assisting in conferring the master Mason degree.

WOMAN KILLS SELF TO AVOID LAWSUIT

Father Had Charged Mrs. Herman Neumann with Fraud.

ST. JOSEPH, MICH. — Mrs. Herman Neumann, wife of a well to do farmer living three miles south of this city, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head rather than take the witness stand in the circuit court as defendant in a suit brought against her by her father, George Schlenk, charging that he had been defrauded out of half interest in a $6,000 farm.

She was about to start for the opening of the morning session of court.

TWO DROWNED AT LANSING

Accident Usual Result of People Changing Seats in Boat.

LANSING, MICH. — An attempt to change seats in a canoe caused two deaths here while two other occupants of the canoe were rescued.

Jennie Sutton, aged eighteen, Margaret Sanborn, eighteen, Howard Koons, twenty-one, and a young man named Draham, about twenty, hired a canoe to go to Waverly park. When about a half mile from the park, in twenty feet of water, the Sutton girl and Draham attempted to change seats. The canoe turned over and four went into the water. Draham tried to swim to shore with the girl but could not make it and both went down. Koons and the Sanborn girl clung to the canoe until two men came in a motor boat.

Mrs. Miller, Owosso, Weeps Telling of Alleged Plot.

OWOSSO, MICH. — Telling dramatically in her husband's examination of the result of the analysis of a physician who told her that tablets given her by Charles H. Miller was composed of bichloride of mercury, Mrs. Miller broke down and wept while her daughter also burst into tears.

Court hurriedly recessed. Her physician testified that tablets brought to him were bichloride of mercury and declared that symptoms previously described as having been undergone by Mrs. Miller were those of bichloride of mercury poisoning.

AUTO KILLS DR. L. B. RHODES

Farmer, in Another Machine, Killed at Same Time in Same Way.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Dr. L. B. Rhodes of South Haven, former president of the Kalamazoo Academy of Medicine, was killed near South Haven when his automobile turned turtle, as he was hurrying to attend a patient.

Charles Callahan, a rich farmer living south of White Pigeon, was killed at midnight while returning to his home when his automobile turned turtle. Both accidents happened in exactly the same way and while the drivers were running at high speed. Both were crushed under their machines.

AUTO ACCIDENT INJURES FIVE

Hillsdale Party All Hurt When Car Turns Over at Jonesville.

HILLSDALE, MICH. — An automobile driven by Earl Olney, chauffeur at the Parkhurst garage, and occupied by Fremont Donley, George Nicas, Ira Huffman and John A. Barnhart, turned turtle on the Jonesville turnpike four miles west of Jonesville.

Olney was badly injured and the others were bruised. Olney has one broken rib and another fractured.

HUSBAND'S PAY TOO SMALL

Woman Given Decree for Divorce Rejects Offer of Alimony.

Mrs. Cartwright declared her husband was cruel to her, but she did not want to take away any part of his income.

Shoes and Nerves.

Travelers say that the reason why nervous people don't exist in China is because it is the custom to wear soft shoes there. There is no doubt that hard soled, creaking footgear is responsible for such nervous wear and tear as well as physical fatigue in western lands.

Tired feet and tired nerves will find solace in a warm foot bath with a handful of salt in it. Move the feet about or keep them still, as best pleases you, as long as the water is pleasantly warm; then dry them with a rough towel and put on a fresh pair of stockings.—Family Doctor.

2 PONTIAC CHILDREN LOSE LIVES IN POND

One Youngster Saved by 15-Year-Old Companion.

PONTIAC, MICH. — While playing on a large raft in a pond in the Pearce gravel pit, Steven Borski, seven years old, and Tony Grumpt, ten, slipped into water fifteen feet deep and were drowned.

Chris Borski, older brother of one of the victims, was saved by Rudolph Michelo, fifteen, who had been swimming in the pond and was dressing when he heard the cries of the three. He sprang in and dragged out one boy, but the other two had gone down, when he returned. Both bodies were recovered.

JITNEY MEN PROTEST LAW

Flint Bus Owners Say New Ordinance Is Confiscatory.

FLINT, MICH. — Charging that the new Flint jitney bus ordinance is confiscatory, the Flint Auto club, composed of jitney bus operators here, propose legal action against the common council if an attempt is made to enforce it July 15.

Objection is taken to a clause that requires bonds ranging from $5,000 to $20,000 for jitneys depending on the carrying capacity of the cars. Surety bonds would cost the jitney men from $250 to $1,000 and this, they say, will put 90 per cent of them out of business. There are about 150 jitneys in Flint.

C. E. JENNISON, 86, IS DEAD

Manfuacturer Succumbs Few Hours After Charles Fitzhugh.

BAY CITY, MICH. — Charles E. Jennison, eighty-six years old, one of Bay City's best known citizens, died from ailments incident to age, a few hours after Charles Fitzhugh, another pioneer and distant relative, had dropped dead of heart failure.

Mr. Jennison was the founder of the Jennison Hardware company and an organizer of the Michigan Pipe company. He came here sixty-five years ago as one of the county's first settlers. He was a son-in-law of the late James G. Birney, twice a candidate for president.

HINTS AT SPECIAL SESSION

Governor Ferris Might Call One to Aid Michigan Illiterates.

MENOMINEE, MICH. — That he might call a special session of the legislature to consider legislation to aid the 80,000 illiterates in the state was the hint, dropped by Governor Ferris in his remarks at the dedication of the $15,000 high school at Stephenson, Menominee county.

"All schools of the state should be kept open twelve months in the year and night classes should be started at once for parents and other 'adults'," said the governor.

New Fire Responsibility.

LANSING, MICH. — In connection with the campaign to enforce personal responsibility for preventable fires, Attorney General Fellows has given State Fire Marshal Winship an opinion holding that under the common law a property owner on whose premises a fire starts because of negligence is liable for damages to his neighbor if the fire spreads to or damages his neighbor's person or property.

RUSS SINK GERMAN CRUISER

General Staff Reports Warship of Deutschland Type Was Destroyed—Italian Forces Drive Austrians Back Ten Miles—Germans Report Raid by Air on Harwich.

LONDON — The approach of the German armies toward Warsaw has caused an exodus of civilians from the Polish capital. This is admitted in a dispatch to Reuter's Telegraph company from Petrograd.

This message says the civilians are leaving "in order not to hamper military operations."

"German aeroplanes are dropping messages into Warsaw," the message continues, "stating that the city will be in the possession of the Germans within a month. The Germans, it is known, have drawn up lists of prominent Poles whom they plan to hang for their Russian sympathies."

Mackensen Presses Ahead.

At a rate estimated at five miles a day General von Mackensen's forces are still swinging northward in Galicia and Poland in an effort to drive a wedge into the Russian center and dislodge the Russians from the Vistula river and force them back over the Bug, thus splitting the grand duke's forces into two sections with thousands of acres of swamp and marsh land between them.

German Cruiser Sunk by Russians.

PETROGRAD — The naval general staff has issued an announcement that during the series of naval actions following the raid attempted by German warships on Windau another big German warship of the Deutschland type was blown up by two torpedoes and sunk. The official announcement credits the destruction of the battle ship to a submarine.

While the identity of the German sea fighter is not disclosed, there are only five ships of that distinctive type—the Deutschland, Hanover, Pommern, Schleswig-Holstein and Schlesien. All were launched between 1904 and 1906 and are of 15,200 tons and carry a complement of about 800 men. They are heavily armed, their principal guns being 11-inch, and their speed between 19 and 20 knots under forced draught. Their cost was more than $6,000,000 each. The Deutschland was specially fitted as the Kaiser's flagship.

Battle in Baltic.

The destruction of this vessel took place early in the series of engagements in the Baltic which terminated Saturday in damaging two German cruisers, after driving the German mine layer Albatross ashore on the coast of Gothland Island, Sweden. Dispatches from the latter state that the commander of the Albatross was not killed, as erroneously reported, the dead officer being First Lieutenant Lowenberg. The twenty members of the crew killed have been buried there, twenty-seven wounded are being cared for in Swedish hospitals, and 187 men have been interned.

Latins Drive Foe Back Ten Miles.

GENEVA — The Tribune's Carnia correspondent states that since the first of July the Italians have gained nearly ten miles to the eastward. Important battles, he writes, are in progress between Caporetto and Idria. The Italians, with heavy forces, are pushing the Austrians back along the entire front. Despite floods along the Isonzo, the Italians are moving on Plava. Since the morning of July 2 they have advanced twenty-two miles from Iderako, southeast of Tolmino.

Germans in Air Raid on Harwich.

BERLIN — Another air raid on the British coast and a similar bombardment of fortified towns and a railroad station in eastern France has been given out by the official bureau.

The objective in England was the town of Harwich, on the east coast, and a fleet of British torpedo-boat destroyers lying in the harbor.

The German aeroplanes suceeded in bombarding a fort near Harwich and in dropping bombs among the destroyers, but with what effect has not been made public.

Campaign Against Berat, Albania, Will Not Be Tolerated.

PARIS — A dispatch received from Rome says that a message has been received by the Tribuna from Antivaria, Montenegro, stating that two large details of Greek soldiers are advancing toward Berat, Albania. They are occupying the villages as they go.

"The allies have warned Greece that the occupation of Berat will not be tolerated."

BECKER TO SQUEAL ON "MEN HIGHER UP"

Condemned New York Policeman Will Tell Who Got Graft.

NEW YORK — Charles Becker in the death house at Sing Sing will reveal, before he goes to the death chair, the names of the police department officials, living and dead, with whom he divided the $100,000 graft money that was wrung from the gamblers and illegal resort keepers in his violent career, as commander of the strong arm squad.

This was the prediction made by the condemned man's lawyer, Martin T. Manton, who gave to the governor on Thursday the names of the six men who worked in the background and took the cash that Becker ground out of evil doers. Not all of these men are living, but those that are alive ought to be shaking in their shoes, according to Mr. Manton, because Becker is desperate, now that hope is practically gone.

The lawyer himself would not make public the names of the officials accused by Becker. He said that he was bound not only by the ethics of his profession and his promise to Governor Whitman, but was restrained also by the possibility that some of the men named by Becker might be falsely accused.

J. P. MORGAN SHOT DOWN BY ASSASSIN

MINEOLA, L. I. — While J. P. Morgan continues to improve, according to late bulletins issued by his physicians at Glen Cove, police officials are keeping up their grilling of Frank Holt, the war-crazed crank who shot the noted financier after exploding a bomb in the capitol at Washington.

Although convinced that Holt is not connected with any New York anarchistic group, the detectives dare not cease their questioning, as they have drawn from Holt the admission that he intended to seek out President Wilson at Cornish, N. H., after shooting Morgan.

The latest bulletins issued by Morgan's attending physicians, Drs. Jas. W. Markoe and H. M. Lyle, state that the magnate has every chance of recovery.

Neither bullet fired by Holt pierced Morgan's abdomen, and an X-Ray examination has disclosed that no bones were touched. Both bullets have been located.

From associates of Mr. Morgan it is learned that his condition is in no way alarming and that he is resting easily. An examination of the revolvers used by Holt has disclosed that the bullets were not poisoned, as had been feared at first, and so far there is no indication of infection. Morgan's speedy recovery is confidently expected, unless belated infection sets in.

Holt is on the verge of a collapse from the third degree methods used to wring the last detail of the murder and terrorization plot from him. The detectives in charge of the assassin dare not let him rest until his entire campaign has been laid bare and it is definitely ascertained whether or not he had accomplices.

So far no success has attended the efforts of police and secret service investigators to determine where Holt obtained the dynamite of which he fashioned the bomb which wrecked a reception room in the senate wing of the United States capitol, and two sticks of which were still in his suitcase when he was taken into custody. In view of the threatening letters which have been received lately at the White House, the investigators will keep after Holt until all his plans are bared.

PORFIRIO DIAZ IS DEAD, AN EXILE

Stormy Career of Ex-Dictator Closes in Paris.

RULED MEXICO FOR 35 YEARS

Four Years' Exile From Native Land Spent at French Capital—Educated as Priest, [illegible] Military Leader and Finally Strongest Man in Nation's History.

PARIS — General Porfirio Diaz, former president of Mexico, died at 7 o'clock in the morning. His wife, Senora Carmen Romero Rubio Diaz, and their son, Porfirio Diaz Jr. and the latter's wife were at the bedside when the end came.

General Diaz had been in failing health since reaching Europe in 1911 after his resignation from the presidency of Mexico following the successful Madero revolution. Last fall he was ill at Biarritz, France, but was reported to have recovered. He had consistently declined to comment on the passing phases of the Mexican situation.

Diaz Born in 1830.

General Diaz was born in 1830. His family was of old Spanish stock, with an infusion of Indian blood. Left fatherless at the age of three, he was educated at the expense of the bishop of Oaxaca, with the intention of becoming a priest, but he eventually turned to law and then at the outbreak of the war with the United States turned to a military career.

He served throughout that struggle in a militia company which he helped organize, and after peace was declared made a special study of military science. He and one other were the only two in the country who dared openly oppose the continuation of Santa Anna's dictatorship. His execution was ordered, but he escaped and joined Herrera's revolt.

Diaz speedily made a reputation as a soldier, and as a brigadier general he was the chief thorn in the side of the French forces, when, taking advantage of the civil war in the United States, they attempted to place Archduke Maximilian of Austria on the throne of a Mexican empire.

Captures Mexico City.

Diaz harrassed the enemy constantly, and in June, 1867, captured Mexico City with his forces. On the establishment of the republic he was unsuccessful as a candidate for president, but in 1877 he was elected to fill the unexpired term of the fugitive president, Lerdo. His last and eighth election was in July, 1910.

To Diaz was given credit for the advance of Mexico to the status of a stable, progressive and prosperous government, although the autocratic methods he employed were widely criticised.

DRAINAGE DITCH TO COST HALF MILLION

It Will Reclaim Large Part of Kankakee Marshes.

LAPORTE, IND. — A drainage ditch that will cost half a million dollars, and will traverse four counties—Laporte, St. Joseph, Starke and Marshall—will probably be undertaken soon, according to the report of the commissioners, Thomas Coarey, Edward O. Crat and Harry M. Miles, filed in the Laporte Circuit court.

The ditch is the largest project of its kind ever undertaken in northern Indiana, it is believed, and it will reclaim tens of thousands of acres of marsh lands along the Kankakee river. The ditch, with its arms, will total 100 miles.

German Note Expected July 8.

WINDSOR, VT. — Germany's second note in response to this government's protest against her submarine warfare operations culminating in the sinking of the Lusitania will reach Washington about July 8. An American Messenger

He Carried a Dispatch In the European War.

By GEORGE Y. LARNED

Cyrus Delano, an American, went to Italy when he was twenty years old and was so delighted with the country, the climate, the historical associations, that he found it hard to get away. Finally he settled in Rome and became a foreign resident of that interesting city. Several years passed, during which Delano became intimate with many Italian citizens of prominence and was invited to social functions in the royal circle. On several occasions he met the king, who seemed to take a great fancy to him.

Then like a bolt from heaven came the great European war. Italy found herself in a very equivocal position. A member of the triple alliance with Germany and Austria, a bitter hatred existing on the part of Italians against the Austrians, unprepared to enter the fray on either side, the government was in a quandary. Nevertheless the sympathies of both the government and the people were strongly in favor of the allies.

One day when Cyrus Delano was walking idly down the Via Nationale, watching the knots of people discussing the advance of the German troops into Belgium, he felt a tap on his shoulder. Turning, he saw a gentleman he did not remember to have seen before, who said to him:

"Signor Delano, will you please accompany me. The minister of foreign affairs wishes to speak to you."

Wondering what in the world so distinguished a functionary wished with him, Delano accompanied the man to the foreign office and without any delay whatever was ushered into the office of the secretary. There was another person present whom Delano recognized as the French ambassador. The former asked the American to be seated and then began to interrogate him. When he had finished the questions he said:

"Mr. Delano, this is the ambassador from France. He desires to send a very important message to his government at Paris. In this I am equally interested on behalf of the Italian government. We are beset by spies. If we send an Italian or a Frenchman he is liable to be waylaid by secret emissaries of the members of the triple alliance. An American will have a far better chance to get through with the message than one of a different nationality. Besides, you Americans are fertile in expedients. Indeed, you are a very bright people."

Delano, though he had no preference for either side, was quite pleased with the idea of such a service and at having been chosen for it. He accepted the mission and was told that the dispatch would be sent to him the same afternoon and it was desirable that he depart at the earliest possible moment afterward.

"However," said the secretary, "we have decided to intrust you with a knowledge of what the message contains. If you are waylaid and robbed of the document you can in that case proceed and deliver your message orally. We shall send a person known to be in our confidence to confirm what you say. What we desire to impart to the French government is this: As members of the triple alliance we are expected to threaten France in the south while she is attacked in the north. All the French troops will be needed on the northern border. We are sending word by you that we have no intention whatever of attacking France. For the present at least we shall remain neutral."

"I confess, your excellency," said Delano, "that I feel highly flattered at having been chosen to carry a message of such vital importance."

Delano was then furnished with funds for his journey and given instructions as to the different routes he might pursue. Then he took his departure and began preparations for his journey.

The shortest route from Rome to French territory is by way of Genoa. Therefore if spies were on Delano's track they would naturally expect him to proceed by this route. It was therefore decided that he should go by Switzerland, passing through Lucerne, Berne and Neuchatel.

Having received the dispatch, which was written in as small compass as possible, Delano called a cab and was driven to the railway station. Walking back and forth on the platform was a lady whom he had met at functions at the Quirinal palace, Mme. Tatiani, a Greek, who he had understood was distantly related to the queen of that country. The lady on seeing Delano smiled graciously, though he did not remember to have been presented to her.

"Oh, Signor Delano! Are you going on the train? Yes? I am so glad. I dislike traveling very much and shall be glad of your company."

Delano said that he was going to Switzerland, since he could no longer stand the midsummer weather of Rome. He expressed himself pleased in words at the lady's company, but his brows were knit, for he had been assured that he could trust no one, and the most effective spies were women of high degree. However, resolving to be on his guard, he made the best of what he considered a misfortune and at Mme. Tatiani's invitation took a seat in a compartment that she had engaged for her own exclusive use.

The lady was a woman verging on thirty and had been very beautiful. That beauty had but little faded, and her mental attractiveness was at its best. Delano soon became aware that she was endeavoring to fascinate him. She adored Americans, pronounced them a marvelous people, and the absence of European conventionality in them gave them a freshness that other people did not have. Her eyes were very expressive, and she kept them constantly fixed on Delano's.

At 10 o'clock Delano left the lady's compartment after she had exacted a promise from him to see her the next morning. He was intending to give her the slip at Lucerne and tried to do so, but when he was hurrying away to a train for Berne a man stepped up to him and informed him that a lady wished to speak to him. Resigning himself to another meeting with his fair companion of the evening before, he followed the man to the waiting room, where he found her.

"Ah, Mr. Delano," she exclaimed, with a reproachful look, "were you going to desert me? Did I not tell you that I was going on the same route as yourself? What have I done that you should treat me so?" The last words were spoken with a tinge of sadness and a look from her beautiful eyes that would have conquered almost any man.

Delano was certainly affected by her apparent preference for him, and had he trusted any one he certainly would have trusted her. He would have resigned himself to travel further with her without reluctance had he not been sensible of the great importance of the message he bore.

On reaching Berne the lady begged him to see that her trunks were put on the train for Neuchatel, which did not leave for an hour. Delano went off to look for the trunks and was directed from one railway official to another till he was in a far distant part of the station. Suddenly he saw a man coming hurriedly toward him and two others from another direction. They closed in on him and were dragging him to an exit when they were in turn attacked by several others.

Delano, whose brain worked very quickly, saw at a glance what this all meant. The Greek was an agent of others and had sent him after her trunks to get him where he could be attacked by agents of the secret service with a view to robbing him of his dispatch. What he did not know was that the Italian government had sent men to follow him and be ready to assist him should he be interfered with. He supposed those who had come to his rescue were persons who had seen a stranger attacked and considered it their duty to help him.

The rescuers were all powerful men and soon drove off the assailants. Then one of them picked up Delano's hat that had been knocked off in the fray and offered it to him. The others disappeared in different directions. Then the one who was left said to him in a whisper:

"Follow me."

Leaving the station, the man struck into the town and after turning in different directions went into a wineshop. Delano followed him and was told by him that he was an officer of the Italian carabineers, or national police. He and half a dozen men in plain clothes had been sent by the government to shadow and protect him.

"There is another train tonight," he said to Delano, "which we will board at the first station west of Berne. My men will meet us there. Any one of us seen to get on the train here would give us away. I do not expect to avoid them, but it is possible by the plan I propose to do so."

"But how," asked Delano, "did they get word of my coming on my mission?"

"Spies—spies everywhere. They are among the clerks even of the government offices. Doubtless your visit to the foreign office was reported immediately."

Delano and the carabineer remained where they were till dark. Then the latter sent out for a cab, and, entering it with their hats drawn down over their faces, they were driven some ten miles to a station, where they boarded a train. The other members of the party got on at different points, and Delano was informed that there were in all a dozen men, stout and well armed. All were in citizens' dress and many of them disguised.

Evidently the arrangements made for Delano's protection were far more perfect than those of the other side, for, though the officer in command of the carabineers pointed out various persons who were secretly watching to take him, they were not in sufficient force to do so. However, on changing trains at Neuchatel they made one last effort. Delano was walking through the crowded station when some one cried out:

"A spy!"

Immediately there was a rush for him by many persons. But the carabineers, who came from all directions, formed a circle about him, and some with their fists and others with their canes repelled the crowd till the police began to arrive, when the ringleaders vanished and the rest dispersed Then Delano, guarded by the Italian chief, entered the train and was whirled away to Paris.

When the messenger was driven to the president's residence and sent in word that he was the bearer of dispatches from the Italian government he was admitted immediately.

"This," said the president, "is the most important announcement you could have brought."

Family Fun.

They had been having a quarrel, and after Mrs. Gilson had spoken the last word, as usual, she felt that perhaps she had overdone the matter and, picking up the evening paper, began to read little items from it.

"Oh, Henry," she laughed, "isn't this funny? Here is a man advertising for a silent partner with $1,000."

"Funny!" growled Gilson. "Yes; it's terribly funny. If he'd married you he'd have been damed glad to get a silent partner even if she didn't have a cent."—Philadelphia Record.

Comprehensive Advice.

It is probable that seldom has better advice been given than in the following condensed rules: Drink less, breathe more; eat less, chew more; ride less, walk more; clothe less, bathe more; worry less, work more; waste less, give more; write less, read more; talk less, think more; preach less, practice more. To follow these is to strive for better health, further popularity and greater success.

Explaining It.

"Robert," said his mother, "what mischief have you been up to now? I can tell by the look in your eyes that you have been naughty."

"Oh," replied Robert, "that's part of the look left over from the last time I was naughty."—Chicago News.

Love's Victim.

"Where did you get that awful indigestion?"

"My wife tried to win my love through my stomach."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Spear of Sarcasm.

"The whaling industry is dead."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "Throwing the harpoon is now classed as an indoor sport."—Washington Star.

Don't tell your enemy what you think of him; it will worry him lots more to have to guess.—Smart Set.

When the Day Starts.

The beginning of the day is not a question of universal agreement. It has been arbitrarily decided by different peoples from time to time. The ancient Jews fixed the beginning of the day at sunrise, with the Umbrians it began at noon, and the Egyptians and Romans fixed the time at midnight, a custom adopted by the United States and by most of the European countries.

If Caesar Had a Phone.

Julius Caesar missed a great deal in not knowing the telephone or at least in not using it if he knew it. One can see the telephone engineer attached to the Roman postoffice endeavoring, but without avail, to get an instrument installed at the capitol and at the palace. "I am intrusted by the emperor to say that he does not desire these barbarian novelties, and so Thomas Alva Edisonus need not call again with his magician's apparatus." A signal blunder! We can imagine what would have happened. "Hello, 1287 Tiber! Is it thou, Artemidorus? I understand thou rangst me up this morning. What! Details of a plot? Go not to the senate today? Beware of Brutus? Go not near Casca? Right, and I thank thee, Artemidorus. I will have an extra guard put on instantly and the conspirators arrested." And so, although Artemidorus was unable to give his warning in the street, he gave it over the telephone, and Caesar's valuable life and with it the fortune of Rome was saved.—From "If They Had Thought of It" in Strand Magazine.

Funeral Souvenirs.

Weird funeral souvenirs of Dutch origin were called "doed-koecks," or "dead cakes." With a small bottle of wine and a pair of gloves two of these were sent by way of invitation to relatives and friends whom one wanted to attend the funeral. The original recipe for these cakes, which is said to be authentic, called for fourteen pounds of flour, six pounds of sugar, five pounds of butter, one quart of water, two teaspoonfuls of pearl ash, two teaspoonfuls of salt and one ounce of caraway seed. These were baked in four inch squares, then frosted and marked with the initials of the "departed friend." Sometimes they were eaten at the funeral dinner, but usually they were taken away, like wedding cakes, as souvenirs. Many bakers made a specialty of "funeral cookery," one baker in Philadelphia advertising the specialty as recently as 1748.—New York Tribune.

Real Joy of Farm Owning.

I am not a gentleman farmer, with a great estate over which I ride once in awhile and leave all the real work to my underlings. I cannot think there would be great fun in this. No; I like to take hold with my Portuguese man and plant and spray and trim and prune. To be sure, he does more than his share of the rough work, and much of the year I must be cultivating other kinds of fields than those that grow cabbages and turnips, but the fun of farming comes from being a real farmer while you are one, getting close to the soil, becoming intimate with every living thing, whether it be a plant or animal; loving your tomato vines and raspberry bushes, taking a real pride in your eggplants and your brussels sprouts, whether you get a prize for them at the county fair or not.—Rev Dr. Francis E. Clark in Countryside Magazine and Suburban Life.

A Recipe For Ghosts.

It is generally understood that "seeing ghosts" is the result of indigestion. The following notes may be useful to amateurs anxious to investigate psychological phenomena:

Lobster salad eaten after midnight, one ordinary ghost with chains.

Two Welsh rabbits and a mince pie, one mysterious gray lady emitting groans.

Cold roast pork, mixed pickles and strong tea taken immediately before retiring, a genuine family specter carrying his head under his arm.

Cleaning a Watch Chain.

Gold or silver watch chains can be cleaned with a very excellent result, no matter whether they be matt or polished, by laying them for a few seconds in pure aqua ammonia. They should then be rinsed in alcohol and finally shaken in clean sawdust, free from sand. Imitation gold and plated chains should be cleaned in benzine, then rinsed in alcohol and afterward shaken in dry sawdust.—St. Louis Republic.

No Late Hours There.

Guest—What possessed you to move away off here to the extreme edge of the city?

Host—The trolley cars stop running at 10 p. m.

"What of that?"

"Wait till you see my pretty daughters."—New York Weekly.

Their Division.

"I see where a criminal lawyer has taken his daughter into partnership with him. How do they divide the cases?"

"He takes the fellow-nies, and she, the mis-demeanors."—Baltimore American.

Satirical.

Willie Willis—What's a "satirical touch," pa? Papa Willis—It's the fellow who borrows money of you and then kids you about it whenever you meet.—Puck.

An Exception.

Bix—No man ever succeeded in business who kept watching the clock. Dix—Oh, I don't know. There's the train dispatcher.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Skeptical.

Not one man in a thousand who rolls down to the bottom of the hill can make the world believe he did it for exercise.—Atlanta Constitution.

Awful Spats.

Patience—Do you know the Styles?

Patrice—Oh, yes!

"Is it true that they have awful spats?"

"Oh, yes, indeed; she has a pink pair and he has a blue pair!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Sleeps Head Downward.

The butterfly, like the bat, invariably goes to sleep head downwards, its eyes looking straight down the stem of the grass on which it rests. It folds its wings to the utmost, and thus protects its body from the cold.

A Remarkable Prediction.

Manasseh Cutler of Massachusetts, in a circular in 1787 "booming" the settlement which the New Englanders were about to plant on the Ohio at the mouth of the Muskingum, declared that "the current down the Ohio and the Mississippi" for produce and merchandise of all sorts would one day "be more crowded than any other streams on earth," which was a remarkable prediction considering that it was made twenty years before Fulton's Clermont was launched in the Hudson, which was the first steamboat in the world ever put in successful operation.

Best Diarrhoea Remedy

If you have ever used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy you know that it is a success. Sam F. Guin, Whatley, Ala. writes "I had measles and got caught out in the rain, and it settled in my stomach and bowels. I had an awful time, and had it not been for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy I could not possibly have lived but a few hours longer. but thanks to this remedy, I am now well and strong.' BED OF THE THAMES.

It Often Yields to Dredgers Relics of the Ancient Romans.

"Yes, sir," said the skipper of a Thames dredger as he wiped his grimy hands on the legs of his trousers, "there are many worse jobs than dredging. It is interesting and exciting work, too, for one never knows what the bucket scoops are going to pick up.

"Do we make any rich 'captures?' Occasionally we do, but of course we bring up more mud than anything else. But, personally, I believe that the bottom of the Thames is a small gold mine in disguise, but one that it is impossible to 'work.' A 'nugget' is brought up now and again, and a 'nugget' may mean a gold watch or coins.

"Some time back a bucket scoop brought to the surface a small sack, and this sack contained a number of watches, mostly minus the cases. Evidently they had been thrown into the river by thieves, who had no use for them.

"Human bones are brought to light at infrequent intervals, and so are old metal implements. Roman coins are fairly plentiful close by Billingsgate and London bridge, and some of the copper ones which have been recovered are as clean as new coins from the mint. Julius Caesar coins and weapons have been found in the upper river and some stone age implements down by Hampton court."—London Answers.

Best For the Inner Man.

"For Galls, We Want No Other"

"For sore breast and galls this does the business," wrote L. House, of Syracuse, N. Y. "In fact, we want nothing better than Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh."

Mr. House is one of several thousands who have found out for themselves that this liniment is best of all for external ills of man or beast. When applied by a man to domestic animals, it works wonders. When applied to humans by the mother of the household, it heals like magic, whether the ailment be one of the every-day little cuts or bruises, or whether it be a "hard case."

BARGAIN DAY

Tecumseh's third bargain day proved to be a most unpleasant one. The morning was cloudy and about noon a heavy rain kept people from coming to town, and in the evening we were treated to a heavy downpour but a few availed themselves of the bargains offered by our merchants. The sports that were announced were postponed.

It is hoped that Wednesday July 14 will prove more pleasant. The committies are busy preparing for the events of the day which will be published in our next issue together with the bargains offered by ouy merchants.

These bargain days are already very popular and it will pay you to drive miles to Tecumseh to avail yourselves of this wonderfully opportunity.

Luxurious Military Aeroplanes.

The German arrow type of flying machine can compare with nothing, so much as an automobile de luxe, says an English journal. It has the strength, the perfection, the reliability, the safety of a superb motorcar. And it has the luxury. On the dashboard before the pilot, in addition to his control gears, there is a nest of drawers containing, among other things, a vacuum flask, chocolate cubes wrapped against the damp in tin foil, a small bottle of brandy in case the aviator should become faint, a petrol sponge for wiping the goggles, a revolver holder, a dispatch case with sharpened pencils of different colors, so that the dispositions of the enemy's troops can be more adequately marked, a map board and maps. Moreover, the exhaust pipe of the engine passes under the floor boards, so that the pilot, who must constantly keep his feet at an angle on the pedals, may have them warmed throughout the flight. The flier, too, sits in a comfortably upholstered club chair.

First Balloon Ascension In America.

The first balloon ascension in America took place in Philadelphia on Jan. 9, 1793. The aeronaut was a Frenchman named Blanchard. He secured the yard of the Walnut street prison as the place from which to make the ascent. Among the many distinguished persons present was George Washington, then president of the United States. The start was made 10:05 o'clock, and as the balloon began to ascend the aeronaut waved the United States flag and the tricolor of France. The voyage lasted forty-six minutes, during which the balloon traveled fifteen miles, descending a little to the eastward of Cooper's Ferry, N. J. Blanchard returned to the city about 6:30 in the evening, and immediately paid his respects to President Washington. Following this ascension, during the year he made a number of others, but owing to lack of public support and insufficient funds of his own, he returned to France sadly disappointed at his success in America.—Philadelphia Press.

A Knight of the Garter.

A knight of the Garter dressed in the regalia is an imposing sight. He wears a blue velvet mantle with a star embroidered on the left breast. His trunk hose, stockings and shoes are white, his hood and surcoat crimson. The garter, of dark blue velvet edged with gold and bearing the motto "Honi soit qui mal y pense" ("Evil to him who evil thinks"), also in gold, is buckled about the left leg below the knee. The heavy golden collar consists of twenty-six pieces, each in the form of a garter, bearing the motto, and from it hangs the "St. George," a badge which represents St. George on horseback encountering the dragon. The "lesser George" is a smaller badge attached to a blue ribbon worn over the left shoulder. The star of the order consists of eight points, within which is the cross of St. George, encircled by the garter.

Poor Gas.

Some men were riding in the smoker end of a Pullman car recently when one of them referred in a rather uncomplimentary way to the gas supply that was dished up in his home town.

"Yours may be bad enough," reflectively commented a party named Jones, "but I want to say right here that we have the worst gas of any town in the United States."

"That is saying a whole lot," returned the first speaker. "Do you really mean it?"

"You just bet a hundred that I mean it!" was the vigorous rejoinder of Jones. "Every morning when we go to cook breakfast we have to pour kerosene on the gas to start the fire in the gas stove."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A Tongue Twister.

Do you read by sight or sound? Do you skim the sense or pronounce the words as you go? Inaudibly, but consciously? There are many readers who read by the ear, and when this writer had written the sentence about Wick (there was an election there)—"Wick is rich in Pictish relics"—he leaned back and tried to whisper it, thinking of the next. "Wick is rich in Pictish relics." Say it three times quickly.—London Mail.

GOT THE TRAIN STOPPED.

Two Attempts Were Dismal Failures, but the Third Won.

When the late Robert Bonner purchased Maud S. he sent her to Charter Oak park to be trained. One day a friend of Mr. Bonner left New York to visit him at the park, but found that the train did not stop at that station. The conducter was polite, but said that he could not go against orders.

At New Haven a halt was made and Mr. Bonner's friend tried to bribe the engineer with a ten dollar bill, but in vain. He was then told that Charles P. Clark, the president of the road, was on the train, and he went to him and politely requested that the stop be made.

"Why don't you see the conductor?" asked Mr. Clark.

"I have, but he will not disobey orders."

"Why not then go forward and bribe the engineer?"

"I tried bribery at New Haven, but it would not work."

The absence of evasion was the best policy. Mr. Clark not only gave orders to have the train stopped at Charter Oak, but promised some day to see Maud S. He had witnessed the attempt at bribery, and the frank confession of the offense seemed to please him.

His Blasted Life.

John Grimes, a noted skinflint, residing in a rural district, became engaged to a lady of some means who chanced to be visiting in the neighborhood during the summer. Ascertaining his true character as the weeks passed, she told him all was over between them, whereupon Grimes threatened to sue for breach of promise. Rather than incur publicity and notoriety his former sweetheart, through her attorney, offered to settle for $200. "Two hundred!" shrieked Grimes melodramatically. "Two hundred dollars for ruined hopes, a blasted life! Never, never!" "How much do you think would be about right?" asked the attorney. "Make it three hundred and it's a bargain," declared Grimes instantly.—Argonaut.

THE TECUMSEH BUTTER CO.

The Tecumseh Butter Company churned and shipped over 8 tons of butter for week ending Saturday July 3rd, which is an increase of 2 tons over the corresponding week one year ago.

They have over 1000 patrons sending cream to their Creamery, and as a result of the increase in business have purchased a large Republic Truck of L. C. Hayden to haul the cream in from the surrounding country

They receive cream at their Creamery every day in the week, and are paying a premium of 3c over the Elgin quotation for sweet cream, and in a short time will buy cream according to quality, thus giving the farmer who produces a good quality cream, a better price for his product, and the lower grade cream will be paid for accordingly. Every Dairyman should give this quality question their attention, as it means dollars and cents to the producer, as well as the manufacturer.

They also carry a full line of De Laval separators in stock, and will be pleased to demonstrate at any time, that this machine is not the just as good kind, but one of the best on the market. We have sold nearly 300 of these machines to date, which means nearly 300 satisfied separator users.

GOT TO BE AMERICANS

"You can only have one country and but one wife," said the judge;
You can have the U. S. taffy if you'll give up Europe's fudge
If the Stars and Stripes should call you, you're expected to respond.
And you cannot serve your country
when your heart's across the pond;
You can't use that little hyphen in the good old U. S. A.
For we recognize no hyphens when a man comes here to stay;
You're as welcome as June roses to this glorious old land—
But you've got to be Americans—I hope you understand." —Ex.

TO THE LADY OF THE HOUSE

Have you heard of the woman who was always fighting dirt? A caller found her sweeping the front steps looking the picture of despare, when asked the trouble she replied,

"It's cobwebs in the attic, and dust upon the stair,
It's footprints in the kitchen, and it's dust, dust everywhere.
From morn till late at night I wash and scrub and dust,
And still the harder that I work, the more I find I must!"

He tried to comfort her but could not, she went on to say, "If I only had one of those Power Washing Machines sold by Temple, how easy my work would be! I would have the washing on the line by 9, I could use hot scalding water and would not have to boil the clothes, I would not have to do more than ten minutes rubbing and then only on the men's overalls. I would never have to turn the wringer by hand again. Why, I would rather have one of those Power Washers like Temple sells than a Piano."

ARE YOU IN DEBT?

The Debt Habit is one of the greatest dangers of our time—yes, of any time. Is it growing upon you? Once you paid your bills every week—then every month—and now? There is only one way to get out of this debt habit, Take a small portion of your income and deposit it regularly—just as you get it—in a Savings Account at The Lilley State Bank. By this method you will build a sinking fund. It is the only way!

35 YEARS AGO

The First Week in July.

Remember Independence Day.

Our celebration for next Saturday is panning out beautifully.

Lots of Brass Band music and a grand parade in Tecumseh next Saturday.

The Alumni exercises last Friday evening were largely attended and very interesting.

Dr. R. B House has returned from his western trip. He enjoyed his visit hugely, and came back feeling much invigorated, and ready to attend to his professional duties once more.

Gen. J. W. Brown of Toledo was in town last week for a day or two. He attended the Jackson County Pioneer meeting on the 23d.

Sexton Andersons new house on Chicago St. is about completed, and he is now moving in. It is very conveniently arranged and beautifully finished and will make him a pleasant home.

Our Fourth of July will be over this week. Next week there must be some lively railroad work done in this community. Tecumseh is now situated like the boy digging for wood chuck, we've got to have him for we are out of meat.

Up to date Slayton and son have taken in 30,000 lbs of wool and Hanford and Anthony have taken in 75,000 lbs, 40,000 lbs was taken in yesterday by Hanford and Anthony, which is the largest amount of wool ever received by one firm in Tecumseh in a single day and probably the largest in the country. Evans St. near Chicago was blocked with loads of wool nearly all day.

A special Centinary Service was held last Sunday at the Baptist church. The church was elaborately and beautifully trimmed with evergreens and mottoes for the occasions presenting a very handsome appearance. ACCIDENTAL DROWNING

The community was much stirred up Monday afternoon when the word was received that Paul Mull an old man of 83 years, had been found in the mill pond in Brownville.

Mr. Mull who has been living with his son John for some time has been in very poor health and subject to dizzy and fainting spells. John who was mowing the lawn had left his father in the house eating a lunch, after finishing his work he went in and found his father had gone, he looked around for him but did not find him until he discovered his hat in a boat on the Red Mill pond. On investigating he discovered his body under another boat in about 15 feet of water. Life was quite extinct but as a precaution a doctor was called at once but it was to late

In view of the circumstances it was not thought necessary by justice Hosmer to hold an inquest.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon, Rev Geo W. Jennings officiating with burial in Brookside cemetery.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

But very little was done in Tecumseh to celebrate the fourth. A few picnics and social gatherings with fireworks in the evening marked the day.

Many however went to the lakes and other towns where they were celebrating and all report a very pleasant time wherever they were. Flags were flying from many homes through the country showing that the spirit of '76 was still stiring the hearts of the American people.

PROGRESSIVE CELEBRATION

Fourth of July

The Mingay and McLachlin lawns were the scene of a very pleasant gathering on the evening of July 5 about 40 being present. At seven o'clock a bountiful supper was served following this a series of entertainments at different homes were held.

At the McLachlin home a musical program was given.

At the Mingay home recitations were in order

At the Hanford home another musical program was given.

At the Strang home a player piano furnished the music and a Virginia reel on the lawn completed their program.

At the Snyder, Lewis and Murphy homes select readings, recitations and more music were enjoyed

As a grand finale the company returned to the Mingay home and a fine display of fireworks completed a most patriotic evenings entertainment.

There were fifteen families represented in the company.

Early Hand Guns.

When Edward IV. returned to England, in 1471, ten years after he succeeded to the throne, he obtained some forces from his brother-in-law, the Duke of Burgundy, including 300 Flemings armed with hand guns, thus being the first to introduce these weapons into England. Afterward they became common. At first they were fired by the application of a lighted match to the touchhole by the band. The match was a wick lighted and pressed against the powder in the pan. The invention of a lock to fire the powder in place of the hand was suggested by the trigger of the crossbow. The matchlock fired the arquebus, or barquebus, used by the soldiers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, in projecting a ball which weighed nearly two ounces.—London Telegraph.

A Rapid Calculation Trick.

By means of a simple arrangement of numbers a calculation can be made which will easily puzzle any unsuspecting person. If the two numbers 41,096 and 83 be written out in multiplication form very few will endeavor to write down the answer directly without first going through the regular work. By placing the 3 in front of the 4 and the 8 back of the 6 the answer is obtained at once, thus: 41,096x83 equals 3,410,968. A larger number which can be treated in the same way is the following: 4,109,589,041,096x83 equals 341,095,890,410,968.—Popular Mechanics.

Tibetans and Prayers.

The Tibetans are the most pre-eminent praying people on the face of the earth. They have praying stones, praying pyramids, praying flags flying over all the houses, praying wheels and praying mills and the universal prayer, "Om mani pad me haun," is never out of their mouths.—Exchange.

Dragoons.

Four centuries ago, when firearms were in their infancy, soldiers were named from the weapons they bore. Thus infantrymen were called "pike" or "shot," according to their weapons. The "dragon" was a short musket or carbine, and the soldiers who bore them were dragoons. The original dragoons were mounted infantrymen, being organized as infantry. On this account, being without cavalry training, they were decidedly poor horsemen, but they improved until they were classed as medium cavalry.—American Boy.

Gold and Iron.

Iron and gold when melted together may be mixed in various proportions and hardened or crystallized. Alloys containing 10 per cent of gold are harder than pure iron, but as the proportion of gold increases above that amount the alloy becomes softer. Silver and iron do not form alloys.

Michigan Women Prominent.

Wheels and the World.

The history of the evolution of locomotion as well as an infinity of other studies of the keenest interest could all be centered in the wheel.

Without wheels we should have no watches, no steering at sea. We should be unable to utilize the waterfalls as motor force, nor should we have hundreds of other things of the utmost attraction and utility.

All our modern civilization has come to us on wheels. All we know about other countries, all the commerce we have established throughout the world and our means of wealth we owe to the wheel. It is difficult to imagine what the world would come to if suddenly all wheels vanished from our midst. No war, no famine, no revolution, could be one-hundredth part as effectual in putting us back centuries as the lack of wheels.

The romance of wheels has gone, never to return again. Wheels are now looked upon merely as accessories, whirling indifferently, faster and faster, but practically ignored.

He Saw the Battle.

There were no war correspondents in Wellington's time, but that his attitude toward such would have been friendly may be judged by a story told by Lady Doronthy Nevill.

At Waterloo the duke noticed a little man in plain clothes, mounted on a sturdy cob, who rode hither and thither in the thick of the fight. He had him brought to him to demand his business, whereupon the man explained that he was traveling for a Birmingham button maker and, chancing to be in Brussels and never having seen a battle, he was taking the opportunity of seeing this one. Wellington not only allowed him to continue his observations, but presently trusted him with a dispatch for one of his generals in the firing line. The safe delivery of the message was rewarded, in more peaceful times, by a comfortable government appointment. —London Opinion.

Placing the Defendant.

A legal journal says that a suit brought by a portly man against a little man with a hacking cough had gone to the jury, at which time it appeared from the evidence and the instructions of the court that the big man had won the case. After half an hour the jury was called and asked if a verdict had been reached.

"No, your honor," replied the foreman. "We only want to know which is the defendant and which is the plaintiff."

"The large man sitting over there is the plaintiff, and the small gentleman here is the defendant," replied the judge.

The jury filed back to the jury room. In a few minutes they signaled that they had reached a verdict. The judge received it and read:

"We, the jury, find for the man with the consumption."

Built Over Caverns.

The ground under the city of San Salvador is full of caverns of unknown depths. A man was once digging a well there. At the last stroke he gave with his pick the bottom fell out, and he and his pick fell through, nobody knows where. At least so "they say."

No Time to Waste.

"Pa, if Mrs. Brown should come over and tell you that I had given her little boy a black eye, what would you say?"

"I really don't know, young man."

"Well, you'd better make up your mind quick; she's at the door now."—Detroit Free Press.

Trenches In War.

The late British general Sir William Butler in the course of an article that appeared in a military magazine nearly forty years ago thus spoke his mind about the use of trenches in time of war: "The spade may be nearly as dangerous to the army that uses it as to the one that neglects it. Like everything else, it is good in its way. That way is given a long way, but its end can be reached. If the infantry soldier gets thoroughly convinced that in the sheltered trench lie his hopes of safety he will doubtless be a hard man to drive out of these trenches. But it may also be a difficult matter to drive him on from them to the front. Digging may save a battle from being lost, but it has never won a decisive victory, and it probably never will."—Manchester Guardian.

Spoiled the Scoop.

The newspaper special, although always the cutest of the cute, is sometimes "scored off" by a colleague. For instance Sir W. H. Russell represented the London Times at O'Connell's trial in Dublin.

In those days the telegraph was unknown, and as his paper wanted to go one better than the Morning Herald, its great rival, Russell hurried back to London by special boat and train immediately the verdict was pronounced. As he got out of the cab in Printing House square a man in shirt sleeves, apparently a printer from the Times, came up and exclaimed: "So glad to see you safe over, sir. So they have found him guilty?" "Yes, guilty, my friend," replied Russell.

The Morning Herald came out with the news of the bare fact as well as the Times. The shirtsleeved man was a smart representative of the rival paper.—London Tatler.

A Blunt Excuse.

There is a stroy of an English clergyman who had taken temporary duty for a friend and who had the ill luck to injure his false teeth during the week. The plate was sent to the dentist for repairs, a faithful assurance being given that it should be returned by Sunday's post, but the dentist or the post proved faithless.

With the assistance of the clerk the clergyman managed to stumble through the prayers, but felt it would be useless to attempt to preach. He therefore instructed the clerk to make some excuse for him and dismiss the congregation. But his feelings may be better imagined than described when, in the seclusion of the vestry, he overheard the clerk in impressive tones thus deliver the excuse:

"Parson is very sorry, but it is his misfortune to be obliged to wear a set of artful teeth. They busted last Wednesday, and he ain't got them back from London today, as he was promised. I've helped him all I could through the service, but I can't do more for him. 'Tisn't any use for him going up in the pulpit, for you wouldn't understand a word he said, so he thinks you all may as well go home."

Wagging the Ears.

You will rarely find that a man who can wag his ears suffers from deafness. The reason for this is very simple. Wagging one's ears exercises them just as much as walking exercises the muscles of the legs. A great deal of deafness is caused by the muscles of the ears becoming stiff and refusing to respond quickly to the sound waves. Quite a large proportion of children can move their ears, just as they can move the skin on their forehead up and down, but as they grow up they lose their power through want of practice. It is a mistake to let a child lose this power, for it may mean the difference between good and bad hearing in after years. Dr. M. Fernet, the famous Paris doctor, has even gone so far as to suggest that people should be trained to wag their ears, just as they are trained to exercise any other muscles of the body.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Defining a Gentleman.

The true gentleman is the man whose conduct proceeds from good will and an acute sense of propriety and whose self control is equal to all emergencies; who does not make the poor man conscious of his poverty, the obscure man of his obscurity or any man of his inferiority or deformity; who is himself humbled if necessity compels him to humble another; who does not flatter wealth, cringe before power or boast of his own possessions or achievements; who speaks with frankness, but always with sincerity and sympathy, and whose deed follows his word; who thinks of the rights and feelings of others rather than of his own; who appears well in any company and who is at home what he seems to be abroad—a man with whom honor is sacred and virtue safe.—Dr. Wayland.

Notes Not Elaborate.

The bishop of St. Albans wrote that on a certain occasion he heard Bishop Wilberforce describe with such singular eloquence and power the effect on the soul of the clearing away of intellectual doubts that he begged to be shown the manuscript from which his friend had been preaching, as he wished to copy certain portions of the sermon.

Wilberforce handed him the document, turned to the page which contained the passage spoken of by the bishop and showed him a sheet of paper inscribed with the single word—fog.

The Gatling Gun.

Richard Jordan Gatling, the inventor of the gun bearing his name, was a native of Hertford county, N. C., where he was born in 1818. The Gatling gun was not used to any extent during the war between the states, a dozen or so being employed by Butler on the James river. The invention was not made fairly practical until 1865, when the gun was adopted into the United States service.

Antiquity of the Giant Sequoias.

Compared with the giant sequoias every other living thing in the world is a creature of today, and there are only a few evidences of man's handiwork still in existence—some of the ruins of ancient Greece and Assyria—that were constructed at an earlier date.

How Warships Communicate.

Every battleship at sea has its wireless installation adjusted so that it can send and receive signals and messages to other squadrons at sea or in harbor and to stations ashore. For the purpose of obtaining information as to the whereabout of the enemy and guarding against surprises wireless telegraphy is, of course, invaluable, says the Wireless World. A great number of cruisers are sent out ahead and spread a number of miles across. The duty of these ships is to keep a thorough lookout and report to the ship in the battle fleet looking out on their particular wave length. This ship in turn reports by semaphore or Morse lamp to the admiral of the battle fleet. The cruisers are sometimes assisted by torpedo boat destroyers. Now, if thirty of these ships are used it will be readily seen that the area of their vision is enormous, and it would be almost impossible for a fleet to pass unobserved. Immediately any of the ships sight the enemy's squadron they would report at once by wireless, stating the number of ships sighted, with their speed, latitude and longitude, etc. The admiral would then give his orders, also by wireless.—Pearson's Weekly.

HIS SUMMER OUTING

How He Saved a Girl From Drowning.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

On Lake Winnepoge in New England is a camp where in summer several hundred girls of all ages from twelve to twenty are congregated. They are housed in bungalows and eat on a long, broad portico, an extension of the central building, and dance in a hall built expressly for that purpose and for sundry exhibitions. There are riding masters and swimming masters—which of course involves horses and paraphernalia for both—and canoes ad libitum. A number of tennis courts complete the equipment for summer exercises.

Camp Wocomoc is located on one end of the lake, which is several miles long and from a half to a mile wide. A newcomer is not allowed to go out in a canoe until she can swim continuously a certain distance and keep afloat for fifteen minutes. Having passed this test, she may thereafter go canoeing at her pleasure. She is not hampered with skirts, for every girl must wear the camp uniform—a blouse, bloomer knickerbockers and stockings to the knees. This dress is also worn by the ladies in charge, and when they are short and fleshy it gives them an appearance of a waddling fat hen. As to the young ladies in camp costume, they all look about the same age—that is, anywhere between twelve and fifteen.

Nicholas Brewerton, a young lawyer of promise, having worked very hard during the winter till late into the spring, inquired of friends in New England for a place to spend a few weeks where he could be quiet. There must be no hotels, no casinos, nobody, in fact, except himself. The best that could be done for him was Lake Winnepoge. The person who recommended it—a Miss Webster—forgot to say anything about the girls' camp. It may be that she left it out of her description of the location intentionally, thinking that the sight of young girls paddling about in picturesque costumes would be a pleasant sight for the young man. She may have had a sinister intention. Be this as it may, the young man was recommended to go to Lake Winnepoge, but to the other end from the girls' camp.

Brewerton went to Lake Winnepoge and found at the end where he had been advised to settle several cottages, one of which was to rent. After learning that the occupants of the others were couples with small children who desired quietude he took the vacant cottage, getting his meals at a farm house near by. There was a rowboat in an outhouse which was rented with the house. Being settled, Brewerton prepared to live an uneventful life and rest.

But "man proposes, God disposes."

One morning—the next after his arrival—Brewerton got out his rowboat and started out to row lazily on the lake. It was a beautiful summer morning, and the hills on one side were reflected in the water. Light clouds floated above as indolently as Brewerton floated on the lake. He was much pleased that his was the only boat within sight. Truly this was just what he had come for. He thanked in his heart the lady who had recommended it.

Hark!

Brewerton had pulled up near the shore where there were overhanging trees. From under the branches came an exclamation of dissatisfaction. The voice was feminine and seemed to be that of a child. From a disturbance of the branches he inferred that some one in a boat had become entangled in them. A few strokes brought him to where he could see what was going on.

First, there was a canoe with the word "Wocomoc" painted on the bow; second, there was a girl in the boat, who might have been twelve, thirteen and perhaps fourteen, dressed in a costume Brewerton had never seen before. The navy blue material of her apparel from her waist to her knees might have been a skirt or something else, he could not tell what. Judging from its length, she should be about six years old, but Brewerton was sure she was not as young as that.

"Can I do anything for you, little girl?" he asked.

"I'm not quite as familiar with canoeing as I should be. I came under the shade of these branches, and in getting out I am afraid I shall upset the canoe."

Brewerton reached forth his hand, took hold of an end of the unsteady shell and withdrew it from under the branches.

"Can you manage it now?" he asked.

The girl put her paddle in the water, and the canoe careened on one side. She gave a little shriek

"Your mother should not have let you come out in such a topply boat without your being accustomed to such sport. Look out! You'll go over."

"Oh, dear, I'm afraid I'll be drowned!"

Brewerton was perplexed. He did not like to leave the child in her perilous position and did not know what to do with her. Finally he told her that if she would get into his boat he would take her home with her canoe in tow. She gladly accepted the invitation, taking a seat in the stern facing him and holding a line attached to her canoe.

"Where do you live?" asked Brewerton.

The girl looked in several directions, then pointed to a house on the opposite side of the lake. But half the distance had not been traversed when she pointed to a house in another direction. Brewerton looked at her in surprise, and she said she had "got turned around." But she soon confessed herself mistaken again and said she thought she would go to the camp.

"What camp?"

"Camp Wocomoc."

Then for the first time Brewerton learned that around a bend in the lake there was a girls' camp.

"For kids?" he asked.

"Most of us are kids, but there are some older girls."

For a kid she was quite entertaining. Brewerton was amused to hear her at times talk like a grown person. She had a sweet smile, a pair of dimples in her cheeks and pretty eyes. Brewerton was inclined to think that when she became a woman she would be quite an attractive one.

Presently they turned the bend, and the oarsman, turning, caught sight of the camp. He was much astonished. There on the margin of the lake was a congregation of boats about a large float for swimming purposes, equipped with diving apparatus. Brewerton pulled up to a landing where stood a number of girls, all in camp costume. His passenger got out of his boat, thanked him and, having tethered her canoe, went up to the camp.

Brewerton pulled back to his cottage, not knowing whether to be dissatisfied or not with his discovery. He rather thought that he would like to have the little girl go boating with him occasionally. Her prattle rested him. Indeed, during the next few days he found himself wishing he would meet her again on the lake. If he should he would inquire her name and address and ask her mother if she would not let her little girl go out with him.

One afternoon Brewerton got into his boat for a pull to explore the lake from end to end. He pulled up past Camp Wocomoc till he could go no farther by water, then turned and pulled back. Noticing that the swimming float was covered with girls, while others were splashing in the water, he concluded to go to it and watch the aquatic performances. At a point about a hundred feet from the float he paused. Some of the girls were diving from a springboard. One girl climbed a ladder and stood on a platform about twenty feet above the lake. Presently she gave a jump and plunged head foremost. The water closed over her and she did not appear again for half a minute, and when she did she popped up within a few yards of Brewerton's boat and facing him.

Great heavens! She was the kid he had rescued from under the branches of a tree and had taken into his boat to save from drowning!

The water was cool, but not cool enough to keep the blood from rushing in a torrent to her cheeks. Though out of breath, she ducked and came up with her face the other way and swimming lustily for the float.

Brewerton's eyes were opened to the fact that he had been fooled. Indeed, he had been fooled in more than one respect. He had by this time seen a number of the girls of the camp and had learned that he could not judge of their age when in camp costume. But why should this girl have deceived him, feigning to be afraid of the water? Quite likely she was one of the most expert canoers on the lake. Doubtless she was one of the denizens of the camp. All this was unintelligible to Brewerton, and, being unintelligible, it occupied his mind during the rest of his sojourn at Lake Winnepoge.

One day in September, after the fall begira back to the city, Brewerton received a message from his friend Mrs Webster, asking if it would be convenient for him to dine with her the next evening. She was anxious to hear how he liked Lake Winnepoge. He replied that it would be convenient, and he was desirous of learning why she had not told him that there was a girls' camp on the lake.

Brewerton had been admitted to his hostess' house and was telling her about how he liked the lake when the doorbell rang and another guest was admitted. Mrs. Webster left him to receive the newcomer and presently returned with a stately young woman in dinner dress. Brewerton's eyes were fixed on her for a few moments before he recognized in her altered costume the girl he had saved from drowning.

There was on the young lady's face an expression of mingling emotions. There was some blushing, some shrinking, some sign of a guilty conscience, the whole topped with a dash of amusement. On Mrs. Webster's face it was all amusement. On Brewerton's face—Brewerton's face was indescribable.

"This is my friend Nick Brewerton," said the hostess, "and this is also my friend Miss Eleanor Tibbits. I believe you two have met before. Be seated."

It was not till long after this, when Brewerton had become the husband of Miss Tibbits, that he learned what a nefarious conspiracy had been concocted against him. Miss Tibbits had been with Mrs. Webster when he asked to be recommended to a restful summer spot where there were no women. Miss Tibbits—she was twenty years of age — thought it would be a good scheme to impose herself on the gentleman in camp costume as a little girl. She had engaged to go to Camp Wocomoc and when Brewerton arrived was posted as to the fact. She had "laid" for him and caught him the first day after his arrival. Her husband, referring to her popping up before him after having taken a twenty foot dive, declared that it was more surprising than if he had seen a veritable mermaid with a fish's tail.

Queerest Dolls In the World.

The dollies played with by little Mohammedan children are sadly unique. They are not allowed any features and are, in fact, little more than mere bundles of rags rolled up. Mrs. Penny in "Southern India" recalls the reason for this deficiency. The Moslems believe that any human figure that is made by man will receive life at the last day and will reproach its maker for having brought it into existence without having the power to endow it with human and spiritual privileges. One feels that the prophet might have compromised a little when it came to dolls, especially in view of what was later to happen.

When British rupees were first circulated in India the figure of the sovereign in relief was regarded with distrust. Fortunately for the peace of the merchant the eye was so small as to be almost invisible. Through this loophole the followers of the prophet found a way of escape from the difficulty, deciding that no harm would come in the use of the money.

A Stonehenge Legend.

Friar's Heel is the name given to a large stone at Stonehenge, England. An interesting tale surrounds the placing of this stone in its present upright position. It is related that Geoffrey of Monmouth said that the devil bought some stones of an old woman in Ireland, wrapped them up in withies and took them to Salisbury plain. Before he got to Mount Ambre the withies broke and one of the stones fell into the Avon; the rest were carried to the plain. After the fiend had fixed them in the ground he cried out, "No man will ever find out how these stones came here." A friar replied, "That's more than thee can tell," whereupon the fiend threw one of the stones at him and struck him on the heel. The stone stuck in the ground and is said to remain there to the present hour.

The White Flag.

It is a great temptation to commanders in wartime to use the white flag as a trick to obtain breathing space when hard pressed by the enemy, and this is often done, although it is against the laws of war.

The old purpose of the white flag is to notify the enemy that their opponents wish to parley, and a commander has a perfect right to refuse such a request if he deems it necessary. Even if he consents he can request that the bearer of the flag of truce be blindfolded so that he may not secure information concerning the camp which he enters. In no circumstances must the white flag be shown to trick an opposing side into relaxing their attack, so that a retreat may be prepared or re-enforcements brought up for a fresh attack. In this connection a common ruse is for a harassed commander to request his enemy for an armistice apparently for the purpose of burying his dead. He then takes advantage of the truce by retreating with his troops under the cover of darkness.—London Tit-Bits.

Floating Docks.

A floating dock may be likened to a box with neither ends nor lid. It is built of steel throughout, the largest type having a length of 680 feet and a width of 144 feet, while the walls are 66 feet in height. The dock is first submerged by admitting water into the ballast tanks or pontoons forming the base of the structure. When it has been sunk to a sufficient depth to receive the vessel the latter is warped into its correct position on the keel blocks of the dock and is then made fast. Powerful pumps are set to work to eject water from the pontoons, causing the structure to rise gradually with its burden. To lift a battleship of the largest size 46,000 tons of water has to be pumped out of the pontoons. So perfectly, however, are these floating docks constructed that one man can control every movement from what is known as the valve house.—London Tit-Bits.

Fixing Up an Election.

A curious incident once occurred at Patton at an election for parliament. Sir Mark Wood, who had been one of its members for several years, had as his colleague in the parliament of 1812 Sir William Congreve, the inventor of the famous "Congreve rocket." The latter resigned in 1816, and the baronet wished his own son to fill the vacancy. There were only three voters in the constituency—Sir Mark, his son and his butler, named Jennings—but as the son was away and the butler had quarreled with his master an opportunity was afforded for a singular revenge. Jennings refused to second Sir Mark's nomination of his son and proposed himself, and a deadlock was averted only by Sir Mark coming to terms with the refractory butler, whose nomination he seconded in order to induce him to act as a seconder to his son. Matters being thus put formally in train, Sir Mark arranged with Jennings that the former's vote should be alone given, and the final state of the poll at Patton's only known contest stood thus: Wood (Tory), 1; Jennings (Whig), 0.—Westminster Gazette.

Presence of Mind.

"What did you learn at the school?" the boss asked the fair young applicant for the stenographer's job.

"I learned," she replied, "that spelling is essential to a stenographer."

The boss chuckled.

"Good. Now let me hear you spell essential."

The fair girl hesitated for the fraction of a second.

"There are three ways," she replied. "Which do you prefer?"

And she got the job.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WIFE NO. 2 NOT REAL ONE SAYS WIFE NO. 1

Of Course, Charge Bobs up as Estate Is Being Settled.

Lafayette, Ind., July 10.—Fate has turned the page of a hitherto unknown chapter in the life of Dr. Isaac E. Wells, of Chalmers, and the people of White county are surprised at the revelation. Dr. Wells died recently at Chalmers, after a residence there of several years, with a second wife.

Now comes Ella M. Wells of Eagletown, Hamilton county, who says the second wife, was not legally a wife, and asserts her husband was a bigamist. She has engaged lawyers to bring suit in the White Circuit court at Monticello, in an effort to gain possession of the Wells estate, which is valuable. Wife No. 2 declares her husband was legally divorced from his former wife.

A fourteen year old daughter is living with the widow at Chalmers and will be made a party to the suit. Dr. Wells was one of the leading physicians of Chalmers and was an active church member.

POSTOFFICE $7,000 SHORT AT JACKSON

John R. Murdy, for 12 Years Clerk, Is Suspended.

Jackson, Mich., JJuly 10.—John R. Murdy, for twelve years a clerk in the local postoffice, has been suspended and an inspector from the postoffice department is making an investigation into a shortage in the Jackson postoffice estimated at $7,000.

The investigation into the disappearance of funds has been going on for several days. Murdy was examined by Inspector Mackey of Lansing. Following the "sweating" Murdy was suspended while a further investigation was made.

For some time it has been known that the mails were being tampered with here. Last Sunday Murdy worked alone in the office and Tuesday morning a search was made of his locker by an inspector. A number of letters, which had been opened, are said to have been found in a pocket of a coat worn by Murdy.

Murdy declared himself innocent and asserted that the letters had been placed in his coat by some other person.

MINNEHAHA IN PORT, FIRES STILL BURNING

Captain Says He Has No Evidende of Bomb Plot.

Halifax, N. S., July 10.—The steamer Minnehaha of the Atlantic Transport line arrived in the harbor with a fire still burning in her cargo, the flames having spread from No. 3 hold into No. 4. The ship is hot from stem to stern and the damage is believed to be extensive.

Captain Claret reported that at 4:14 o'clock on the afternoon of July 7 there was a heavy explosion on board and a violent shock, which caused the ship to tremble. The fire followed.

Nothing has transpired since the steamer's arrival to show whether the fire that broke out in her No. 3 hold on Wednesday afternoon was the result of accident or design.

Captain Claret says he does not know and has no evidence on the subject. All he does know is that four hours after the wireless warning was received an explosion occurred and that smoke began to come from No. 3 hold, the part of the ship devoted to a general cargo. The hatches were tightened down and steam turned on. This was kept at continuous pressure till midnight on Thursday when lessened heat and diminishing smoke showed that he had got the better of the fire.

LISTEN!

This story is short and a little out of the ordinary, so PLEASE read it all—it's about FIXTURES.

Clothes wear out; so do hats and gloves and other things. Fixtures don't; they get dingy and tarnished and old fashioned, but they don't wear out.

Hence a good many people seem to think the same old fixtures they grew up with must stay there indefinitely, waiting for a fire or an earthquake.

It is'nt so. You owe it to yourself and to your family to realize that entirely aside from artistic considerations, the present methods of lighting are RADICALLY DIFFERENT from those of a few years ago, in their influence on comfort and eyesight—and it will PAY YOU TO KNOW whether you are getting adequate and PROPERLY DISTRIBUTED light or not.

When the family physician advises a change in diet, he knows what he's talking about—it's for your good. If we advise a change in type or location of fixtures it's because we know what WE'RE talking about—its our business.

Just drop in at our office any time, step into our fixture room, designed especially to show you modern electric light fixtures.

YOU CAN'T BE SORRY AND YOU MAY BE GLAD.

Very truly yours,
The Tecumseh Electric Co,

AUSTRIANS FALL INTO RUSS TRAP

Archduke Joseph Ferdinand Is Defeated; Loses 15,000.

UPSET BY OVERCONFIDENCE

Grand Duke Nicholas Assumes Offensive in South Poland Front for First Time Since April—Franz Josef's Men Failed to Wait for German Forces to Catch Up.

London, July 10.—Austria and Germany combined, aided by their great field guns, may be able to force a way to Lublin and towards Warsaw, but Austria cannot do it alone. Some military observers here inclined to the belief that both of them together cannot go any farther away from their bases of supply and transportation.

The dispatches indicate that the Archduke Joseph Ferdinand of Austria in his haste to press into Lublin before he had effected a junction with the German forces under Field Marshal Von Mackensen has fallen into a trap, lost at least 15,000 men, received a severe check, delayed all advance for days and gave the Grand Duke Nicholas an opportunity to assume the offensive in the South Poland front for the first time in two months.

There is no doubt that the Russians have soundly thrashed the Austrians on even terms in that portion of Russian Poland between the Vistula and the Bug rivers, in a district just north of Krasnik. So effectively has this been done that, in the opinion of some experts, it is a question whether Von Mackensen will be able to effect the junction which was to widen the Teuton front and make ready for the Warsaw or Brest-Litovsk drive.

Overconfidence Is Disastrous.

As nearly as can be learned from Petrograd dispatches the Austrians, overconfident from their joint victories, could not remain at Krasnik to wait for the Germans with their heavy guns which have done the work of this campaign, but struck north immediately towards Lublin, believing that Russian morale was gone and that it was only necessary to advance in order to conquer. He lost entire touch with the Germans who were carefully occupying and consolidating positions. The Austrian flank was thus exposed.

The Russian forces were turned and concealed in a dense wood along side of which the Austrians were advancing. Whether their advance guards were negligent or their flankers asleep or their airmen resting is not known, but the Austrian forces passed by this wood, after which, with their flank thus turned, they were in a serious predicament when the Russians assumed the offensive. The Austrian left wing was crumpled up and fell back on the main body; the entire force effected a speedy withdrawal toward Krasnik and now they find themselves heavily attacked.

Russ Renew Offensive.

This success has been followed by a renewal of the Russian offensive on every front. In North Poland, in the region of Suwalki, they are fighting back and even down on the Zlota Lipa, south of Lemberg, where the army of General Von Linsingen was thought to have everything its own way they are attacking.

MORE ABOUT

THE BUSINESS HOUSES ON THE STREET

E. J. LOWRY

James Lowry, father of the subject of our sketch, opened the grocery ever since run by the Lowrys some 37 years ago, so it was through his whole life that Ed has been around the store. Becoming accustomed to the business Ed went into the firm when but a young fellow and until April 1, 1913 the firm was known as Lowry & Sons On that date Ed bought out his father and has conducted it alone and he has done famously.

He specializes in the Tecumseh Chief teas and coffees and does a very large business on these two items Sunshine Biscuits are always given a prominent place in the store and you will always find a complete line of fresh cake and cookies on hand In fact he has a complete line of everything to be found in a first class grocery store.

His store has always been recognized as the cleanest and most orderly store in town and all goods are handled in a sanitary manner If you don't think Ed is doing well, just try to get through the crowd in front of his store any Saturday night when his country patrons are in town.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

Another "Make yourself at home" store is The People's store and certainly the management named it appropriately For at this store the country people find a hearty welcome from our Palman and his pleasant assistant Miss Tansley. The mothers and babies find easy chairs by the fire while waiting for the dads as happens so frequently and an air of hospitality is ever present.

Wm. Palman, the manager, has won hosts of friends since coming to Tecumseh seven years ago, and heartily welcomes them all to inspect his line of groceries furnishing goods and shoes. He occupies both stores in the Mills block, the east one for the groceries and furnishing goods and in the west store he has an excellent line of shoes.

He is placing on the market Bours coffees and Shepards canned goods, both splendid brands.

GEORGE COSCARELLI

Only a year ago George Coscarelli came here from Mason and opened a fruit store in the Service block He has worked up a fine trade and now has another store at Clinton of which a cousin has charge. He still owns a fruit store in Mason so with the three he is pretty busy. He is shipping in bananas and melons in carload lots and found business so heavy that this spring he added an auto truck to his equipment. He is supplying much of the fruit trade of the village and wholesaling much of his stock to the groceries.

He has a neat store, the shelves lined with a stock of soft drinks, confectionery and tobaccos and the son Santo with his fun and bright repartee has won the hearts of the youngsters of the village and the respect of his elders by the efficient manner he carried on the business last winter while his father was in Italy.

TECUMSEH STEAM LAUNDRY

If the women of this vicinity would enjoy an educational trip and in the end be sickened of their lot of hard work it would pay them to go over Lester Roger's laundry. Many people say to them "How do you ever rub all those clothes? My! but your backs must ache!" Since buying this plant of Walter Eberly in June, 1911. Mr. Rogers has added machine after machine to his equipment and becoming pretty crowded this spring has built on to the rear a brick boiler and wash room 30x16ft, extending the building clear back to the alley.

NEW WRINGER AT THE LAUNDRY

Then came a dry room 6ft. 9in.x8ft. 4in. and 9ft. high with a capacity of 75 doz shirts per day, so he surely can care for all the shirts likely to be soiled in this end of the state. An ironer is also a new acquistion and it is some ironer. It is 100 inches long and will put out 10,000 pieces in ten hours. Some better than our board across two chairs and those long hours of back breaking labor. Then John's shirts looks like fury when you try to iron it and throw it down in disgust. Mr. Rogers would put it on his shirt and collar machine and the result is a pleasure to the eye.

The work is all done by steam power and three women are kept busy with the electric hand irons, etc.

Lester is a genial fellow and will be most delighted to escort you over his plant so you can appreciate those wonderful machines.

KITCHENER HINTS AT CONSCRIPTION

War Secretary Stirs Enthusiasm on Return from Front.

ASKS MEN, MONEY, MATERIAL

Head of British Military Forces Declares Situation Has Improved, but Work Ahead is None the Less Serious—Let Women Do Work in Factories, He Urges.

London, July 10.—Intimating his belief that England is facing a situation of great peril and a long war, and indicating that the government is ready to resort to conscription to fill the gaps in the army at the front, Lord Kitchener profoundly stirred an immense audience at Guild Hall by an address appealing to the patriotism of the nation for more men.

The war secretary, who arrived only this morning from the front, where he spent three days, paraphrased Napoleon's statement that to win a war meant "money, money, money," and declared it took "money, men and materials."

He declared it necessary for the women of England to do the men's work in the factories and for the men to enlist.

"We require more men and still more men," Lord Kitchener said, "but the situation in this respect is immeasurably better now than it was ten months ago. The military position today, however, is as serious as it was then."

Tribute to Colonials.

Lord Kitchener paid a tribute to the bravery of the Indian forces and the Canadians and continued:

"In the Dardanelles the Australians and New Zealanders already have accomplished a feat of arms almost unampled in brilliancy and are pushing the campaign to a successful conclusion. In each of these great dominions new and large contingents are being prepared, while South Africa, not content with the successful conclusion of an arduous campaign in Southwest Africa, is now offering large forces to engage the enemy in the main theater of the war.

"Strengthened by the unflinching support of their fellow citizens across the seas we are seeking to develop our own military forces to their utmost limits."

Speaking of the three great needs for a satisfactory prosecution of the war—money, materials and men—Lord Kitchener said that the new loan was supplying money with further marked success and that the ministry of munitions was handling its work in a highly satisfactory manner.

Had Warned of Long War.

He continued:

"There still remains a vital need for men to fill the ranks of our armies. When I took up the office I hold I did so as a soldier and not as a politician and I warned my fellow countrymen that the war would be not only arduous but long. I said that I should require 'more men and still more until the enemy is crushed.' I repeat that statement with even greater insistence. All the reasons which led me to think, in August, 1914, that this war would be a prolonged one hold good at the present time. It is true that we are in an immeasurably better situation now than we were ten months ago, but our position today is at least as serious as it was then.

"Germany's long preparation enabled her to utilize her whole resources from the very commencement of the war, while our policy is one of gradually increasing our effective forces. It might be said with truth that she must decrease, while we must increase."

FOUR LIVES LOST IN STORM

Demolition of Homes Wipes Out Nearly Whole Family.

Washington, Ind., July 10.—The storm which swept over this section of Indiana, not only brought a property loss estimated at from $75,000 to $100,000, but death trailed in its wake.

The dead: Joel Lyon, farmer, killed when home was demolished; twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Moore, crushed when home was destroyed; Howard Ward, farmer, drowned in gorged stream. Probably fatally injured: Mrs. James Moore; It has become known that four lives were snuffed out and three persons injured so severely that their recovery is doubtful.

MALICE, CHARGES PREACHER

Minister Declares Girl's Criminal Charge Is False.

Princeton, Ind., July 10.—The Rev. J. A. Persinger, pastor of the Christian church at Owensville, Gibson county, pleaded not guilty to a criminal charge in Justice James A. Sprawl's court. He was placed under $500 bond for his appearance at the trial July 16. The plaintiff is Miss Dale Gardner, eighteen years old, daughter of Mrs. Jeanette Gardner, and who was secretary of the Sunday school.

The Rev. Mr. Persinger is a married man and has been pastor of the Owensville church for about three years. He alleges it is a scheme to injure him.

Belle's Suits in Discord.

Sullivan, Ind., July 10.—The suit of Belle Hinkle against several insurance companies, being tried in Knox county, has been dismissed. Mrs. Hinkle was sentenced to the Woman's prison on a charge of arson after a hotel which she operated at Sullivan burned.

LEE VS LEE

Not a little interest has been shown by Tecumseh people in the petition for divorce brought by Harry S Lee against his wife Agnes Lee

The case was in the court at Adrian last week and quite a number of our citizens were subpoenied on both sides. Saturday Judge Hart dismissed the bill of complaint made by Harry S. Lee and denied the divorce and costs made in connection with the case. This case was before Judge Hart for three days and a half and was hotly contested. Lee was subjected to a grilling on the witness stand for a day and a half.

Judge Hart passed on the case as soon as the attorneys had closed their arguments stating that from the evidence given and the status bearing on the case it was not necessary to take extra time to consider the case and rendered his decision at once.

Geo. A. Rathbun of Tecumseh was attorney for Mrs. Lee and was assisted by Col. John E. Kirk of Ypsilanti Clark Baldwin was attorney for Harry Lee.

Isaac Sloan and Wm Gaston were in Adrian Thursday for the Lee trial

THOUGHT HE HAD CHRONIC DYSPEPSIA

But Now Eats Corned Beef, Cabbage, Pork, Onions and Mince Pie For Dinner and Never Feels a Pain.

Do you belong to the "No thank you" society of the dinner table where the mere sight of certain foods makes you feel that pain you know would be yours if you ever ate them?

What a weak, easily upset stomach really needs is not a digestive aid but stomach strengthener. Any reliable physician will tell you it's dangerous to continually dose the pepsin digestors and the like. His own prescription will act on the stomach instead No physician ever wrote a better stomach prescription than that embodied in the famous MI-O-NA Stomach Tablets that C. A. Wright & Son and most every other druggist in this vicinity sells with the positive guarantee that they must put a complete and lasting end to stomach misery or money back. Mi-o-na strengthens the walls and muscular fibres of the stomach and induces prompt normal working of your own stomach machinery. It gives relief in ten minutes to all the common and uncomfortable symptoms of sour rising, gas, belching, burning, bloating, shooting pains, etc., and in a few weeks, will put the stomach in such a clear and perfectly healthy condition that it can digest a typical New England boiled dinner without the slightest effort or distres. adv is the greatest rectifier for the blood and skin yet known. Greasy skin with pimples, blotches, eruptions or scrofula easily cleared away. Its use leaves the blood and skin as pure as the lillies. SAN-JAK for the stomach, nerves and blood is the best the world ever saw. SAN-JAK prevents the excessive flow of poison of fluid into the blood from the super renal glands near the kidneys, causing the arteries to harden in the years past 50. This preventative keeps the arteries soft and flexible, giving flexibility to the muscles as in youth.

You can feel well and active at any age from 60 to 90 years. Man should die from old age, not from diseased tissue. Mothers and daughters can avoid many dangerous operations by the use of this wonderful medicine. The use of SAN-JAK for pain in the back and abdomen greatly lessens the danger of appendicitis. $1.00 per bottle. Get SAN-JAK at

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1916, by Hamlin Garland

This action of stabling the horses, a perfectly innocent and natural one for her, led one of the hands, a coarse minded sneak, to watch them from a corral. "I wonder how Cliff would like that?" he evilly remarked.

Berea was frankly pleased to see Wayland and spoke of the improvement which had taken place in him. "You're looking fine," she said as they were returning to the house. "But how do you get on with the boys?"

"Not very well," he admitted. "They seem to have it in for me. It's a constant fight."

Her face grew grave. "I reckon you got started wrong," she said at last. "They'll like you better when you get browned up and your clothes get dirty. You're a little too fancy for them just now."

"I don't believe I want any more of their company. What's the use? As you say, I've started wrong with them, and I don't see any prospect of getting right; and, besides, I like the rangers better. Landon thinks I might work into the service. I wonder if I could? It would give me something to do."

She considered a moment. "We'll think about that. Come into the kitchen. I'm cook today. Mother's gone to town."

The kitchen was clean and ample, and the delicious odor of new made bread filled it with cheer. As the girl resumed her apron Wayland settled into a chair with a sigh of content. "I like this," he said aloud. "There's nothing cowgirl about you now; you're the Anglo-Saxon housewife. You might be a Michigan or Connecticut girl at this moment."

Her cheeks were ruddy with the heat and her eyes intent on her work, but she caught enough of his meaning to be pleased with it. "Oh, I have to take a hand at the pots and pans now and then. I can't give all my time to the service, but I'd like to."

He boldly announced his errand. "I wish you'd take me to board. I'm sure your cooking would build up my shattered system a good deal quicker than your aunt's."

She laughed, but shook her head. "You ought to be on the hills riding hard every day. What you need is the high country and the air of the pines."

She had read that victims of the white plague always talk in this cheerful way about themselves, and she worked on without replying.

"If I were here—in the valley—you and I could ride together now and then, and you could show me all the trails. Why not let me come here and board? I'm going to ask your mother if I may not do so."

"Of course you can come here," she said when she saw he was in earnest. "Mother will be glad to have you, although our ranch isn't a bit pretty. Perhaps father will send you out with one of the rangers as a fireguard. I'll ask him tonight."

"I wish you would. I like these foresters—what I've seen of them. I wouldn't mind serving under a man like Landon. He's fine."

Upon this pleasant conference Cliff Belden unexpectedly burst. Pushing the door open with a slam, he confronted Berry with dark and angry face.

"Why, Cliff, where did you come from?" she asked, rising in some confusion. "I didn't hear you ride up."

"Apparently not," he sneeringly answered. "I reckon you were too much occupied."

She tried to laugh away his black mood. "That's right, I was. I'm chief cook today. Come in and sit down. Mother's gone to town, and I'm playing her part," she explained, ignoring his sullen displeasure. "Cliff, this is Mr. Norcross, who is visiting Uncle Joe. Mr. Norcross, shake hands with Mr. Belden." She made this introduction with some awkwardness, for her lover's failure to even say "Howdy" informed her that his jealous heart was aflame, and she went on quickly. "Mr. Norcross dropped in on his way to the postoffice, and I'm collecting a snack for him."

Recognizing Belden's claims upon the girl, Wayland rose. "I must be going. It's a long ride over the hill."

"Come again soon," urged Berrie. "Father wants to see you."

"Thank you. I will look in very shortly," he replied and went out with such dignity as he could command, feeling, however, very much like a dog that has been kicked over the threshold.

Closing the door behind him, Belden turned upon the girl. "What's that consumptive 'dogie' doing here? He 'peared to be very much at home with you—too dern much at home!"

She was prepared for his displeasure, but not for words like these. She answered quietly: "He just dropped in on his way to town, and he's not a dogie!" She resented his tone as well as his words.

"I've heard about you taking him over to Meeker's and lending him your only slicker," he went on, "but I didn't expect to find him sittin' here like he owned you and the place. You're taking altogether too much pains with him. Can't he put his own horse out? Do you have to go to the stable with him? You never did have any sense about your actions with men. You've all along been too free of your reputation, and now I'm going to take care of it for you. I won't have you nursin' this runt any longer!"

She perceived now the full measure of his base rage, and her face grew pale and set. "You're making a perfect fool of yourself, Cliff," she said, with portentous calmness.

"Am I?" he asked.

"You sure are, and you'll see it yourself by and by. You've no call to get wire edged about Mr. Norcross. He's not very strong. He's just getting well of a long sickness. I knew a chill would finish him. that's why I gave him my slicker. It didn't hurt me, and maybe it saved his life. I'd do it again if necessary."

"Since when did you start a hospital for eastern tenderfeet?" he sneered, then his tone changed to one of downright command. "You want to cut this all out, I tell you! I won't have any more of it! The boys up at the mill are all talkin' about your interest in this little whelp, and I'm getting the branding iron from every one I meet. Sam saw you go into the barn with that dude, and that would have been all over the country tomorrow, if I hadn't told him I'd sew his mouth up if he said a word about it. Of course I don't think you mean anything by this coddlin'."

"Oh, thank you," she interrupted, with flaming, quick, indignant fury. "That's mighty nice of you. I went to the barn to show Mr. Norcross where to stall his horse. I didn't know Sam was here."

He sneered: "No, I bet you didn't."

She fired at this. "Come now! Something nasty is in your mind. Go on! What have I done? What makes you so hot?"

He began to weaken. "I don't accuse you of anything. I—but I"—

"Yes, you do—in your heart you distrust me—you just as much as said so!"

He was losing his high air of command. "Never mind what I said, Berrie. I"—

She was blazing now. "But I do mind—I mind a whole lot—I didn't think it of you," she added as she realized his cheapness, his coarseness. "I didn't suppose you could even think such things of me. I don't like it," she repeated, and her tone hardened, "and I guess you'd better pull out of here—for good. If you've no more faith in me than that I want you to go and never come back."

"You don't mean that!"

"Yes, I do! You've shown this yellow streak before, and I'm tired of it. This is the limit. I'm done with you."

She stood between tears and benumbing anger now, and he was scared. "Don't say that, Berrie!" he pleaded, trying to put his arm about her.

"Keep away from me!" She dashed his hands aside. "I hate you. I never want to see you again!" She ran into her own room and slammed the door behind her.

Belden stood for a long time with his back against the wall, the heat of his resentment utterly gone, an empty, aching place in his heart. He called her twice, but she made no answer, and so at last he mounted his horse and rode away.

Young Norcross, much as he admired Berrie, was not seeking to exchange her favor for her lover's enmity, and he rode away with an uneasy feeling of having innocently made trouble for himself as well as for a fine, true hearted girl.

"What a good friendly talk we were having," he said regretfully. "And to think she is to marry that big, scowling brute! How could she turn Landon down for a savage like that?"

He was just leaving the outer gate when Belden came clattering up and reined his horse across the path and called out: "See here, you young skunk! You're a poor, white livered tenderfoot, and I can't bust you as I would a full grown man, but I reckon you better not ride this trail any more."

"Why not?" inquired Wayland.

Belden glared. "Because I tell you so. Your sympathy hunting game has just about run into the ground. You've worked this baby dodge about long enough. You're not so almighty sick as you put up to be, and you'd better hunt some other cure for lonesomeness or I'll just about cave your chest in."

All this was shockingly plain talk for a slender young scholar to listen to, but Norcross remained calm. "I think you're unnecessarily excited," he remarked. "I have no desire to make trouble. I'm considering Miss Berea, who is too fine to be worried by us."

His tone was conciliating, and the cowman, in spite of himself, responded to it. "That's why I advise you to go. She was all right till you came. Colorado's a big place, and there are plenty other fine ranges for men of your complaint. Why not try Routt county? This is certain, you can't stay in the same valley with my girl. I serve notice of that."

"You're making a prodigious ass of yourself," observed Wayland, with calm contempt.

"You think so, do you? Well, I'll make a jack rabbit out of you if I find you on this ranch again. You've worked on my girl in some way till she's just about quit me. I don't see how you did it, you measly little pup, but you surely have turned her against me!" His rage burst into flame as he thought of her last words. "If you were so much as half a man I'd break you in two pieces right now, but you're not. You're nothing but a dead on the hoof lunger, and there's nothing to do but run you out. So take this as your final notice. You straddle a horse and head east and keep a-ridin', and if I catch you with my girl again I'll deal you a whole hatful of misery. Now, that's right!"

Thereupon, with a final glance of hate in his face, he whirled his horse and galloped away, leaving Norcross dumb with resentment, intermingled with wonder.

"Truly the west is a dramatic country! Here I am involved in a lover's wrath and under sentence of banishment all within a month! Well, I suppose there's nothing to do but carry out Belden's orders. He's the boss," he said as he rode on. "I wonder just what happened after I left? Something stormy evidently. She must have given him a sharp rebuff or he wouldn't have been so furious with me. Perhaps she even broke her engagement with him. I sincerely hope she did. She's too good for him."

And so from point to point he progressed till, with fine indignation, he reached a resolution to stay and meet whatever came. "I certainly would be a timorous animal if I let myself be scared into flight by that big bonehead," he said at last.

Nevertheless he felt very weak and very much depressed as he rode up the street of the little town and dismounted at the forest service building.

CHAPTER V.

The Supervisor of the Forest.

NASH, who was alone in the government office, looked up from his work. "Come in," he called heartily. "Come in and report."

"Thank you. I'd like to do so. And may I use your desk? I have a letter to write."

"Make yourself at home. Take any desk you like. The men are all out on duty."

"You're very kind," replied Wayland, gratefully. There was something reassuring in this greeting and in the many signs of skill and scientific reading which the place displayed. It was like a bit of Washington in the midst of a careless, slovenly, lawless mountain town, and Norcross took his seat and wrote his letter with a sense of proprietorship.

"I'm getting up an enthusiasm for the service just from hearing Alec Belden rave against it," he said a few minutes later, as he looked up from his letter.

Nash grinned. "How did you like Meeker?"

"He's a good man, but he has his peculiarities. Belden is your real enemy. He is blue with malignity—so are most of the cowmen I met up there. I wish I could do something for the service. I'm a thoroughly up to date analytical chemist and a passable mining engineer, and my doctor says that for a year at least I must work in the open air. Is there anything in this forest service for a weakling like me?"

Nash considered. "I think we can employ you, but you'll have to go on as fire guard or something like that for the first year. You see, the work is getting to be more and more technical each year. As a matter of fact"—here he lowered his voice a little—"McFarlane is one of the old guard and will have to give way. He don't know a thing about forestry and is too old to learn. His girl knows more about it than he does. She helps him out on office work too."

Wayland wondered a little at the freedom of expression on the part of Nash, but said, "If he runs his office as he runs his ranch he surely is condemned to go."

"Well, you get Berrie to take up your case and you're all right. She has the say about who goes on the force in this forest."

It was late in the afternoon before Wayland started back to Meeker's with intent to repack his belongings and leave the ranch for good. He had decided not to call at McFarlane's, a decision which came not so much from fear of Clifford Belden as from a desire to shield Berea from further trouble, but as he was passing the gate the girl rose from behind a clump of willows and called to him: "Oh, Mr. Norcross! Wait a moment!"

He drew rein and, slipping from his horse, approached her. "What is it, Miss Berrie?" he asked, with wondering politeness.

She confronted him with gravity. "It's too late for you to cross the ridge.

"I told him I wouldn't stand for his coarse ways, and I won't!"

It'll be dark long before you reach the cut-off. You'd better not try to make it."

"I think I can find my way," he answered, touched by her consideration. "I'm not so helpless as I was when I came."

"Just the same you mustn't go on," she insisted. "Father told me to ask you to come in and stay all night. He wants to meet you. I was afraid you might ride by after what happened today, and so I came up here to head you off." She took his horse by the rein and flashed a smiling glance up at him. "Come, now, do as the supervisor tells you."

"Wait a moment," he pleaded. "On second thought I don't believe it's a good thing for me to go home with you. It will only make further trouble for—for us both."

"I know what you mean. I saw Cliff follow you. He jumped you, didn't he?"

"He overtook me, yes."

"What did he say?"

He hesitated. "He was pretty hot and said things he'll be sorry for when he cools off."

"He told you not to come here any more—advised you to hit the outgoing trail—didn't he?"

He flushed with returning shame of it all, but quietly answered, "Yes, he said something about riding east."

"Are you going to do it?"

She looked at him steadily. "Why?"

"Because you've been very kind to me, and I wouldn't for the world do anything to hurt or embarrass you."

"Don't you mind about me," she responded bluntly. "What happened this morning wasn't your fault nor mine. Come; father will be looking for you."

With a feeling that he was involving both the girl and himself in still darker storms, the young fellow yielded to her command, and together they walked along the weed bordered path, while she continued:

"This isn't the first time Cliff has started in to discipline me, but it's obliged to be the last. He's the kind that think they own a girl just as soon as they get her to wear an engagement ring. But Cliff don't own me. I told him I wouldn't stand for his coarse ways, and I won't!"

Wayland tried to bring her back to humor. "You're a kind of 'new woman.'"

She turned a stern look on him. "You bet I am! I was raised a free citizen. No man can make a slave of me. I thought he understood that, but it seems he didn't. He's all right in many ways—one of the best riders in the country—but he's pretty tolerable domineering."

Mrs. McFarlane greeted Norcross with cordial word and earnest handclasp. "I'm glad to see you looking so well," she said, with charming sincerity.

"I'm browner anyway," he answered, and turned to meet McFarlane, a short, black bearded man with fine dark eyes and shapely hands—hands that had never done anything more toilsome than to lift a bridle rein or to clutch the handle of a gun. He was the horseman in all his training, and, though he owned hundreds of acres of land, he had never so much as held a plow or plied a spade. His manner was that of the cow boss, the lord of great herds, the claimant of empires of government grass land. Poor as his house looked, he was in reality rich. Narrow minded in respect to his own interests, he was well in advance of his neighbors on matters relating to the general welfare, a curious mixture of greed and generosity, as most men are, and, though he had been made supervisor at a time when political pull still crippled the service, he was loyal to the flag. "I'm mighty glad to see you," he heartily began. "We don't often get a man from the sea level, and when we do we squeeze him dry."

His voice, low, languid and soft, was most insinuating, and for hours he kept his guest talking of the east and its industries and prejudices, and Berrie and her mother listened with deep admiration, for the youngster had seen a good deal of the old world and was unusually well read on historical lines of inquiry. He talked well, too, inspired by his attentive audience.

Berrie's eyes, wide and eager, were fixed upon him unwaveringly. He felt her wonder, her admiration, and was inspired to do his best. Something in her absorbed attention led him to speak of things so personal that he wondered at himself for uttering them.

"I've been dilettante all my life," was one of his confessions. "I've traveled; I've studied in a tepid sort of fashion; I went through college without any idea of doing anything with what I got; I had a sort of pride in keeping up with my fellows, and I had no idea of preparing for any work in the world. Then came my breakdown and my doctor ordered me out here. I came intending to fish and loaf around, but I can't do that. I've got to do something or go back home."

Arcadian Islands.

The Cross-Keelings are a group of about twenty small islands 700 miles southwest of Sumatra. They form part of the Settlement of Singapore. There are about 800 inhabitants. These islands are looked upon by some travelers as a kind of modern Arcadia. The servants there are said to be among the best behaved in the world, and as there is no money in the island, for all the transactions are conducted through the medium of sheepskin notes signed by the governor, there is not much temptation for thieves. The climate is said to be suitable for those who suffer from lung trouble, though the islands are subject to cyclones.

The Cavalry of the Romans.

Devoted as the Romans were to war, the cavalry was an important part of the army. A great deal of adverse criticism has been passed upon their horsemanship and skill in managing the cavalry. The Prussian hussar officer Warnering pronounces Caesar an indifferent cavalry general and ridicules his arrangements where cavalry are concerned. Caesar, however, conquered all the same. His famous horse, credited with having a human fore foot, was equal to the star eyed goddess herself for victory.

Holland's Water Line.

The famous "water line" of Holland is really the final line of defense which Holland would make use of should she be invaded.

The "water line" is a line about seventy miles long by seven to eight miles wide. It is flooded by means of special sluices and dykes so constructed that the whole of the line can be covered to a depth of a foot and a half in two days.

In the ordinary way this water is drawn from the Rhine. In a case of great emergency, however, the sluices will also let free the waters of the Zuyder Zee. These waters, however, would only be let loose in the last extremity because, being salt, they would do an immense amount of damage to the land over which they flowed—damage which would take years to repair.—London Globe.

Woman's World

General In Chief of the Suffrage Forces of the Keystone State.

MRS. FRANK M. ROESSING.

Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage association, is a new type of suffrage leader. As general in chief of the suffrage forces of the Keystone State she is conducting a campaign for the ballot, which, because of the dignity and common sense that characterize it, has gained the respect and admiration of the entire country.

Sensational stunts that have nothing but their sensationalism to commend them have no place in the Pennsylvania suffrage campaign. Although still in the early thirties, Mrs. Roessing has achieved distinction as both a civic worker and philanthropist, as well as leader of the state suffrage forces. Moreover, her civic and sociological work has always been along constructive lines, with the betterment of evil conditions as the goal to be achieved.

Through the women's clubs of her home city, Pittsburgh, she worked for years to secure better living conditions for women and children. As secretary of the Twentieth Century club and as treasurer of the Playground association she made an enviable reputation both as an executive and financier.

Mrs. Roessing's interest in suffrage came as a development of her active experiences as a civic worker, for she learned early the difficulties of attempting to better conditions for women and children through "indirect influence." She found, she says, that without the ballot even the most earnest workers were handicapped. Therefore she determined to secure the power which it represented for the women who need it most, in her opinion—the women of the factory and mill.

Her success in this task is shown by the growth of interest in the suffrage question in Pennsylvania during the past few years. This year through her generalship the question goes directly to the voters for the first time. Powerful interests are fighting the Pennsylvania suffragists, but Mrs. Roessing does not fear the outcome.

"We will win," she said recently, "because the majority of men in the state believe in fair play. And that is what the question of suffrage finally resolves itself into—just fair play."

THE SUMMER ROOM.

White, Black and Rose Make Stunning Decorative Scheme.

The fad for black and white wall papers grows apace, and the cretonne of cretonnes to use with such wall paper is black of ground and splashed over with great, glowing red roses. Can you visualize the smartness of a country house living room papered in black and white stripes, hung with a few black framed etchings and one or two gilt framed mirrors, and furnished with black wicker furniture and this splendid rose covered black cretonne?

English officers' wives who make homes in India depend for nine-tenths of their furnishings on cretonne. Furniture in the official quarters is of the simplest sort, but twenty or thirty yards of fresh chintz, taken out from "home" and used to cover chairs, couches and tables, turn the austere living rooms into bowers of homelikeness and daintiness. Some of the new summer cretonnes cost but 10 cents a yard—in pleasing patterns too. For 20 cents a surprisingly attractive pattern may be secured, and twenty yards at 20 cents a yard will achieve marvels in the way of giving a country house living room a homelike air.

The woman with a true eye for color is careful about the books and magazines that lie about her living room. A blue book in a gray and blue room may focus all the color and be very effective. Such a book placed conspicuously in another room may be a horribly jarring note. Magazine covers are bright in color, and the cover that harmonizes with its surroundings will happen to be on top of the pile of magazines in the room of the artistic hostess.

New Yorkers and Suit Cases.

Unless New Yorkers recover from the dress suit case habit the subway and other lines may be compelled to put on baggage cars. Either that or the poor mortals who haven't got the habit will have to take to the roof of the cars. The average New Yorker is a terror when he has a dress suit case in hand. He will hurry through the car without missing a shin and then survey the field of action with a satisfaction born of work well done. What people carry in their dress suit cases nobody seems to know, but they don't seem to think they are dressed up unless they have one in their hands.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Household Chatter

The Making of Pie.

The making of flaky pastry is an art not difficult to acquire. Success lies in the mixing and handling of the dough rather than in the proportions of materials used. Recipes for pastry may differ and produce equally good results. Proper manipulation of the dough is the knack that must be acquired.

A rule to be remembered in pastry making is that only light hands make good pastry. Fine white flour makes the lightest pastry, but this is not necessary except for puff paste. Ordinary household flour can be used.

All flours, with their raising, should be thoroughly sifted and aerated before mixing, butter and lard may be used in equal proportions and pure vegetable butters or fats are excellent. Heavily salted cooking butter should be avoided, as it is likely to have a strong taste. Time and trouble will be saved in the mixing if the fat, when at all hard, is first beaten to a cream.

All pastry should be mixed with very cold water. The board and pin should be floured lightly and the dough rolled out with short, sharp rolls; lift the pin constantly and never go over the edges. Pastry should be handled as little as possible, and the first that is rolled is the best. Bake in a hot oven, so that it may rise quickly; open the oven door only when necessary, and be careful not to bang it when closing.

Here is an English recipe for pastry, with directions for mixing it:

Half a pound of flour, four ounces of butter or other fats, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Sift the flour and baking powder well together and add salt to taste. Cream the butter or fat on a plate and divide it into four parts. Rub one-quarter lightly into the flour. When fine pour a little water into the center, use a knife for mixing and make an elastic dough. Flour the board and pin and roll the paste into a long strip. Put on another portion of the fat in little dabs, sprinkle with flour, cut into three strips and lay one on top of the other, pound with the pin and roll out again. Repeat this performance until the fourth portion of butter is used.

The pastry then is ready for use. Roll it out again, cut it in the desired sizes and bake in a hot oven. Flaky pastry rises in layers, air being folded in at each turn.

This method will produce a delicious, light, flaky pastry if the directions be followed carefully.

The Garbage Bucket.

If the housewife, after buying a new garbage bucket, will paint the inside black and then shellac it she will find that it will last twice as long. It will hold none of the odors and will rinse out very easily, not requiring the scrubbing which is taken to keep the ordinary bucket clean and sanitary. Then, if she will fold a newspaper, opening it first to the fullest extent, in wide pleats from margin to margin, and, opening it again, pull it into a circle, she will have a perfect lining for the bucket, which will insure its emptying clean each time it is emptied.

Washing Summer Dresses.

In washing summer dresses of colored linen it is an excellent plan to get a package of dye and put it into boiling water, making just the shade of the dress (test it first). And as quickly as the dress is washed clean and rinse in salted water to set the color; dip it in the dye and let it stand two minutes. Then put it into the starch and hang it on the line in the shade without wringing and iron while it is still damp.

Egg Substitutes.

When eggs are high one hesitates to make white cake, especially if she does not care to use up the yolks for something else. It is not necessary to use egg whites at all. Simply use gelatine instead. One tablespoonful of the dry gelatine equals three eggs. Dissolve it in cold water and add enough boiling water to make a cupful. Beat with an egg beater and add to cake.

How to Treat the Sting.

To alleviate the stings given by summer insects first remove the sting with a needle if it is left in the wound; then press a key over the stung part tightly, thus forcing out the poison. Wash the wound and apply a liniment made of finely scraped chalk and olive oil mixed together to the thickness of cream.

Brass Cleaning.

For brasses that have become tarnished an excellent method of cleaning is to use equal parts of vinegar and salt. Smear thoroughly with the mixture, then let it dry on, and when thoroughly dry wash it off with hot, soapy water and polish dry with a soft flannel cloth.

Planting of Forage Crops.

[Prepared by Kansas State Agricultural college.]

Where a stand of corn has been obtained on a part of the land and it is necessary to plant the remainder to a spring crop, kafir or sorghum is recommended. In southern Kansas kafir planted from June 15 to 20 will mature. If the weather continues wet until the last of June or the first of July feterita maturing from eighty to ninety days may be planted. Freed's sorghum will mature in from seventy to eighty days. Sudan grass can also be planted as late as the last week in June or the first week of July. Cowpeas planted the 1st of July as a hay crop may be removed in time to seed a crop of wheat in the fall. Soy beans will mature if planted the last week in June and millet can be seeded for hay until the first of July.

Scientific Farming

FARM ELECTRIC MOTORS.

Variety of Work Which These Machines Can Accomplish.

A very important feature is that a few motors properly selected may be used to operate all of the machines on the farm instead of having a steam or gasoline prime mover attached to each machine, writes Frank Koester in his book, "Electricity For the Farm and Home." In this feature lies a great advantage of electrically operated farm machinery. For instance, a motor may be placed on a low wheeled truck and connected by means of a belt to a thrashing machine, taking its electric supply from the mains by a flexible cable plugged into a suitable outlet. On the throwing of a switch the motor starts and operates continuously without attention. After the thrashing is completed the motor may then be connected to the baling machine, which packs the straw into bales, while if necessary the motor may be used in loading the bales upon wagons by operating a hoist. At other times the same motor may drive a water pump, wood saw, etc.

It is readily seen that the electric motor can be operated without the attention necessary for steam or gasoline prime movers, which have to be supplied with water and fuel. With all other prime movers, when placed in the barn or hay mow, or beside the stack in the field, the risk from fire is a thousandfold greater than with an electric motor. In fact, an inclosed electric motor may be placed anywhere on the farm without such a risk or the fear of an explosion.

SMALL TRANSPORTABLE MOTOR.

The motors used on dairy appliances and for the various household operations are of such small size and weight that they may readily be carried around by one or two persons and applied to one machine or another wherever needed. Thus many farms can get along with one large and one small motor. As the various farm machines operate at different speeds the motors are supplied with suitable regulating devices, so that the desired speeds may be obtained.

The great advantage of cold storage is not properly recognized today by farmers. By means of electrically operated cold storage systems, butter, milk, eggs and other perishable goods may be saved from spoiling. In many cases, especially with fruit, a farmer is forced to let his product lie on the ground and rot, because the price offered does not pay the expense of picking, packing and shipping to the commission merchant. A private cold storage system would enable him to pick his fruit in season, when the market price was low, and store it until he received his own price.

For such purposes electric ice making machines for refrigerating plants are preferable. The motor applied to this equipment can be arranged to start and stop automatically and will keep the temperature in the cold storage room within a few degrees of that desired.

For irrigation purposes electric pumps are of great service, whether on a large or a small scale. As these pumps work only in certain seasons of the year and at certain hours of the day public service corporations have recognized of late that they are a means of keeping up a uniform power demand on the plant, and consequently energy for this purpose is offered at exceptionally low rates. The motor driven pumps may be stationary or portable.

Large sums are yearly spent for irrigation purposes, waterways regulation and drainage systems and seemingly in almost all cases without consideration for the possibilities of utilizing the energy of the water for generating an electric current which might advantageously be used for farming or rural industries.

Needed It.

Old Chief Singing Hound was a patriarchal Indian on one of the far western reservations. Tourists frequently visited the old man. He had the dignity of a king and a taciturn disposition that belied his name.

One day a party of eastern travelers hunted out the old man. Among them was a young woman who was togged out in the latest style. Her neck was bare, as were her arms. Her garments—what there were of them—were skimpily cut.

She was fascinated by the chief. Fixing her large, calflike eyes upon him, she stared and stared exactly as though he were a griffin or a unicorn. The chief began to show symptoms of being excessively bored. He eyed the young woman from head to foot in a chilling manner, but it did not do a particle of good.

Finally the young woman spoke.

"What a perfectly lovely blanket!" she exclaimed. "I wish I had it!" She referred to the blanket which enwrapped the chief.

Without a word he removed it and tossed it at her feet. He gave her—and her costume—a parting glance.

"You take um," he grunted. "You need um most!"

And he stalked away.—Pittsburgh Press.

VALUE OF BERRIES.

Berries are "good medicine" to tone up the system and every farm should have berries enough of all kinds to supply the family throughout the year—fresh fruit in season, and canned fruit all the balance of the year until fresh fruit is harvested again. Many town dwellers and suburbanites can grow berries on small plots of ground, if they will. On a lot only 50 by 125 feet, with much of the plot devoted to lawn in front of the house, a suburbanite raises an assortment of flowers, roses, gladiolus, dahlias, many annuals and perennials, and besides strawberries and raspberries in abundance. Decide now to plant strawberries and raspberries this autumn, so a crop of the former will be ready next season and the latter the season following.

CORN CULTIVATION.

The Condition and Character of the Soil the Determining Factors.

The amount and kind of cultivation for best results with corn depend upon the character and condition of the soil.

If the seed bed is firm below, mellow at the surface, and free from weeds, shallow early cultivation is all that is necessary, says A. C. Arny of the Minnesota experiment station. This kills weeds as they start and prevents the formation of a crust, thus keeping the moisture in the soil. Shallow, early cultivation may be given with a narrow shoveled cultivator or a light harrow, the teeth of which slant backward. If there are small loose sods or other material that may cover some of the hills, preventing the young corn plants from reaching the surface, the cultivator should be used instead of the harrow.

If the seed bed has not been thoroughly prepared, or if heavy rainfall has packed the well prepared seed bed after the corn has been planted, early cultivation is needed to loosen up the seed bed, giving the young plants a chance to grow, and to kill the weeds. Medium depth cultivation, either before the corn is up, following the planter marks, or as soon as the corn can be seen, followed by deep and close cultivation each way at the time the corn is from four to six inches high, is also good practice under such conditions.

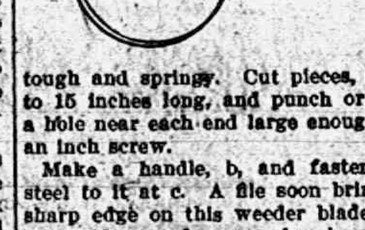
Later cultivation for the purpose of retaining moisture and killing weeds should be shallow. If the soil has been properly worked before planting time or deep cultivation has been given while the corn is small, later cultivation need not be more than two or three inches deep.

After corn is from eight to twelve inches high, deep or close cultivation becomes increasingly harmful, cutting the roots near the surface and reducing the amount of water supplied to the plants.

Sufficient cultivation should be given to keep the surface of the soil mellow and free from weeds. Cultivation beyond this is unnecessary and only increases the cost of production.

Hoop Weeder For Vegetables.

The cut illustrates better than words perhaps, a weeder very superior to many hand weeders now offered on the market. This is easily and quickly made from thin, soft steel, such as found in barrel or pail hoops, although we prefer the steels from used corsets, as these are narrow, thin and very tough and springy. Cut pieces, a, 12 to 15 inches long, and punch or drill a hole near each end large enough for an inch screw.



Make a handle, b, and fasten the steel to it at c. A file soon brings a sharp edge on this weeder blade and each side or edge may be sharpened and a weeder with a double cutting edge be secured.—Farm and Home.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Begin to think about bulbs for planting next fall.

Endive and Chinese cabbage may be sown for fall use.

Cut back Achillea as soon as it is through flowering and it will flower again in the autumn.

Stake dahlias and do not leave more than one or two canes to grow. Too many shoots mean small flowers.

One of the earliest shrubs to flower is the Juneberry (Amelanchier). There are several varieties, but the one most commonly grown is Amelanchier Canadensis. It is sometimes called shadbush. The fruit turns from green to red or purplish and is enjoyed by both birds and man.

Watch for currant worms. They may be killed by spraying with arsenate of lead. Paris green and lime may also be dusted over plants on which worms are working with good effect.

Dig out the tulip bulbs if the bed is wanted for other flowers and lay them under a bush or tree, covering them with a box or board. They may be replanted in autumn and will give good flowers the next spring.

MANHOOD.

Labor, calling, profession, scholarship and artificial and arbitrary distinctions of all sorts are incidents and accidents of life and pass away. It is only manhood that remains, and it is only by manhood that man is to be measured.—Josiah Gilbert Holland.

LIZZIE'S LETTER TO MOTHER:

Dear Mother:—

Awful sorry you are not well. Of course I'll come home if you really think I ought to, but I've got a dandy job and do hate to give it up. I believe it's those everlasting washings that are tiring you all out. Goodness, how my back used to ache over those old tubs!

The lady I board with has something new; it's a power washing machine. She gets her washing out long before the neighbors, never has to boil the clothes, and the wringer turns itself (honest it does.) Her husband helps fill the tubs, she starts the machine and goes ahead with the other work and you'd be surprised how white her clothes are.

I just wish you would have father go to Temple's and see if he won't let you have a machine like that for to try for two washings anyway. I believe Temple would do it for father buys so much of him and he is always ready to accomodate us. After you try it if you don't feel better I'll throw up my job and come home.

With love to everybody, just the same old

Lizzie.

THURSDAY, JULY 15

As a special attraction we offer the worlds greatest actress LITTLE MARY PICKFORD in her famous production, "TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY."

"Tess of the Storm Country" has been classed the world over as Miss Pickfords greatest success. She has appeared in a great many pictures but none of them have called forth the comment that her "Tess" has done.

MARY PICKFORD

In this celebrated Dramatic success Miss Pickford will portray the role of "Tess", a motherless little elf, living with her father in a rude hut on the shores of Cayuga Lake. On account of the sudden and regular squalls on the lake, the vicinity is called "Storm Country", while the poor and ignorant fisher folk thereabout are generally known as "Squatters".

Founded on a great love and a trust that knows no fear "Tess of the storm country" comes close to you. It cheers within your heart. It tells a pathetic story, to be sure, but a story behind which is the shadow of a spiritual purpose, one whose influence cannot be other than uplifting and edifying. Best of all, the play reveals little Mary in a character which will appeal instantly to every one and will arouse the deepest sympathies of all alike A portrayal never to be forgotten.

SATURDAY, JULY 17

Our Big Saturday night program will include the next of the famous. "WHO PAYS?" Pictures entitled "Unto herself alone" not only to amuse, but to instruct; not merely to cause pleasure, but to create thought: that is "Who Pays?" A most noteworthy series of twelve dramas produced by the famous Balboa company featuring Ruth Roland and Henry King. Ask anyone who has seen the first numbers.

AS AN EXTRA ATTRACTIONS WE WILL PRESENT THE KING OF COMEDY

CHARLEY CHAPLIN

The same great comedian which created such a lot of laughter last Saturday night. Didn't we tell you that Chaplain in "Tillie's Punctured Romance" was the best comedy ever made? Is there any one who will dispute this fact? If you didn't see it last Saturday night you missed the only thing of its kind in existance.

Saturday night we offer Chaplin in a screaming comedy entitled "His New Job" if you want to laugh and laugh hard dont miss it. Its a scream from start to finish.

Have you noticed the quality of attractions offered at the Bradley? They constitute the best and greatest that the film market affords. Not cheap subjects. We are paying more for these features for one nights use alone than we paid for a whole weeks service when we were running just a nickle show.

The Management is putting forth every effort to supply the Bradley patrons with every attraction of merit that is produced from time to time. No better pictures are made, Every one of the Paramount or World features that we show have been run in the Kunsky houses at Detroit, the most beautiful theatres in the world, which include the Washington, Garden, Alhambra, Empress, Casino and numerous others. Nothing but the best go into these theatres and we secure our bookings on these features direct from Mr. Kunsky who owns these Theatres also the state rights of Michigan on these pictures. They are the same copies of the films that are run in his houses.

If, at any time, there is a single person who does not think our shows are worth the extra nickle, we will refund your admission. If you are one of the few who think a 'picture show' is never worth more than a nickle, drop in and see one of our programs on our guarantee that will "get your money back if you don't get your moneys worth." advt

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Miss Florence Bryan was given a very pleasant birthday party Friday evening at the home of her mother Mrs. Gurden Garlinghouse. Twenty or more of her young friends being present.

Games of all kinds were indulged in, and a contest of hat making from tissue papers furnished much amusement, prizes were awarded to Valdar Van Dyke for the prettiest hat and Leon Van Valkenburg for the—well he had the booby prize you know. Light refreshments were served during the evening.

Miss Bryan was presented with a large package which on being opened disclosed a raincoat box. After carefully removing about two dozen wraps of paper from the contents of the box a very fine fountain pen was discovered and Florence was instructed to use it diligently.

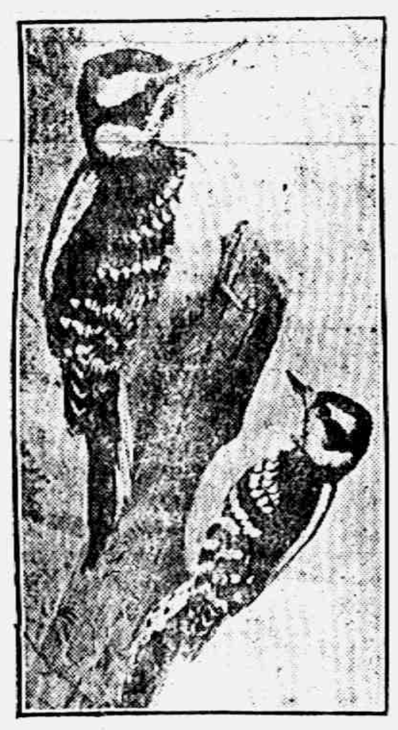
For the Children

Two Members of the Woodpecker Family.



Most children have seen and admired the woodpecker. Doubtless, too, they have heard him pecking away on trunk or limb of tree. What a lot of knocking he can do for such a small creature! There are five or six species of woodpeckers familiarly known in the eastern states. Above are shown pictures of two of them. The bird at the top is a hairy woodpecker, the other the downy woodpecker. They differ chiefly in size, their colors being practically the same. The males, like those of many other woodpeckers, are distinguished by a scarlet patch on the head. An examination of many stomachs of these two species shows that from two-thirds to three-fourths of the food consists of insects, chiefly noxious kinds. Wood boring beetles, both adults and larvae, are conspicuous, and with them are associated many caterpillars, mostly species that burrow into trees. Next in importance are the ants that live in decaying wood, all of which are sought by woodpeckers and eaten in great quantities. Many ants are particularly harmful to timber, for if they find a small spot of decay in the vacant burrow of a wood borer they enlarge the hole, and as their colony is always on the increase they continue to eat away the wood until the whole trunk is honeycombed. Moreover, they are not accessible to birds generally and could pursue their career of destruction unmolested were it not that the woodpeckers, with beaks and tongues especially fitted for such work, dig out and devour them. It is thus evident that woodpeckers are great conservators of forests.

Savages.

In the New Hebrides are many islands whose interiors have never been visited by Europeans, for the simple reason that to attempt to do so would be to court certain death at the hands of the treacherous and vindictive natives. A little to the north of Assam, too, almost within sight of the tea gardens and the pretty bungalows of the planters, is the country of the Padamites, wherein no white man has dared to set his foot for at least 500 years past.

BANISHING UGLINESS IN PORTLAND, ORE.

Work of Children In Transforming Unsightly Lots Into Blooming Gardens.

Portland, Ore., has taken the lead in the ranks of the United States for teaching its children the value of cultivating its soil and the vacant lot, brought about through the co-operation of the Portland Commercial club and adopted by the local school authorities.

In 1912 the first school garden on the Pacific coast, containing two acres in all, was established, giving Portland the proud distinction of originating the school garden idea.

Where was once the eyesore of the city, the unsightly lot and the dumping ground of disease breeding debris has now been transformed into flower and vegetable gardens by the pupils of the various school districts. The result today shows that in 1914 forty-three school gardens varying in size from 40 by 50 feet to two acres, averaging about 100 by 150 feet, covering a total of nearly sixteen acres, were participated in by 8,100 pupils, besides the 3,500 home gardens that were taken care of by the same number of boys and girls on the lots adjoining their homes.

It has resulted in the elimination of the unsightly eyesore, and the school gardens have been developed in Portland to a higher state of efficiency and of usefulness than in any other city in America and has so been acknowledged by the educational department of the United States government. The entire United States has adopted Portland's method of utilizing the vacant lot.

Every school this year has its one or more gardens. These gardens have not only instructed them as to the proper methods of cultivating the soil, but to earn them a profit as well. The boys and girls have been permitted to market their products at the local public market, a section being reserved for their use only, and keep the proceeds for their own individual needs.

Almost every variety of flower and vegetable has been grown by the pupils of the various school districts. Many of the children have taken practical advantage from the lesson learned at school and have started gardens of their own at their own homes.—Town Improvement Magazine.

First School For the Blind.

The derisive exhibition of blind men in the streets of Paris in 1784 led to the establishment of the first training school for the afflicted of this class. It is related that a Paris innkeeper to found a new attraction for a street fair took five blind men, arrayed them in grotesque habiliments, furnished them with discordant musical instruments and bade the people come, see—and laugh. The pitiful spectacle touched the heart of an onlooker, who established a school whereby the sightless might be educated.—Argonaut.

How She Thanked the Conductor.

Mrs. K. got on the street car with her little daughter Sallie, and when it came time to get off the car the conductor obligingly helped little Sallie to the street.

"Say thank you, darling, to the man for helping you off," said the mother.

"Thank you, darling," said little Sallie, at which mother blushed and the passengers roared.—Indianapolis News.

Difficult Situation.

"I've got a tough case now," said the first doctor. "Got a patient who hasn't eaten anything for a long time."

Misplaced Admiration.

The late W. W. Rockhill, who died in Honolulu, had a deep and intelligent knowledge of the Chinese.

"We Americans," Mr. Rockhill once said in New York, "don't understand the Chinese. We misread them as a visiting Chinaman once misread an accident in Broadway.

"As this Chinaman was passing beneath a huge electric sign on which a man was at work the man slipped and fell on the Chinaman's head.

"'Well, well,' said the Chinaman to himself admiringly, as he rose from the pavement, 'Well, well! How will these wonderful Americans advertise next?'"—Exchange.

The Christ of the Andes.

On the boundary line between Argentina and Chile, 12,000 feet above sea level, there has been erected the Christ of the Andes, a huge monument in commemoration of the peace treaty between the two countries, which was signed under the arbitration of King Edward of Great Britain. The statue, which was built through the co-operation of the two countries and was unveiled in 1904, has for a base a huge block of marble, on the sides of which are inscriptions pledging perpetual peace between the two countries. The base is surmounted by a large bronze figure of Christ, one hand holding the cross and the other raised as if to give a blessing.—New York Post.

The Dog's Nose.

The coldness of a dog's nose is due to the fact that it must be kept moist all the time in order to sharpen his sense of smell. And, of course, as the moisture is evaporating all the time, it keeps his nose cold. A dog depends a great deal on his powers of smell, especially in the wild state, and it is because of his keenness of scent that he is valuable to man for hunting purposes. In addition to the olfactory or smelling nerves inside a dog's nostrils the whole black membrane around the nose is very sensitive, but this sensitiveness can only be retained by moisture. Thus it is that when a dog's nose is dry and warm he is ill and needs doctoring.

ADMIRAL'S RANK ANY JACK TAR,

Secretary of Navy Declares Education System Puts Highest Post Within Reach of All.

NOW OPEN TO DANIELS CLAIMS

Defending His Administration He Sets Forth Increases In Every Branch of the Service.

WHAT MR. DANIELS SAYS HE HAS DONE FOR THE NAVY.

Placed thirty-six additional vessels in full commission.

Obtained appropriations and arranged for the construction of seventy-seven more vessels of various types.

Enlarged the naval powder factory so that its output will be doubled.

Increased the number of torpedoes on hand 30 per cent.

Increased the number of mines on hand 244 per cent.

Enlisted 5,824 men in the navy and established a waiting list.

Arranged the largest and longest winter practice in the history of the navy.

Arranged formation of advance base material and exercise in landing for first time.

Equipped submarines and seventy-five naval ships with wireless.

Obtained an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the development of navy aviation.

Obtained appropriations totaling $70,000,000 for ship construction as compared with $26,000,000 in the two years preceding his accession to office.

Has interested Mr. Edison in a new battery for submarines, all present batteries being unsatisfactory.

Saved millions of dollars on contracts through developing competition—$1,077,210 saved on a single contract.

Ordnance department has developed a fourteen inch gun which will shoot farther, straighter and harder than any other naval gun.

NATION wide interest and considerable controversy are being aroused by the review of his two years' work as secretary of the navy made by Josephus Daniels in a letter to Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams college. President Garfield wrote asking for an authoritative statement as to the status and equipment of the navy.

"There are now in active service, fully commissioned, 225 vessels of all characters, which is 36 more than were fully commissioned when I became secretary," says Secretary Daniels in his reply. "There are also 101 vessels of various types in reserve capable of rendering service in war. We have under construction and authorized 77 vessels (9 Dreadnoughts, 23 destroyers, 38 submarines and 7 auxiliaries) as compared with 54 vessels (5 Dreadnoughts, 14 destroyers, 23 submarines, 3 gunboats and 9 auxiliaries) which were under construction on March 1, 1913.

Plenty of Ammunition.

"All the vessels enumerated, those in active service and those in the reserve, are supplied with munitions of war. * * * We have increased the number of mines, on hand and in process of manufacture, by 244 per cent. With reference to torpedoes, the increase has been 90 per cent. By the enlargement of the naval powder factory we shall soon be able almost to double its former capacity, and like enlargement of the torpedo works and the equipment of a plant to construct mines will still further increase at decreased cost the quantity of such stock, and the possession of these plants in times of emergency will enable the department to be in a better state of preparedness as regards the supply of ammunition than ever before.

"The personnel of the navy is at present composed of 4,355 line, staff and warrant officers and 53,171 enlisted men. The navy is today recruited to the maximum strength allowed. There are now 5,824 more men—an increase of 12 per cent—than on March 1, 1914.

Proud of Ships and Crews.

"My professional training as a journalist has always inclined me to the conviction that any officer, within the prescribed limits recognized in the navy, should feel free to express his opinion in regard to matters in the service, and there is not an officer who commands a ship today who could or would say that his ship, without or within, was not as good as it was two years ago or that the officers who command it and the crews who man it are not as thoroughly disciplined, sober, loyal and efficient as they were two years ago or as they ever had been.

"This year more battleships and destroyers have participated in the maneuvers, and for a longer period, than ever before. All reports tell of the enthusiasm of officers and men and the splendid record made by the ships.

"The operation of the fleet since October is one of the best answers I can give to your question as to the navy's preparedness.

Vera Cruz Experience Valuable.

"Some critics have said the efficiency of the fleet was reduced by reason of going to Vera Cruz. Certain maneuvers and target practice were necessarily omitted. The emergency experience, however, was of far greater value, because it gave a demonstration of the readiness of the navy in every department, afloat and ashore, to meet an urgent call.

"For many years officers have written and talked about the formation of advance base material and the practice of exercising landing parties of seamen and marines in the use of this important adjunct to naval warfare. Congress appropriated money for this important plan of campaign, but never until January of last year was the navy thus exercised. Three months after extensive practice had been given for the first time in our navy the same fleet and the same men were called upon to land at Vera Cruz, and in the taking of that city the navy carried out under fire what had been learned at Culebra.

More Efficient Than Ever.

"If the fleet was efficient in any degree before Admirals Badger and Fletcher carried out the drills thus detailed it is much more efficient today, and it will be made more ready every year.

"Upon my recommendation congress authorized the construction of five Dreadnoughts, to cost about $14,000,000 each, against two at $13,000,000 each during the previous two years, and these five Dreadnoughts will mount thirty-six more fourteen inch guns than the two previously authorized.

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY JOSEPHUS DANIELS, WHO DEFENDS HIS ADMINISTRATION.

"Congress adopted my recommendation to give us all the money it could for submarines. It ordered the construction of three seagoing submarines, the largest ever authorized by any country, and twenty-three submarines of the same size and type which have done such fearful execution in the present war. These submarines will cost $16,260,000. During the last two years under Mr. Taft twelve submarines, to cost $7,958,936, were authorized.

Can Build Own Submarines.

"Nobody has as yet perfected a satisfactory engine or satisfactory battery for submarines. Upon my invitation Mr. Edison went down into a submarine and closely studied its every feature. He thinks he has a battery that will meet the need. He has been given an order for two.

"We have equipped the Portsmouth navy yard to build submarines, and by competition between private and government construction it is hoped that every existing obstacle may be overcome.

"For every 100 torpedoes which the department had on hand in March, 1913, ninety-six more are completed or in course of manufacture. Therefore within a few months the supply of torpedoes will be almost doubled. Upon my recommendation congress has enlarged the torpedo plant at Newport, R. I., more than trebling its capacity, and the cost of manufacturing torpedoes has been reduced from $4,202.11 to $3,245.72 each. The reduction has already effected a saving of $326,700.

Has World's Finest Naval Gun.

"During the last two years unprecedented progress has been made in the expansion of our mining equipment. * * * The department has begun the manufacture of mines and in a short time will have thirty-one mines for every nine it had two years ago, increasing our stock 244 per cent. By manufacturing mines at a government station in lieu of purchasing them a saving of $178,750 has been effected.

"The bureau of ordnance has developed a fourteen inch gun that will shoot farther, shoot straighter and hit harder than any gun now in use or known to be designed for a foreign country. Based upon former and current prices in contracts for guns and gun forgings, we have saved $280,125.33.

"Upon my recommendation congress increased the capacity of the navy powder factory at Indian Head. The capacity will be nearly doubled. The cost of manufacture has been reduced 2.7 cents per pound.

"Radio has at last been successfully installed on submarines, and more than seventy-five other ships have been supplied with modern equipment. Three entirely new shore stations have been added to the chain—Balboa (canal zone), Great Lakes, Ill., and Tutuila, Samoa.

"The European war has emphasized the value of air craft. The navy has lagged behind in this instrument of war. Last year I appointed a board of aviation. It recommended the utilization of the abandoned navy yard at Pensacola as a training and repair station for aviation and an aviation bureau in the department. This has been done.

"Upon my earnest recommendation congress appropriated $1,000,000 to begin, upon an elaborate plan, the real development of aviation in the navy. It also approved my request to pay aviators an increase of 50 per cent, and we are organizing a class of capable aviators. Three new hydroaeroplanes have just been purchased.

Enlistment Up to Limit.

"All this unprecedented increase in the navy has been secured, too, without large increase in appropriations by avoiding unnecessary expenditure ashore, by reducing the cost of work ashore, by securing real competition and by economy. When I became secretary ships could be built in only two navy yards. We have equipped or are equipping five additional navy yards. I saved $1,077,210 in one contract for projectiles, $1,110,084 in the purchase of armor plate, and in two other bureaus alone last year $1,800,000 was saved.

"It is a pleasure to tell you that for the first time in years the enlistment of men is up to the limit prescribed by law, and part of the year we have had a waiting list. Since I became secretary of the navy we have increased the enlistment 5,824 men, enabling us to commission fully twenty submarines, four battleships, four destroyers, six gunboats, six cruisers and three monitors, increasing the total number of commissioned vessels by forty-one over the number commissioned on March 1, 1913.

"I regard this as a great achievement, particularly since the navy had not formerly been able to secure enough men to fill the quota. It has been secured, too, without letting down the standard for admission, which has been maintained, and even raised. For every recruit accepted five were rejected because they did not come up to our high standard.

"To what is the increase of our enlistments attributed? The answer is easy: To the establishment of schools, opportunity to see the world and for promotion afforded enlisted men hitherto denied them. In these two years thirteen enlisted men have been appointed as assistant paymasters, five as midshipmen at Annapolis and twelve as ensigns.

Scope For Ambition In Navy.

"It is true that prior to the Wilson administration it was possible for an enlisted man to be promoted to be ensign, but in the four years of the Taft administration only three were promoted, while in the two years of the Wilson administration eleven have qualified. How does this happen? The new policy of education and assistance was put into operation in 1913.

"Now every ambitious and aspiring young enlisted man is given special instruction when he desires it. Upon my recommendation congress passed an act which gives all the positions of pay clerk to those enlisted men who can qualify. This opens 200 more places to enlisted men. It is true today as never before that a boy may enlist in the navy and by the display of ability be promoted to the grade of admiral.

"Not only has the enlistment been increased by 5,824 new recruits, but congress gave us the best reserve bill any nation ever put upon the statute books. While re-enlistments have increased 12 per cent, desertions have decreased 17 per cent. Another incentive to enlistment is the new policy which leaves an open door to young men to retire from the navy other than through the door of the prison and likewise the modern methods of treating men who have violated rules.

"One word more. For years there has been an unsuccessful insistence that congress should re-establish the grades of admiral and vice admiral. I earnestly urged the last congress to create these positions. It authorized three of each. Now American naval officers while abroad will no longer be outranked by officers of nations with insignificant navies."

RIPPER NOTE PUTS WOMEN IN PANIC

New York City Terror Stricken by Murder of Children.

THOUGHT WORK OF MANIAC

Little Girl and Boy Have Been Slashed to Death In the Hallways of Their East Side Homes and Slayer Has Escaped Easily and Makes Threats of More Crimes.

The people of the thronging east side of Manhattan have been thrown into a state of absolute panic by the diabolical murder of two children by some supposed ripper maniac, the narrow escape of a third child and the written threat that other such appalling crimes will be committed.

Mothers are now afraid to let their young ones out alone even in the daylight. After dark the streets, usually filled with playing youngsters, are now almost deserted, except by older boys and girls, and most of these are acting as amateur detectives.

The detective force of the police department appears to be helpless in the situation. Forty men have been working on the case, but have discovered nothing. One New York newspaper has offered a reward of $2,000 and another $1,000 for information leading to the capture of the miscreant.

Girl Is First Victim.

The first murder took place the evening of March 19. Pretty four-year-old Leonore Anna Cohn was stabbed to death and mutilated on the stairway of her home at 353 Third avenue by some one who had lured her a few steps from the door of her home with a piece of candy, which was still in her hand when her body was found a few minutes after the crime.

The second murder was perpetrated the evening of May 3. Four-year-old Charles Murray was stabbed to death and slashed in the hallway of his home at 270 First avenue, almost exactly as was little Leonore. Like Leonore, the boy was a pet in his neighborhood, where he and his little tricycle were well known as the tiny lad rode up and down the sidewalk.

Just before the boy was caught by the slayer and lured to his death a little girl, six-year-old Beatrice Hunter, was grabbed as she played in front of her home at 125 East Fifth street, but she succeeded in wresting herself free and ran safely to her parents' flat. But even this has not helped the police, nor has the circumstance that each crime was immediately discovered.

Makes Horrible Threat.

To the mother of little Charlie Murray the threatening letter was addressed May 6. It ran:

> Dear Mrs. Murray—I really feel sorry for you. I sit in my room here in this neighborhood and watch this crowd of police looking for me, but when the excitement cools off again some evening after dinner I am going out to kill again. While I feel sorry for you, you must understand that I must see blood and cut flesh. The police can never get me. Lovingly,
>
> R. F. C.

The wording seemed so terrible to the mother, with the body of the little ripper victim in the next room, that she fainted. Her husband, recalling the instructions of the police, wrapped up the letter carefully in a piece of paper, and it was taken to police headquarters and examined. It was noted that on the back flap of the envelope was the name "R. F. Crane," with pencil marks of attempted obliteration over it. The entire letter was written in pencil, whereas others previously received in the district were in ink.

After this letter had reached the police more men were added to the large squad working on the case, but Deputy Police Commissioner Lord said he had not a word to give out. He admitted that his men had made no definite progress.

Several arrests on suspicion have been made, but have led to nothing. The excitement on the east side became intense when the ripper's threat became known. Practically the entire womanhood of that part of New York city is terror stricken, but many are doing their utmost to assist the police to put an end to the peril.

Dickens Didn't Know.

Charles Dickens says somewhere in his "American Notes" that American corn bread is "about as digestible as a kneaded pincushion." Pretty nervy, that, for a citizen of a country that doesn't know how to cook anything as good as a johnnycake or corn pone! Corn bread not only is so good that it makes the mouth that knows it water, but, Dickens to the contrary notwithstanding, it is one of the most wholesome "rough stuff" foods there are.—Kansas City Star.

CLAIM LICENSES ARE LEGAL

Owners Hold Officials Issuing Them Should Be Joined In Action.

PORT HURON, MICH. — Attorneys for Wm. T. Dust, William Bedore, Henry Drouillard, James D. Gadd and James Clay have filed an answer to the bills of complaint which came before the circuit court today, relative to the legality of the liquor licenses issued to the Flats resorts, of which the men named are proprietors.

It is claimed that the legality of the licenses should be determined by a court of law and not by a court of equity. It is further claimed that the township board of Clay, together with the township clerk, who are responsible for issuing the licenses, should be made defendants in the suit. It is further claimed by the defendants that they have been issued licenses regularly by the township board and as far as they are concerned these licenses are legal.

INSURANCE BALANCE GAINS

Michigan Department Shows Greater Receipts and Less Disbursements.

LANSING, MICH. — The Commissioner of Insurance Winship announces that the last copy of the second and final volume of his annual report has gone to the printer.

The department reports 81 companies, associations and societies doing business in the state. Receipts from taxation upon premiums were $683,094.52, and the receipts from retaliatory and statutory fees $51,879.10, making a total of $737,073.42. This amount is reduced by a return of $3,094.46 of taxes collected in 1912, but declared illegally collected by the supreme court. The net disbursements of the department were $32,391.32, being not 4½ per cent of the net receipts. The increase of net receipts over the receipts of last year was $21,400.87, and the decrease in net disbursements was $1,681.82.

POSTOFFICE $7,000 SHORT AT JACKSON

John R. Murdy, for 12 Years Clerk, Is Suspended.

JACKSON, MICH. — John R. Murdy, for twelve years a clerk in the local postoffice, has been suspended and an inspector from the postoffice department is making an investigation into a shortage in the Jackson postoffice estimated at $7,000.

The investigation into the disappearance of funds has been going on for several days. Murdy was examined by Inspector Mackey of Lansing. Following the "sweating" Murdy was suspended while a further investigation was made.

For some time it has been known that the mails were being tampered with here. Last Sunday Murdy worked alone in the office and Tuesday morning a search was made of his locker by an inspector. A number of letters, which had been opened, are said to have been found in a pocket of a coat worn by Murdy.

Murdy declared himself innocent and asserted that the letters had been placed in his coat by some other person.

KAISER WILHELM

German Emperor's Reply Fails to Meet the Lusitania Issues.

Even at the beginning of the present war the German government immediately declared its willingness, in response to proposals of the American government, to ratify the declaration of London and thereby subject itself in the use of its naval forces to all the restrictions provided therein in favor of neutrals.

Germany likewise has been always tenacious of the principle that war should be conducted against the armed and organized forces of an enemy country, but that the enemy civilian population must be spared as far as possible from the measures of war.

The imperial government cherishes the definite hope that some way will be found when peace is concluded, or perhaps earlier, to regulate the law of maritime war in a manner guaranteeing the freedom of the seas, and will welcome it with gratitude and satisfaction if it can work hand in hand with the American government on that occasion.

If in the present war the principles which should be the ideal of the future have been transgressed more and more the longer its duration, the German government has no guilt therein.

It is known to the American government how Germany's adversaries, by completely paralyzing peaceable traffic between Germany and neutral countries, have aimed from the very beginning and with increasing lack of consideration, at the destruction, not so much of the armed forces as the life of the German nation, repudiating in doing so all the rules of international law and disregarding all the right of neutrals.

On Nov. 3, 1914, England declared the North Sea a war area and by planting poorly anchored mines and by the stoppage and capture of vessels made passage extremely dangerous and difficult for neutral shipping, so (by?) that actually blockading neutral coasts and ports contrary to all international law.

Long before the beginning of submarine war England practically completely intercepted legitimate neutral navigation to Germany also. Thus Germany was driven to a submarine war on trade.

On Nov. 14, 1914, the English premier declared in the house of commons that it was one of England's principal tasks to prevent food for the German population from reaching Germany via neutral points. Since March 1 England has been taking from neutral ships without further formality all merchandise proceeding to Germany, as well as all merchandise coming from Germany, even when neutral property.

Just as it was also with the Boers, the German people is now to be given the choice of perishing from starvation with its women and children or of relinquishing its independence.

While our enemies thus loudly and openly proclaimed war without mercy until our utter destruction, we were conducting a war in self-defense for our national existence and for the sake of peace of an assured permanency. We have been obliged to adopt a submarine warfare to meet the declared intentions of our enemies and the method of warfare adopted by them in contravention of international law.

With all its efforts in principle to protect neutral life and property from damage as much as possible, the German government recognized unreservedly in its memorandum of Feb. 4 that the interests of neutrals might suffer from the submarine warfare. However, the American government will also understand and appreciate that in the fight for existence which has been forced upon Germany by its adversaries and announced by them it is the sacred duty of the imperial government to do all within its power to protect and save the lives of German subjects.

If the imperial government were derelict in these, its duties, it would be guilty before God and history of the violation of those principles of highest humanity which are the foundation of every national existence.

The case of the Lusitania shows with horrible clearness to what jeopardizing of human lives the manner of conducting war employed by our adversaries leads. In the most direct contradiction of international law all distinctions between merchantmen and war vessels have been obliterated by the order to British merchantmen to arm themselves and to ram submarines, and the promise of rewards therefor, and neutrals who use merchantmen as travelers thereby have been exposed in an increasing degree to all the dangers of war.

If the commander of the German submarine which destroyed the Lusitania had caused the crew and passengers to take to the boats before firing a torpedo this would have meant the sure destruction of his own vessel. After the experiences in sinking much smaller and less seaworthy ships it was to be expected that a mighty ship like the Lusitania would remain above water long enough even after the torpedoing to permit passengrs to enter the ship's boats.

Circumstances of a very peculiar kind, especially the presence on board of large quantities of highly explosive materials, defeated this expectation.

In addition it may be pointed out that if the Lusitania had been spared thousands of cases of munitions would have been sent to Germany's enemies and thereby thousands of German mothers and children robbed of breadwinners.

In the spirit of friendship wherewith the German nation has been imbued toward the Union and its inhabitants since the earliest days of its existence, the imperial government will always be ready to do all it can during the present war also to prevent the jeopardizing of lives of American citizens.

The imperial government, therefore, repeats the assurances that American ships will not be hindered in the prosecution of legitimate shipping and the lives of American citizens in neutral vessels shall not be placed in jeopardy.

In order to exclude any unforeseen dangers to American passenger steamers, made possible in view of the conduct of maritime war by Germany's adversaries, German submarines will be instructed to permit the free and safe passage of such passenger steamers when made recognizable by special markings and notified a reasonable time in advance.

The imperial government, however, confidently hopes that the American government will assume to guarantee that these vessels have no contraband on board, details of arrangements for the unhampered passage of these vessels to be agreed upon by the naval authorities on both sides.

In order to furnish adequate facilities for travel across the Atlantic for American citizens, the German government submits for consideration a proposal to increase the number of available steamers by installing in passenger service a reasonable number of neutral steamers under the American flag, the exact number to be agreed upon under the same conditions as the above mentioned American steamers.

The imperial government believes it can assume that in this manner adequate facilities for travel across the Atlantic ocean can be afforded American citizens. There would, therefore, appear to be no compelling necessity for American citizens to travel to Europe in time of war on ships carrying an enemy flag.

In particular the imperial government is unable to admit that American citizens can protect an enemy ship through the mere fact of their presence on board.

Germany merely followed England's example when she declared part of the high sea an area of war. Consequently, accidents suffered by neutrals on enemy ships in this area of war cannot well be judged differently from accidents to which neutrals are at times exposed at the seat of war on land when they betake themselves into dangerous localities in spite of previous warnings.

If, however, it should not be possible for the American government to acquire an adequate number of neutral passenger steamers, the imperial government is prepared to interpose no objections to the placing under the American flag by the American government of four enemy passenger steamers for passenger traffic between North America and England.

Assurances of "free and safe" passage for American passenger steamers would extend to apply under the identical pre-conditions to these formerly hostile passenger steamers.

The President of the United States has declared his readiness, in a way deserving of thanks, to communicate and suggest proposals to the government of Great Britain with particular reference to the alteration of maritime war. The imperial government will always be glad to make use of the good offices of the President and hopes that his efforts in the present case, as well as in the direction of the lofty ideal of the freedom of the seas, will lead to an understanding.

The undersigned requests the ambassador to bring the above to the knowledge of the American government and avails himself of the opportunity to renew to his excellency the assurances of his most distinguished consideration.

Berlin, July 8. VON JAGOW.

WITMUSS WAS POISON VICTIM DOCTORS SAY

So Far State Has Shown No Motive in Death.

SAGINAW, MICH. — The examination of MrMss. Rose Schmidt Witmuss and her boarder, Frank Dworalowski, on the charge of slaying C. A. Witmuss, the former's husband, with poison, was started in Recorder W. H. Martin's court.

Drs. G. W. Stewart and J. D. Bruce, physicians attending Witmuss before his death on June 21 and who performed an autopsy the evening he died, said they suspected poisoning while treating the man, also they were positive death was due to poisoning. The doctors said that during their visits Witmuss' relatives were sometimes in the house and made statements that the dead man had been "given something."

Prosecuting Attorney B. J. Vincent conducted the examination, but failed to bring out a motive. Attorney F. L. Travers for Mrs. Wittmus directed his questioning to show that she was attentive to her husband, that his illness started from natural causes, that she first called a doctor and that the suspicion of poisoning was directed by Witmuss' father and brother and that they were not friendly to her.

NEW U.S. NOTE BEING DRAFTED

Reply to Germany to Stand Firm For Sea Rights.

WILSON WILL DECIDE POLICY

Lansing Is Outlining Answer That Will Insist on Protection For Neutrals—German Ambassador Arranges For Conference With Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Work was begun by Secretary Lansing on the draft of a note to be sent to the German government expressing the attiture which the United States will take toward Germany's submarine warfare as it affects the rights of neutrals. When it is completed there will be a consultation between Secretary Lansing and President Wilson, who will decide the policy to be pursued.

No intimation is obtainable as to the course the American government will follow, but there is every indication in official circles that the relations between Germany and the United States have become so strained as to make it necessary to weigh carefully the phraseology of the next communication and to measure fully the responsibility and consequences.

Will Not Surrender Rights.

That there is to be no surrender of American rights in the new notes virtually is certain, according to the view taken by officials and it also is assured that the German proposals for the immunity of American passenger ships not carrying contraband will be rejected. Just what steps will be taken by the United States as a result of Germany's failure to disavow the sinking of the Lusitania is uncertain. It is this issue—the loss of 100 American lives for which Germany has disclaimed responsibility—that has brought the situation to a critical point.

It had been arranged that Secretary Lansing should go to Cornish, N. H., for a conference with the president as soon as the note had been examined carefully here and the secretary has prepared a draft of the reply. It may be, however, that the president will decide to return to Washington instead.

Bernstorff to See Lansing.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador here, will call in Secretary Lansing in a day or two to learn informally the attitude of the United States toward the German reply. It is understood that he has asked for an engagement to discuss the situation and is to be received by the secretary just as soon as the latter has examined the note carefully and has made up his mind on what policy should be pursued.

So far as is known the German ambassador will make his call without specific instructions from his government, merely following the customs of diplomats when notes have been exchanged, to learn the attitude of the recipient government and what may be expected as the next step in the correspondence. That there are to be no informal negotiations, however, on the subject has been made plain.

FULL TEXT OF GERMAN REPLY.

BERLIN — Via London — The text of the German note in reply to that of the United States regarding the sinking of the Lusitania and submarine warfare follows:

The undersigned has the honor to make the following reply to his excellency Ambassador Gerard to the note of the 10th ultimo re the impairment of American interests by the German submarine war.

The imperial government learned with satisfaction from the note how earnestly the government of the United States is concerned in seeing the principles of humanity realized in the present war. Also this appeal finds ready echo in Germany, and the imperial government is quite willing to permit its statements and decisions in the present case to be governed by the principles of humanity, just as it has done always.

The imperial government welcomed with gratitude when the American government in the note of May 15 itself recalled that Germany had always permitted itself to be governed by the principles of progress and humanity in dealing with the law of maritime war.

Since the time when Frederick the Great negotiated with John Adams, Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson the treaty of friendship and commerce of Sept. 9, 1785, between Prussia and the republic of the west, German and American statesmen have, in fact, always stood together in the struggle for the freedom of the seas and for the protection of peaceable trade.

In the international proceedings which since have been conducted for the regulation of the laws of maritime war Germany and America have jointly advocated progressive principles, especially the abolishment of the right of capture at sea and the protection of the interests of neutrals.

HOLT SCHOOLED IN BOMB MAKING

Practiced Work of Destruction In Bungalow on Long Island.

HEALTH POOR, HIS EXCUSE.

Man Who Shot Morgan and Then Ended Life Practiced Target Shooting. Acid Eaten Lead Pencils Used to Stir Deadly Mixture—Match Heads Used in Capitol Bomb.

New York.—Positive evidence showing that Frank Holt, who shot J. Pierpont Morgan and then ended his life in the Mineola (N. Y.) jail, had a secret storehouse for his explosives and that he experimented there with bombs and also practiced revolver shooting was discovered on Long Island.

A little bungalow on the outskirts of Central Park, a secluded hamlet six miles from Syosset and about twelve miles from Glen Cove, is where Holt, under the pseudonym of Totten, conducted his experiments. He left there on the morning of Friday, July 2.

Photos by American Press Association.

HOLT AND MR. MORGAN.

That night the capitol in Washington was dynamited, and the next morning the financier was attacked.

Chief Constable McCahill of Glen Cove, who had been scouring Long Island ever since Mr. Morgan was shot, heard that there had been a lot of gossip about Central Park concerning a strange man who had rented a tiny bungalow which stands in a thick clump of pine trees on the outskirts of the hamlet.

McCahill learned this man, tall, smooth shaved and with a receding chin, alighted from a train at Central Park and approached Richard Russell, a resident of the place. He asked if Russell could tell him where he could find Louis Ott, a real estate man of the village. Ott was not about at the time, so the stranger, who volunteered to Russell that his name was Hendricks and that he was an invalid, strolled about the village until the real estate man returned. To Ott he said:

"I am in very poor health, and my doctor has ordered me to a quiet place in the country. I would like a little cottage of some sort where I could have absolute rest and do some literary work. Who owns that small bungalow down there in the pines?"

Ott told him that a Mr. Arnold of Brooklyn owned the place and would rent it. So the stranger, now giving his name as Totten, engaged the bungalow for two weeks. He had with him a suit case the day he talked to Ott.

The few people who live thereabout naturally were interested in the newcomer. They noticed that each day he would start out, carrying his suit case in a way that indicated it was empty. He would return with the bag seemingly weighted down.

The banging of a revolver attracted the neighbors' attention, too, and they saw "Totten" firing at a target, which he placed at various distances ranging from ten feet to 100 yards.

When Constable McCahill heard this story from Ott he and Constable John Thompson of Oyster Bay drove over to Central Park and examined the place.

Their first glance at the interior was sufficient to show them that the place had been used as a bomb factory or at least as an experimental laboratory for the making of bombs. About the floors were scattered thousands of match sticks from which the heads had been cut. There were also dozens of full boxes of matches in a complete condition. It will be remembered that in his first confession Holt explained that he used match heads in making the capitol bomb.

Then, too, the constables found several acid eaten lead pencils, apparently used to stir a mixture of some sort of acid, and a tablecloth in which several great holes had been eaten by acid.

SUNDAY'S A "DAY OFF."

For Prisoners In Kansas City Jail Colony.

Kansas City, Mo.—Prisoners who have families and who are confined at the municipal farm at Leeds are to be allowed to go home to spend Sundays with their families, provided they can be trusted.

The Sunday paroles will be granted by J. O. Stutsman, superintendent at the farm. The men who will be paroled will go home after finishing their work on Saturday and will return in time to begin on Monday morning.

The paroles will depend entirely on a merit system. If the plan works successfully it may be extended to trustworthy men who are not married.

Carp Comes When Called.

Sandusky, O.—Theodore Sharp, a fisherman, claims to be the owner of the only educated carp in existence. Sharp says the carp, which weighs nearly forty pounds and when out of the water resembles to a marked degree a fat hog, will come to him when he whistles, that it will eat out of his hand and that when he is out in a boat will follow him around, swimming close along near the surface.

SPECIAL MEETING OF BOARD OF COMMERCE.

Called to Consider the Locating of a Condensory Plant Here.

A special meeting of the Board of Commerce was called Tuesday evening to consider the proposition of locating in Tecumseh a condensery to manufacture condensed milk.

Mr. H. H. Ham and Chas. Hodges of Wauseon, O. were in town and met the Board. Mr. Ham is a practical man in his line and has been interested in the business for several years having already built several plants. As proposed it is the desire of these gentlemen to locate a plant in Tecumseh. About an acre and a half of ground would be necessary located along the river so that direct severage could be arranged for. Wells would be sunk for the water supply to be used.

A building two stories high, 260 ft. long by 60 or 70 ft. wide would be required. No bonus is asked, but the plan is to sell the necessary amount of stock to erect the buildings, buy land and put the plant in operation. Fifty-five per cent. of the stock to be taken in Tecumseh, the balance to be placed by the Wauseon men, thus leaving the controlling interest in the plant at home.

Mr. Ham addressed the meeting and went into details in regard to the plan, submitting figures and facts. The factory if located here would give the farmers in this community a good market for their milk.

The matter was left in the hands of the executive committee who were instructed to look the matter up in detail and report.

TECUMSEH'S FOURTH BARGAIN DAY

The weather man seems to be inclined to weep on our Wednesday bargain days, he was however on Wednesday a little bit more considerate of our pleasures and give us only a slight shower in the afternoon holding off with the rain until late in the evening giving our friends a chance to reach home in safety. A great many people availed themselves of the opportunity of taking advantage of the bargains offered by our merchants. During the day a good many shoppers were in town but the real crowd were in for the evening.

Our main street was lined with rigs and autos and our merchants were kept busy until a late hour taking care of the trade. On the four corners the band stand was erected and a trained animal show consisting of dogs cats, rats and squirrels occupied the stand. Many very good stunts were pulled off by these animals and were much enjoyed alike by old and young. The band occupied seets near this show and gave a were fine program between the hours of 7 to 9 which was very much apppreciated. The singing by John Pennington was exceptionally good and much enjoyed by every one.

Taking everything into consideration the day was a pronounced success

NEW YORK BOASTS OF BEST ROGUES' GALLERY

Crooks to Number of 10,000 Carefully Indexed.

New York.—This city now has the most complete rogues' gallery in the world. Such is the proud boast made at police headquarters. It took a year for Deputy Police Commissioner Frank A. Lord and Lieutenant John Allen to lift this town into the rogues' gallery leadership, but they have done it, both say.

Crooks, confidence men, murderers, burglars, pickpockets, gangsters, gun men, to the number of 10,000, are now indexed and cross indexed in the modern gallery. Their photographs are on file, also their finger prints, their Bertillon measurements and a vast quantity of other information concerning them. There are now 150,000 finger prints on record in the gallery, all neatly classified.

At a moment's notice any picture can be found. Suppose a second story suspect is brought in. The detectives turn to the section marked "Burglars," then to the subclassifications. They read "Burglars—A, loft; B, safe; C, plain; D, second story."

The police then look under the proper subdivision where the pictures are kept for the photograph of the man under suspicion.

There are 2,500 pictures in the gallery of "general thieves," men whose talents for gaining dollars dishonestly are too varied to be limited to one particular subdivision. Photographs of 1,500 pickpockets, of whom 300 are women, are on file. In the main the subclassifications and the cross indexing are innovations.

Deputy Commissioner Lord said that he had been unable to recover all the photographs which were removed during the Waldo regime. Many of them he feels sure he has replaced. When the pictures were taken out the records went with them, and so it will never be known definitely to what extent the vast correspondence with penal institutions and other police departments has succeeded in repairing the losses.

The police rogues' gallery was started here by Police Commissioner James G. Kelso in 1870. Joseph A. Faurot, the present head of the detective bureau, and Sergeant Crow are largely responsible for building up the present gallery. Faurot was sent to Paris twice, once to study the Bertillon system and then to study finger print methods.

Birthplace of Chimneys.

Chimneys are modern—that is, chimneys with fireplaces and flues. None of the Roman ruins shows chimneys like ours. There is none in the restored buildings in Herculaneum and Pompeii. Roman architects complained that their decorations were smoked up. A kitchen in Rome was always sooty. Braziers were used in the living rooms. The chimney of antiquity consisted of a hole in the roof. The wealthy Romans used carefully dried wood which would burn in the room without soot. The modern chimney was first used in Europe in the fourteenth century. The oldest certain account of a chimney places it in Venice in 1347.

SATTERTHWAITES STORE ENTERED

Monday night burglars effected an entrance to the hardware store of Satterthwaite Bros. The iron shuttero that protect the west door in the rear of the building were pried loose and a pane of glass taken from the door, so by reaching in the door was readily unbolted. As far as known nothing was taken the burglars evidently being frightened away. The night watch discovered the open door on his round. Dept. Smith was notified and has been searching for a clue

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Dept John Smith was the victim of a peculiar accident Wednesday evening. A large rope had been stretched across the street to protect the crowd from autos or other vehicles, but the Williamson auto collided with the rope breaking it the end flying back with great force striking Mr. Smith across the chest, and throwing him some 10 or 15 feet, fortunately no bones were broken though possibly some ribs were cracked. He is decidedly lame and sore however.

THE TECUMSEH BUTTER CO.

The Tecumseh Butter Company churned and shipped over 8 tons of butter for week ending Saturday July 3rd, which is an increase of 2 tons over the corresponding week one year ago.

They have over 1000 patrons sending cream to their Creamery, and as a result of the increase in business have purchased a large Republic Truck of L. C. Hayden to haul the cream in from the surrounding country.

They receive cream at their Creamery every day in the week, and are paying a premium of 3c over the Elgin quotation for sweet cream, and in a short time will buy cream according to quality. Thus giving the farmer who produces a good quality cream, a better price for his product, and the lower grade cream will be paid for accordingly. Every Dairyman should give this quality question their attention, as it means dollars and cents to the producer, as well as the manufacturer.

They also carry a full line of DeLaval separators in stock, and will be pleased to demonstrate at any time, that this machine is not the just as good kind, but one of the best on the market. We have sold nearly 300 of these machines to date, which means nearly 300 satisfied separator users.

LISTEN!

This story is short and a little out of the ordinary, so PLEASE read it all—it's about FIXTURES.

Clothes wear out; so do hats and gloves and other things. Fixtures don't; they get dingy and tarnished and old fashioned, but they don't wear out.

Hence a good many people seem to think the same old fixtures they grew up with must stay there indefinitely, waiting for a fire or an earthquake.

It is'nt so. You owe it to yourself and to your family to realise that entirely aside from artistic considerations, the present methods of lighting are RADICALLY DIFFERENT from those of a few years ago, in their influence on comfort and eyesight—and it will PAY YOU to KNOW whether you are getting adequate and PROPERLY DISTRIBUTED light or not.

When the family physician advises a change in diet, he knows what he's talking about—it's for your good. If we advise a change in type or location of fixtures it's because we know what we're talking about—it's our business.

Just drop in at our office any time, step into our fixture room, designed especially to show you modern electric light fixtures.

YOU CAN'T BE SORRY AND YOU MAY BE GLAD

Very truly yours,

SAM L. CRANE DEAD

End Came Monday Night After Only One Weeks Illness.

Samuel L. Crane, for many years a well known resident of Pittsfield, died at the old Crane home in this city last Monday night at 11 o'clock. Death resulted from acute leptomengitis. Mr. Crane had been sick about a week. Funeral services will be conducted by Rev. Fred Hanscom at the home tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The Knights Templar will have charge of the services at the West cemetery.

Mr. Crane was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Crane, pioneer residents and prominent people of this community. He was born October 12, 1860, in this city. The mother died about four weeks ago. The father died one year ago today. Mr Crane has for many years been engaged in the title and abstracting business, and also has represented a number of insurance companies. The family removed to Decator about a year ago, but had been in this city since the death of the mother.

The deceased is survived by his wife and two daughters, Josephine and Catherine. Mrs. Crane was formerly Miss Leah Rathbun of Dundee, Mich. Sam Crane was a man of Dundee, Mich.

Sam Crane was a man of the finest qualities, well educated and of rare attainments. He was a good citizen in any comunity, interested in public welfare and on the right side of moral questions. In his home town of Pittsfiel', where he spent the greater part of his life, he was highly esteemed, and had an extensive circle of warm friends and admirers, to whom his death brings much sorrow. It was a common thing for Sam Crane to have a kind word and a cheering message for the living. For such inspiration he has made The Republican Man grateful on many many occasions.

Pike County Republican.
